At Los Angeles, Kevin McReynolds' grand slam home run highlighted an eight-run outburst in the third inning and the New York Mets coasted. Dwight Gooden evened his record at 3-3. Mike Morgan, 5-3, took the loss for Los Angeles. Darryl Strawberry opened the homer barrage in the second inning with a solo blast, his fifth. Daryl Boston hit a two-run shot to cap the inning.

SRINAGAR, India (MAY 22) UPI - About 300,000 people gathered Tuesday for the funeral of the slain chief Islamic cleric of Kashmir, and the death toll rose to at least 47 from when security forces fired on mourners who seized the religious leader's body from a hospital, police said.

Authorities deployed combat-ready troops across the tense summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state and maintained a curfew in parts of the city, fearing violence during the funeral procession of Moulvi Farooq.

Soldiers were posted at major intersections and in rooftop machine gun nests or moved slowly along streets in trucks, their weapons ready.

Security forces fired warning shots into the air in the city's Rainawari locality to disperse a crowd protesting Monday's slaying of Farooq and shouting anti-India slogans, police said.

The curfew, however, was lifted in the areas through which the funeral procession was to procede for about 3 miles, beginning at an Islamic school and ending at the Eidgah Mosque.

At the mosque, a ''Martyrs Graveyard'' was chosen for the body's final resting place. The graveyard contains the remains of more than one dozen people killed by security forces since the eruption in mid-January of a popular uprising against Indian rule of the predominantly Moslem Kashmir region.

More than 350 people have died since the insurrection against the Hindu-dominated government began when security forces killed dozens of protesters calling for self-determination for Kashmir, which constitutes part of northern Jammu and Kashmir state.

During the morning, tens of thousands of mourners began gathering at the mosque, while others collected to view the body of Farooq at the headquarters of the Awami Action Committee, the social service that he headed.

Police estimated the total number of people at about 300,000.

A senior police official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said 22 deaths in hospitals overnight brought to at least 47 the number of people killed when security forces fired on thousands of mourners who carried Farooq's body through the streets hours after after he was assassinated Monday.

The official said at least 300 other people were being treated in hospitals for gunshot wounds and injuries caused by baton blows.

Security personnel loosed torrents of bullets into the crowd in the Hawal area of the city when mourners refused to disperse following the imposition of a curfew. The personnel seized Farooq's body, which the crowd had carried from the hospital where he died, but later handed it over to the Awami Action Committee.

There was no word from the government on progress in the hunt for the three men who pumped 15 bullets into Farooq during a meeting with the 45-year-old cleric in the office of his residential compound.

Police blamed the assassination on Moslem separatists engineering the anti-India uprising, pointing out that Farooq was placed on a militant ''hit list'' for criticizing the December kidnapping of the daughter of federal Home Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed. The abductors traded her life for freedom for five jailed militants.

But Farooq's slaying was condemned by the Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, which staged the abduction and is the most popular underground separatist group, and other leading militant organizations.

Farooq, who inherited his position as chief Moslem cleric of Kashmir from his father, was long considered a moderate. He held ambiguous views on the question of independence and advocated Hindu-Moslem unity.

But, following the eruption of the insurrection, Farooq openly endorsed calls for Kashmiri self-determination.

BOSTON (MAY 22) UPI - Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and three congressmen blasted consumer products giant Procter & Gamble Monday for canceling ads on two TV stations in the state that aired a peace group's plea to boycott Folgers coffee.

Kennedy and Democratic Reps. Edward Markey, Joseph Moakley and Joseph Kennedy II of Massachusetts accused Procter & Gamble, the nation's largest television advertiser, of setting ''an extremely harmful precedent'' by pulling all its ads on the two stations for the month of June.

''Such economic intimidation comes very close to an effective corporate censorship over advertising content,'' the lawmakers said in a letter to Edwin Artzt, P&G's chief executive officer.

The 30-second spots, sponsored by the peace group Neighbor-to-Neighbor and aired on WHDH in Boston and WHLL in Worcester earlier this month, urged consumers to boycott Folgers because it uses coffee beans grown in war-torn El Salvador.

The peace group claims Procter & Gamble, which markets Folgers, is El Salvador's largest trading partner in the United States. The company contends Folgers is being unfairly singled out by the group because only a small fraction of the coffee beans it uses comes from El Salvador.

''At stake in Procter & Gamble's decision is the concept of a free exchange of ideas upon which our democracy works,'' Kennedy and the others said.

''Our concern is that television stations might fall victim to intimidation from a large advertiser out of fear of economic retribution for airing paid commercial from small advertisers,'' they said.

P&G earlier this month withdrew all its June advertising from WHDH after the CBS affiliate became one of the first television stations in the country to broadcast the peace group's ad.

WHDH officials said the loss in revenue from advertising of such P&G products as Head and Shoulders, Spic 'n Span, Bold detergent, White Cloud toilet tissue, Citrus Hill orange juice and Folgers will cost the financially struggling station more than $70,000.

The lawmakers praised the two stations for ''their high standard of fairness'' in airing the controversial ads.

''The fact that numerous other television stations have elected not to broadcast the Neighbor-to-Neighbor commercial highlights the economic weight P&G ... can wield in its effort to silence another advertiser with whom it disagrees,'' the letter added.

(MAY 22) UPI - The Ouachita River spilled its banks in Arkadelphia, Ark., leaving at least 40 homes flooded Tuesday and increasing the state's water-borne misery, while Texas officials said flooding along the Trinity River showed signs of easing.

Meanwhile, storms in the South unleased a series of tornados that slashed a 20-county swath across Kentucky. A crowded tavern was leveled in Richmond, Ky., late Monday but officials said no serious injuries were reported.

The Arkansas National Guard was dispatched to Arkadelphia, where the rain-swollen Ouachita River crested its banks, flooding at least 40 homes, authorities said. Officials at the Clark County sheriff's office in Arkadelphia said the river crested Monday afternoon and stood early Tuesday at 21.8 feet, compared to its normal height of 17 feet.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton had declared Garland County a state disaster area after inspecting damage at the resort town of Hot Springs, where 13 inches of weekend rain sent 6-foot swells through downtown streets.

State Police dispatcher Joy Hooker said life was slowly returning to normal early Tuesday at Hot Springs, Ark.

''We're not expecting any more rain until Thursday or Friday,'' Hooker said. ''It will give me a chance to do things I haven't had a chance to.''

The water had subsided enough Monday for virtually all the town's 400 evacuees to return to their homes, sheriff's deputies said. Rangers at Hot Springs National Park estimated damage at up to $2 million.

Hooker said the damage to roads and bridges in the Hot Springs area were expected to be high. ''State Highway 128 is cut in two places, including one major bridge that will have to be replaced,'' she said.

In Texas, a cold front early Tuesday stretched from the Red River, just northwest of Texarkana, to Del Rio in South Texas, which was battered by thunderstorms.

More scattered thunderstorms, containing heavy rain and small hail, were located from west of Eagle Pass to Del Rio to southwest of Rocksprings.

The generally stormy conditions, however, had mainly disappeared by Tuesday morning.

The flood-bloated Trinity River in the southeast, swollen up to 10 miles wide in some areas, had begun to crest at Lake Livingston. The 12 floodgates at Lake Livingston Dam were still spewing a record 100,800 cubic feet of water per second into the lower Trinity River, five times the highest normal volume.

''It appears to us we've turned the corner on our lake level and it's in decline at this point,'' said John Jadrosich of the Trinity River Authority. ''We're still in the process of cresting. When we see a little bit of a reduction in the flows coming into the lake, and a few more inches of decline in the elevation, we'll be prepared to begin cutting back in the releases.''

Downstream, the water releases forced by nearly three weeks of torrential rain farther north have immersed some homes under water that is not expected to recede for weeks or even months.

Health officials warned there will be a heightened rabies risk this summer because wild animals living along rural rivers have been flushed to higher ground and are more likely to come into contact with pets.

Statewide, 41 Texas counties have been declared federal disaster areas after recent flooding. The American Red Cross estimates 4,600 homes in seven counties have been affected by the Trinity River alone.

More than half the 210 homes in the tiny town of Dayton Lakes are under water, and the only grocery store has floated away into the woods.

An unstable air mass was keeping Southern weather in turmoil, with thunderstorms scattered from the Florida Panhandle to North Carolina.

In Kentucky a series of five tornados swept through the Bluegrass area in the east-central part of the state Monday night, destroying buildings and dumping almost 3 inches of rain.

''It was actually covered in about a 20-county area in eastern central Kentucky,'' said National Weather Service Meteorologist Robert Szappanos in Lexington. ''It looks like about five confirmed and three unconfirmed tornados.''

One twister leveled a crowded Richmond tavern and damaged a farm structure and a publishing house at about 7 p.m., but amazingly no serious injuries were reported, City Manager Ed Worley said.

''Apparently, someone came into the building just seconds before it hit and said there was funnel cloud heading for the building and everyone started scurrying and somehow they got out.''

About 40 people were in the restaurant when the twister struck, Worley said.

Two more tornados were reported at Union City and Morehead, which along with Richmond, are all located in Madison County. A fourth twister touched down at Alton in southern Franklin County and a fifth destroyed a home near Clay City.

Franklin County in northern Kentucky reported receiving 2.8 inches of rain in one hour period and authorities were worried about flash flooding.

Montgomery County officials reported all creeks and streams were over their banks and about 8 feet of water covered area roads near Stepstone.

In the Midwest, partly cloudy skies predominated with early morning temperatures ranging from 48 in Chicago to 55 in St. Louis.

On the West Coast, light showers continued in the Pacific Northwest and Northern California. The moisture also was spreading into Idaho.

Rain began to fall along the north coast of California Monday night as the leading edge of an unseasonably cold air mass, accompanied by moderate rainfall, moved into the state.

Western Montana had a few scattered showers Monday night, but for the most part, the state was clear.

BEIJING (MAY 22) UPI - The editor of a south China newspaper who supported last spring's democracy movement fled the country and was stripped of his party post, according to an official report reaching the capital Tuesday.

Cheng Kai, former editor and Communist Party secretary of the state-run Hainan Daily, ''made severe political mistakes'' and has been fired in absentia, the newspaper said.

Cheng formerly worked as a reporter for the state broadcasting station and the Yangcheng Evening News in southern Guangdong province before becoming chief editor of the Hainan Daily in 1988.

The report said Cheng has been expelled from the party and dismissed from his posts since he fled China for an unidentified foreign country.

A spokeswoman for the southern daily contacted by telephone from Beijing would not elaborate on Cheng's activities during last year's student-led protests, which spread nationwide until they were crushed by the Chinese army June 4.

''During last year's turmoil and counterrevolutionary rebellion, Cheng Kai made severe mistakes in guiding public opinion and added fuel to the flames. Cheng had severe economic problems and a corrupt lifestyle during his tenure as editor of the Hainan Daily.''

Cadres and staff members of the Hainan Daily expressed indignation at Cheng's behavior in betraying the party and the country and damaging national integrity, the spokeswoman said, quoting Tuesday's edition. Copies of the newspaper take several days to reach Beijing.

Cheng adds to the growing list of editors and reporters who have been dismissed from their posts over their sympathetic coverage of last year's massive protests for greater freedom.

The hard-line government has clamped down on the official press since the crackdown, suspending, and in some cases, imprisoning those judged disloyal to the regime. The chief editors of the Legal Daily and the Art and Literature Gazette are among those who have been replaced.

JERUSALEM (MAY 22) UPI - The military Tuesday enforced a curfew in the occupied territories to prevent a third day of violence following the killings of seven Palestinian workers by an Israeli posing as a soldier.

The army and police increased their forces throughout Arab East Jerusalem, the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and Arab cities in Israel to prevent more disturbances.

Despite the precautions, several stone-throwing incidents and attacks were reported. But by midday, the level of violence was substantially lower than Monday.

Shmuel Goren, the senior government official who oversees the territories, told Army Radio he hoped the situation would remain calm.

''The amount (of violence) was very high on the first day. Yesterday it was less,'' he said. ''We hope this trend will continue and the calm will continue.''

Nearly 1 million Arab residents of the occupied territories, including the entire Gaza Strip, remained under curfew. Shops remained closed and many workers stayed home, observing the third day of general strike called to protest the slayings of seven Arab workers Sunday.

The killings of the seven workers set off a rash of violence in the territories and Arab communities in Israel. Israeli leaders, in a rare show of unanimity, strongly condemned the killings and appealed for restraint.

Since the Sunday morning shootings, 11 Palestinians have been killed and hundreds wounded in clashes with soldiers and police.

In neighboring Jordan, the incident also apparently prompted a Palestinian gunman to open fire on French tourists in downtown Amman Monday, wounding nine French nationals and one Jordanian. Later, demonstrators angry about the shooting in Israel mobbed the U.S. Embassy and clashed with riot police.

Meanwhile, an Israeli army spokesman said a 22-year-old Palestinian from the Gaza Strip town of Rafah died Tuesday in an Israeli hospital from wounds suffered a day earlier.

Palestinian sources said Naji Abu Sabala was wounded during clashes with soldiers, but the spokesman said an initial investigation showed there was no army activity in the area at the time.

A 50-year-old resident of the West Bank town of Hebron also died Tuesday. Palestinians attributed the death to tear gas exposure the previous day, but the army said the Abu Kabir Pathological Institute determined he had died of a heart attack.

In addition to the seven workers killed in Rishon Le Zion, at least 672 Palestinians have been killed by Israeli soldiers or civilians since the start of the 29-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation.

In the West Bank, three Arabs were wounded by gunfire Tuesday in clashes, Palestinian sources said. Stone-throwing incidents also wre reported in the Jerusalem's Old City and the village of Isawiya, which is within the municipal boundaries, they said. Five people also were reported injured during disturbances in the West Bank overnight, the sources said.

In the village of Batir outside Jerusalem, stones were placed on the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem railway tracks, police said.

Monday, the suspect in Sunday's killings of the Arab workers, Ami Popper, 21, was ordered held for 15 days and to undergo psychiatric examination. The suspect allegedly opened fire at Arab workers at an intersection outside Rishon Le Zion, south of Tel Aviv, on Sunday, killing seven and wounding nine.

In Israeli Arab towns and villages Tuesday, shops opened and workers returned to their jobs after a one-day strike and disturbances, including a day of violence focused in the largest Israeli Arab town, Nazareth. During the past 24-hour period, police in northern Israel arrested more than 45 suspects in connection with unrest and agitation, including the wife of Nazareth's mayor.

Police, however, remained on alert and reported several instances of violence and unrest, including suspected arson of fields and norests.

In the Bedouin town of Laqiya, east of Beer Sheva, violence also erupted Tuesday when youngsters threw stones and burned tires, Army Radio reported.

Israeli military leaders say the casualties will NO doubt increase in the occupied territories, where Arabs are angry about the slaying of seven Arabs by an expelled Israeli soldier. Israeli forces killed three residents of the Gaza Strip and wounded more than 170 others during protest demonstrations yesterday.

Jordanian riot police forced back about 60-thousand Palestinian and Jordanian demonstrators who tried to storm the U-S Embassy complex in Amman yesterday. Witnesses report an undetermined number of injuries among the demonstrators... and an undetermined number of arrests.

In Washington, the State Department says it is disturbed by the wholesale use of force by the Israeli army in putting down demonstrations. A State Department spokesman also indirectly criticized the Israeli government for refusing to join the peace process... contributing to the possibility for violence in the occupied territories.

Red Cross officials in Texas estimate the Trinity River swamped 46-hundred homes... and more flooding is possible. Floodwaters are still rising in some parts of Arkansas, but the water subsided enough yesterday for most of 400 evacuees to return to their homes in Hot Springs.

A tornado touched down in a shopping center in Richmond, Kentucky, last night. The twister destroyed a lounge and damaged other buildings. There are NO reports of injuries. City Manager Ed Worley says customers of the lounge fled just moments before the tornado flattened it.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (MAY 22) UPI - At least 60 bodies were recovered and 141 victims were rescued after an overloaded ferry capsized in the Sulawesi Sea, officials said Tuesday.

The boat, the Cahaya Macali, was authorized to carry 115 passengers including a five-member crew, but it was packed with about 200 people when it sank Sunday night off the eastern coast of Kalimantan, the official news agency Antara reported.

But a newspaper, Suara Pembaruan, Tuesday quoted a port source as saying the ferry carried at least 300 people. Many of the passengers were Indonesian workers employed in Malaysia, the newspaper said.

Sixty 60 bodies and 141 survivors, many of whom were injured, were found by late Monday, a port official told United Press International.

The official said he believed at least 25 other passengers were still missing and likely drowned.

The wooden ferry was en route from Tarakan to Nunukan, both in northeastern Kalimantan near Malaysia's state of Sarawak, when it sank in rough seas and bad weather about 28 miles south of Nunukan and about 1,000 miles northeast of Jakarta, the agency said.

The boat's captain, who survived the sinking, said his vessel began leaking hours before it was due to reach its destination, Antara said.

Rescue workers continued searching Tuesday for additional bodies along the eastern coast of Kalimantan with the help of vessels sailing through the area, a port official said.

Among the bodies were those of 10 children, including two babies, officials said. Some bodies were taken to an oil rig in the area, and all were expected to be buried in Nunukan.

In Jakarta, J.E. Habibie, the director-general of sea communications, said the ferry owner and its captain would face trial in a maritime court. A government official said the owner and the captain likely would be charged with exceeding the ferry's licensed capacity.

The capsizing followed a pair of accidents late last week near the northernmost Indonesian province of Aceh, in northern Sumatra, where two vessels sank, killing 16 of the 20 people on board.

Also, 13 people died May 10 when a vessel authorized to carry only 60 passengers but holding more than 100 sank near the port of Tanjung Alang on Maluku Island in eastern Indonesia.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (MAY 22) UPI - Twelve senior military officers were executed for their part in an attempted coup against President Mengistu Haile Mariam in May 1989, the official Ethiopian News Agency said Tuesday. Two others were given lengthy jail sentences.

A military court martial concluded after 26 sittings that all 14 defendants were ''accountable for the crime of attempting to overthrow the government by force,'' and condemned four major generals and eight brigadier generals to death at a final session May 19, the agency said.

Another major general was given 10 years in jail, while a rear admiral in the Ethiopian Navy received a 15-year jail sentence.

All 14 defendants were tried with their lawyers present, ENA stressed, and were condemned only after examination of 222 witnesses and 77 documentary submissions.

The court found that the accused had neglected the people's mandate, violated their oaths of office and tried to use the Ethiopian army to topple the government, according to Addis Ababa radio.

The 14 were also found guilty of distributing anti-government leaflets, agitation and incitement to revolt, ENA said. It said the coup attempt had caused instability in the country which still existed.

President Mengistu has ruled Ethiopia since a military coup of his own in 1974 against Emperor Haile Selassie. Last year's coup was the most open attempt to overthrow him in those 16 years and was staged at a time when Mengistu was on a state visit to East Germany.

Mengistu said earlier this month he had survived nine attempts on his life to date.

(MAY 22) UPI - A Justice Department spokesman defended Attorney General Thornburgh from a charge of impropriety by the department's Number Two-ranking official.

Deputy Attorney General Donald Ayer accuses Thornburgh of helping conceal the fact that his top aides failed a lie detector test during a politically sensitive probe into leaks during a Justice Department investigation.

Ayer also says Thornburgh tried to keep the probe away from the Justice Department's internal watchdog unit and then refused to follow a recommendation for a more detailed investigation.

In response to questions about the charges, Justice Department spokesman Dan Eramian said yesterday that Thornburgh had NOT engaged in any coverup.

In response to the conflict with Thornburgh, Ayer submitted his resignation May 11th and will leave the Justice Department at the end of this week.

Leaders of the Nicaraguan Contras say they will resume giving up their weapons May 30th after a delay of about two weeks.

But international observers in the zone where Galeano is camped say he has already shifted back and forth on his pledges. The observers say his several declarations are meant to delay the disarmament because none of his troops wants to disarm.

One Canadian member of the United Nations peace-keeping team overseeing the disarmament said he expects fighting between the Contras and the Sandinista army to resume within two weeks.

He says Sandinista army regulars are massing for an attack on the Contra camps. And many of the Contras under Galeano say they won't lay down their weapons until the Sandinista army does so.

(MAY 22) UPI - All of NATO's defense ministers plan to start a two-day meeting today to help prepare for a NATO summit in July.

U-S Defense Secretary Cheney will be at the meeting in Brussels today and tomorrow.

At a session yesterday, Europe's NATO defense ministers said Europe must assume a greater responsibility for its own defense... even though U-S nuclear and conventional forces will remain on the continent. The ''Eurogroup'' of NATO defense ministers also endorsed a unified Germany within the North Atlantic Alliance.

Archbishop Rembert Weakland says the Catholic Church's anti-abortion stand may be ''too simplistic.''

Weakland issued a 21-page statement yesterday summarizing a series of ''listening sessions'' he held in his archdiocese. He expressed sympathy with those troubled by the church's unequivocal stance... but he did NOT question the church's basic teaching opposing abortion.

The archbishop also said some clergy and church members are concerned by the tactics, ''lack of compassion'' and the ''ugly and demeaning'' attacks on legal abortion supporters by the ''pro-life'' movement.

Weakland noted the church's ''unequivocal position'' against abortion in any circumstance- quote- ''does NOT have the full support of many Catholics, especially of many women.''

Weakland gained national prominence as head of the committee that drafted the bishops' pastoral letter on the economy. He's become one of the most articulate leaders of the church hierarchy's liberal faction.

The Soviet Parliament voted yesterday to pay Gorbachev the equivalent of 64-hundred dollars a month and provide him with an apartment in Moscow and homes in the capital's suburbs and the Crimea... and a few other perks.

That makes Gorbachev's annual income of about 77-thousand dollars well below President Bush's 200-thousand-dollar salary. Still, it's more than 15 times the average Soviet income of about 400 dollars a month.

Gorbachev's new salary stands at four-thousand rubles a month, with take-home pay about 23-hundred rubles... or nearly 37-hundred dollars after taxes.

The Soviet news agency Tass says a draft proposal to provide Gorbachev with a tax-free salary of two-thousand-500 rubles was opposed by many deputies who felt the president should be liable under a new Soviet tax law.

It's NOT clear exactly how much Gorbachev was making before the move by the Parliament... but he said last year he and other Politburo members earned a little less than two-thousand dollars a month in their top Communist Party posts.

TOKYO (MAY 22) UPI - U.S. Treasury Under Secretary David Mulford said Tuesday regulated interest rates have given Japanese banks an advantage over American banks in world markets and called on Japan to deregulate the rates within a year.

Vice Minister of Finance Makoto Utsumi said Japan was moving toward deregulation of interest rates but would not be committed to a time table and did not want to move as fast as the United States proposed.

Mulford and Utsumi failed to reach agreement on the issue of interest rate deregulation during the talks of the Working Group on Financial Markets.

''In the past seven or eight years Japanese banks, which used to account for one or two banks in the top ten in the world, now account for something like eight or nine of the top ten banks,'' Mulford told a news conference.

''This massive expansion has taken place as other markets deregulated much more quickly and Japan has kept a highly regulated market at home which in a sense has given a substantial financial advantage to those institutions expanding,'' he said.

''It is important to complete this process (of deregulating interest rates) quickly to establish a level playing field,'' Mulford said.

''On the fundamental question of interest rate deregulation, the United States has taken the position that after seven years of step-by-step transition, it is now necessary to complete the process of deregulation with the period of one year,'' Mulford said.

Mulford said the regulations which keep Japanese interest rates low act as a kind of subsidy to Japanese banks, giving them access to cheap money not available to American banks.

Utsumi disagreed.

''There is no truth to the statement that Japanese institutions are enjoying an advantage by bringing into the market the funds raised at low cost in Japan,'' Utsumi said.

Still, he said, Japan wants to deregulate its rates.

''There is no difference of opinion between the United States and Japan with respect to the direction of liberalization,'' he said. ''The difference is in the timing.''

Japanese officials have said they are concerned about the damage deregulation may do to medium and small banks.

Mulford said Japan is also reluctant because major banks benefit from the low interest rates.

''The Ministry of Finance usually has one foot on the brake,'' Mulford said.''There is the small bank question ... but also there is the large bank question because obviously these banks have been happy to expand their business worldwide under this arrangement, so obviously there is plenty of reasons why completing the deregulation process is a delicate matter.''

BOSTON (MAY 22) UPI - National leaders addressing an international health conference praised Americans for kicking the cigarette habit but decried increased exports of tobacco to ''new victims'' in developing nations around the world.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., told the World Conference on Lung Health that ''America must never be known as the exporter of death and disease.''

Dr. C. Everett Koop, former U.S. surgeon general, agreed with Kennedy, saying that while smoking in the United States dropped 5 percent last year American tobacco exports increased 20 percent in the same period.

''I do not believe the United States will ever again be a good market for tobacco products,'' Koop said.

''The curve is going down and accelerating. But if we feel good because we have beaten the cigarette industry on its own turf, we must realize that we've driven them to scour the rest of the Earth for new victims,'' Koop said.

Koop called the tobacco exports a ''moral outrage.''

Worldwide, 2.5 million people die each year of smoking-related diseases, most notably heart disease, cancer and stroke. By the year 2050, that toll is expected to reach 12 million a year, a study showed.

Speakers at the conference said that while smoking has declined in this country, tobacco firms have gone to developing countries for new markets, especially Asia.

They said the tobacco companies have been supported in these efforts by the U.S. government, which opposes foreign restrictions against American cigarette sales and marketing.

''Tobacco has been associated not only with disease and death, but also with money,'' Koop said. ''That, of course, is the reason for its special treatment and for its international power.''

Rep. Chester Atkins, D-Mass., told reporters at the meeting Monday that tobacco and its profits are ''an addictive drug for governments.''

''America better stop being a drug pusher if we expect to have any credibility in our war on drugs,'' Atkins said.

Atkins said the tobacco industry is trying to get the Thailand government to lift its ban on cigarette advertising.

The U.S. government, Atkins said, is using ''our tax dollars to force the Thai government to change their laws and give American tobacco companies carte blanche to addict women and children.''

''Carla Hills is supposed to be the U.S. trade representative. Not the U.S. cancer representative,'' Kennedy said.

Dr. Judith L. Mackay, founder of the Asian Consultancy on Tobacco Control in Hong Kong, said that ''for every person who quits in Boston, two start in Beijing.''

''We're simply shifting the whole tobacco burden from countries like the U.S. to poor countries,'' she said.

(MAY 22) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange rebounded Tuesday in moderate trading after three straight losing sessions, boosted in part by the yen's recovery.

The key Nikkei Stock Average of 225 selected issues, which lost 248.67 points Monday, gained 173.25 points to 31,938.30. The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all listed stocks gained 19.77 points to 2,390.59.

An estimated 500 million shares changed hands, compared with 370 million shares Monday. Advances outpaced declines 530 to 402, while 176 issues were unchanged.

Analysts said prices got a boost from active buying of issues which released favorable earnings reports for March. Market watchers said prices also gained as the Japanese yen advanced on global foreign exchanges.

On the Tokyo Foreign Exchange, the yen advanced against the U.S. dollar for the first time in five trading sessions. The Bank of Japan reported the dollar closed at 152.40 yen, off 0.85 from Monday's close.

The yen's advance reduced risks of yen-priced investment for foreign investors, giving a boost to foreign purchases of Tokyo stocks, analysts said.

On the trading floor, large-scale steels, such as Nippon Steel and NKK, ended higher along with non-iron metals. Light electricals and pharmaceuticals were also bought. Some of constructions, such as Kumagaya and Aida, and automakers eased slightly.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices closed sharply higher in active trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange on reports President Bush will extend China's most favored nation trade status.

The key Hang Seng Index, which gained 4.94 points Monday, jumped 40.04 points, or 1.37 percent, to 2,970.87. Utilities rose 21.66 points, financials gained 9.61, industrials climbed 61.12 and properties jumped 68.80 points.

An estimated 1.19 billion shares changed hands, compared with 731.2 million shares Monday.

Analysts said prices climbed on reports attributed to Bush administration officials that the United States will extend China's MFN trade status. The news lifted one of the major worries restraining trading interest lately, analysts said.

They also noted that stocks were boosted by the strong performance in New York Monday and the political calm between China and Britain.

"There has been no major tension between China and Britain over Hong Kong in the past few days, so the market was able to ride the good performance of the overseas markets without being held back," said Anthony Mak, a broker with Citicorp Scrimgeour Vickers Ltd.

Hong Kong reverts to China in 1997 at the end of Britain's 99-year lease on the colony.

Prices on the Singapore Stock Exchange closed broadly higher in moderate trading following gains on Wall Street and the rebound in Tokyo.

The blue-chip Straits Times Industrial Index, which gained 18.11 points on Monday, rose another 7.60 points to 1,578.59. The narrower All Singapore Index rose 3.13 points to 440.84.

An estimated 104.2 million shares changed hands, compared with 71.8 million shares Monday.

Market watchers said momentum from the strong finish Monday carried through. Analysts noted much of the activity was focused on blue chips with institutions and foreign funds concentrating on established issues.

The banking sector was a particular favorite. On the trading floor, Overseas Chinese Banking Corp. (foreign shares) paced the advancing issues followed by Singmarine, Overseas United Enterprises, United Overseas Bank (foreign shares), and Sime Darby.

Singapore Airlines (foreign shares) paced the declining issues, followed by United Overseas Bank warrants, Ming Court, Prima, and Seaview.

In Australia, stock prices closed higher in light trading on the Sydney Sharemarket, ending a string of five consecutive losses.

The blue-chip All Ordinaries Index, which plunged 20.1 points Monday, rebounded 7.4 points to 1,445.4.

An estimated 65.1 million shares changed hands, compared with 133.3 million shares Monday.

Analysts said many large investors stepped to the sidelines to await Wednesday's first-half profit report from Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Ltd.

On the trading floor, News Corp. gained ten cents to $10.20, BTR Nylex added six cents to $2.74 and Coles Myer gained six cents to $7.20.

SANAA, North Yemen (MAY 22) UPI - North and South Yemen proclaimed their merger into a single Yemeni state Tuesday and elected Ali Abdullah Saleh of North Yemen as president of the new state called ''the Yemeni Arab Republic.''

State-run Radio Sanaa said a joint session of the Supreme People's Assembly of formerly Marxist South Yemen and the consultative council of North Yemen also elected Ali Salem Beid as vice president of the new-born nation.

After the election of a five-man presidential council, President Saleh hoisted the flag of the new state and thus proclaimed creation of a unified Yemen.

South Yemen was the only Arab state to adopt a Marxist system of government, while North Yemen was considered a conservative state where tribes still enjoy wide influence in the country's affairs.

Saleh will preside over the presidential council that will rule the new state. He was promoted Monday evening from colonel to general at a meeting held by the Parliament of the north, or Shoura Council, which comprises 159 members.

The new state will decrease the number of Arab League members from 22 to 21. The creation of a unified Yemen will also lead to its entry into the Arab Cooperation Council, which groups Iraq, Jordan and Egypt.

The Yemens were originally scheduled to unite in November 1990. The date was moved ahead six months apparently because of fears that Islamic fundamentalists might try to slow down the unification process, Persian Gulf-based Western diplomats said.

Earlier this year, some 200 East German military and technical advisers in South Yemen left the country after East Berlin stopped paying their wages. Cuban advisers are also believed to have left the country, although some Soviet technical advisers still remain and Moscow continues to use Aden as a port for its warships, according to the diplomatic sources.

Saudi Arabia, an absolute monarchy ruled by Sharia or Islamic law, has privately expressed concern about a unified, secular, multi-party and populous Yemen on its doorstep, thus prompting the Yemens to unite faster than expected to ''avoid any undue pressure from any quarters,'' one source said.

Once a major trading center for incense, spice and silk, the south came under British rule in 1839 and gained independence after a bloody guerrilla war in 1967.

North Yemen became independent in 1918 after years of Ottoman and Turkish rule, but remained economically and politically backward.

DETROIT (MAY 22) UPI - Chrysler Corp. has announced it will extend production at its doomed St. Louis I plant in Fenton, Mo., by seven weeks.

The automaker said Monday the additional production schedule will enable it to complete early 1991 model year fleet orders, especially for convertibles, and provide continued employment for 2,300 workers at the plant.

Extended production at the plant also will minimize disruption of production at Chrysler's Newark, Del., and Sterling Heights, Mich., plants the firm said. Retooling at both plants now will start Dec. 21. Chrysler announced Feb. 3 plans to close and mothball St. Louis I on Sept, 21.

MERIDEN, CT (MAY 22) UPI - Fire raged through four condominium units early Tuesday, killing one woman, officials said.

The identity of the woman was withheld pending notification of relatives, said Fire Capt. Joseph J. Kaminsky. There were no other reported injuries.

Other residents in the cluster of four units in Blackstone Village fled after neighbors spotted the flames and alerted them, Kaminsky said.

The two-alarm fire apparently began in the victim's first-floor bedroom and flames swiftly spread through eaves in the building to two condominiums upstairs and the unit next door, he said.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately determined but was not considered suspicious.

Firefighters were called to the scene at 1:15 a.m. and it took about an hour to bring under control, Kaminsky said. Fire officials said the victim apparently was dead before firefighters arrived.

''On arrival, the one unit where the victim lived, fire was shooting from three windows - two in front and one on the side,'' said Kaminsky. ''The fire lapped into the second floor through second-floor windows and also, due to the roof construction, into the soffit.''

The families in the three other heavily damaged units were staying with friends and relatives, officials said.

(MAY 22) UPI - The Bluegrass state was hit hard last night by tornados. Kentucky officials report that a series of five tornados swept through the east-central part of the state... destroying buildings and dumping almost three inches of rain. Officials say one twister leveled a crowded tavern in Richmond and damaged a farm structure and a publishing house... but there were NO injuries.

Fire officials in New Mexico say there's NO end in sight for a wildfire that's charred more than 27-thousand acres of southern New Mexico. U-S

Forest Service spokesman Jerry Trout says the fire is 72 percent contained... but officials are unable to predict when firefighters would control the blaze. The fire started during the weekend in Lincoln National Forest.

In Israel, security forces are on guard for more violence today in the aftermath of the weekend shootings of seven Arab workers by a 21-year-old Israeli. Yesterday, Israeli forces killed three residents of the occupied Gaza Strip and wounded more than 170. In Washington, the State Department said it was disturbed by the widespread use of force in putting down Arab protests.

A light voter turnout is expected today in Idaho's primary election. The race features a contest for an open seat in the Senate... the House of Representatives... and a three-way G-O-P gubernatorial race. Idaho's secretary of state says he expects 30 to 35 percent of the state's estimated 527-thousand-500 registered voters to cast ballots.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (MAY 22) UPI - NATO allies are rejecting a new Soviet demand that troop levels of a united Germany be limited in the context of talks on German unification, NATO diplomats said Tuesday.

The Soviets want a separate agreement limiting the size of German armed forces, which would then be incorporated into overall talks on conventional forces in Europe, or CFE, talks, the diplomats said.

NATO countries find the Soviet position unacceptable.

''We don't want Germany or any other NATO country singled out separately '' said one NATO official. ''The CFE talks and German unification are two separate negotiations.''

West Germany is a member of NATO while East Germany is a member of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact. Moscow has opposed a unified Germany being part of NATO and has called for a neutral Germany.

Another NATO official said the new Soviet demand for limiting German troop levels during unification talks ''is just another bargaining position.''

NATO defense ministers met in Brussels on Tuesday to launch a two-day meeting of the alliance's Defense Planning Committee, which will help prepare for a July summit of NATO heads of state in London.

The CFE talks in Vienna have been snarled for weeks, partly over aircraft levels. NATO officials have suspected, however, that the Soviets are dragging their feet because they wanted to broaden the scope of German unification talks, a forum in which their leverage is far greater.

The ''two-plus-four'' talks on German unity include East and West Germany, plus World War II allies Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union.

''They have one seat in six at the two-plus-four talks, but only one seat in 23 at CFE,'' says one top NATO diplomat.

The CFE talks involve the 16 NATO nations plus the seven Warsaw Pact countries.

''The two-plus-four talks should deal only with external aspects of German unification, and not German military issues,'' said a West German diplomat.

The Soviets' demand that German forces be limited at the two-plus-four talks, reportedly given to U.S. Secretary of State James Baker in Moscow last week, was relayed to NATO ambassadors on Monday in a briefing by two top Baker aides, NATO sources said.

The current round of CFE talk has focused only on cuts in U.S. and Soviet troops, as well as conventional military hardware.

LEXINGTON, MA (MAY 22) UPI - Raytheon Co. has won a $414 million contract for air defense guided missile systems for Italy. The Raytheon portion of the missile systems will be paid for almost equally by the governments of the United States and Italy, the company said Monday.

Raytheon said it already has received $204 million in initial funding for Patriot missile ground equipment "for the air defense of Italy against aircraft, cruise missiles, and tactical ballistic missiles."

Meanwhile, Raytheon will provide production licenses, technical assistance and other services to Italmissile, the Italian industrial consortium that was formed to produce the missiles, the launchers and other equipment, said Jonna Manes, a Raytheon spokeswoman.

Italmissile, formed by Selenia, BPD and Oto Melara, will sell the equipment to the Italian government.

MINNEAPOLIS (MAY 22) UPI - Homeless advocates say a decision by the Minneapolis Community Development Agency to turn over a duplex to homeless people marks a victory for the poor.

The agency said Tuesday protesters who have occupied five houses and a warehouse owned by the city or the federal government will manage the duplex in return for vacating a city-owned house and the warehouse.

Supporters of the Minneapolis Area Coalition for the Homeless moved into the two city-owned properties and several houses that had been foreclosed on by the U.S. Housing and Urban Development Authority May 1.

Activists said they wanted to call attention to the problem of homelessness that could be helped if many empty houses were filled.

Charles Viebahn, chairman of the coalition and a former homeless person, called the action by the community development agency ''a step in the right direction.''

Jim Gabler, manager of multi-family housing for the Minneapolis agency, said allowing protesters to manage the duplex unit is a ''mini-pilot project'' that his agency has been considering for months.

Gabler said the experiment is modeled after Dignity Housing, a Philadelphia program that provides apartments or duplexes for homeless people and is managed by formerly homeless people.

Gabler said the arrangement was considered temporary.

Another part of the agreement is a city-sponsored trip next month to Philadelphia by community development agency staff and homeless advocates to observe the Dignity Housing program.

The Community Campaign for Housing Now planned to announce a set of standards Tuesday for advocates of the homeless.

Nancy Nagler, coordinator of Community Campaign for Housing Now, said she does not believe there is enough public awareness about the reasons for the occupation of city-owned houses by the homeless. Radical action can frighten the community, she said.

MOLINE, IL (MAY 22) UPI - Farm implement and construction equipment maker John Deere & Co. Tuesday reported second-quarter earnings of $144 million, or $1.90 a share, an increase of 10 percent over $130.5 million, or $1.74 a share, earned in the second quarter of 1989. Sales for the quarter totaled

For the first six months of fiscal 1990, earnings were $222.5 million, or $2.94 a share, compared with $178.9 million, or $2.39 a share, in the first half of 1989 on sales of $3.29 billion and $2.8 billion, respectively.

"North American retail sales of John Deere agricultural equipment remained strong in the second quarter of 1990, continuing the trend we have been experiencing," Deere Chairman Robert A. Hanson and President and Chief Executive Officer Hans W. Becherer said in a joint statement. "Domestic retail sales of our lawn and grounds care products were also higher during the second quarter and first half of 1990.

"North American agricultural conditions continue to be favorable and our outlook for retail sales of John Deere agriculture equipment remains positive. Improved moisture conditions should stimulate demand for our lawn and grounds care equipment and retail sales of these products are also expected to be higher this year."

Deere said sales of construction equipment were higher despite a drop in construction activity in some areas.

Net income for worldwide equipment operations totaled $113.2 million for the quarter, compared to $101.4 million in 1989. Earnings for the company's credit, insurance and health care subsidiaries were $29.1 million, compared with $25.7 million in the same quarter last year.

Deere said it was cautious about retail sales of industrial equipment because of rising interest rates and declining construction activity in the eastern United States and Canada.

"Total construction expenditures are expected to remain flat in 1990 and certain sectors such as forestry production and expenditures for highways and streets should show improvement," the company said.

"Our overall outlook for the remainder of 1990 remains positive. However, inflationary cost pressures and strong price competition remain important challenges."

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - The Senate Agriculture Committee approved a plan to create a mandatory federal seafood inspection program Tuesday but two consumer leaders said changes were needed to make sure the food is safe to eat. At present, only a fraction of the four billion pounds of seafood consumed annually by Americans is inspected through a voluntary inspection program.

Consumer advocates are optimistic a mandatory inspection bill will be passed this year. For the past 20 years, they have been unable to get an inspection bill out of committee.

Seafood is the only major "flesh" food not subject to comprehensive federal inspection. By comparison, the government posts inspectors fulltime at livestock and poultry slaughterhouses.

The legislation approved by the Agriculture Committee would give the Agriculture Department responsibility for carrying out inspections. The Food and Drug Administration would set tolerance levels for contaminants and the Commerce Department would be empowered to close waters to fishing boats if the an area was polluted with dangerous chemicals.

Consumer advocates called the Senate legislation, which has the support of a wide range of consumer groups, labor unions, and the seafood industry, a strong start. However, they objected to a 10-9 committee vote to delete provisions to protect whistleblowers.

"There's no question there's going to be an amendment (on the Senate floor)," said Ellen Haas, head of Public Voice for Food and Health Policy. "I am optimistic."

Haas said the legislation was "extremely strong in consumer protection" but was lacking on whistleblower protection and because most fishing boats would not be inspected.

Carol Tucker Foreman, speaking for the Food Safety Coalition, said the lack of whistleblower protection could imperil support for the legislation. "You either have to have continuous inspection or you have to have protection of those workers," Foreman said. As it now stands, the government would monitor "critical control points" in seafood processing but would not have inspectors in plants fulltime.

Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., successfully sought deletion of the whistleblower section on the argument it delegated too much power to workers, including the right to refuse to work if they believe there is a food safety violation. Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the protections were similar to a 1989 law.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee has approved a seafood inspection bill that would put the program under control of the FDA. Public Voice says the bill "is generally quite strong" but has the flaw of excluding fishing and processing boats.

TOLEDO, OH (MAY 22) UPI - More than two dozen people blockaded the entrance to an abortion clinic Tuesday morning to protest what they said was the death of a woman who underwent an abortion. Several were arrested.

Members of Operation Outrage said they were protesting the April death of a woman from alleged complications from an abortion at the Toledo Medical Services clinic.

Organizer Kelly Hescht said between 25 and 30 people were at the scene at 7 a.m. and by mid-morning four of them were arrested and removed from the scene.

A police spokesman said about 12 people were arrested on charges of trespassing and resisting arrest.

A police captain at the scene said no power equipment was needed to remove chains. A similar protest at another Toledo clinic last fall led to a stalemate because police lacked tools needed to cut through chains.

Police ordered protesters into police vehicles and at least one arrested demonstrator crawled the 30-foot distance. Other protesters refused to move and police summoned stretchers to carry them.

On Monday the Supreme Court let stand a ruling that ordered another anti-abortion group, Operation Rescue, to pay nearly $70,000 for ignoring court orders limiting demonstrations against abortions in New York.

Courts have imposed sanctions and large fines against the demonstrators, particularly those involved with Randall Terry's Operation Rescue, which has organized mass demonstrations across the country intended to close clinics and ''rescue'' the unborn.

Hescht said Monday's ruling did not pertain to the Toledo protest. She said the Supreme Court had been wrong previously and had ruled incorrectly in its decision against Terry's Operation Rescue.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (MAY 22) UPI - Interim President Ion Iliescu, head of the communist-dominated National Salvation Front, won Romania's first free elections in more than 50 years by a stunning margin, nearly completed results showed Tuesday.

The victory marked Romania as the only former East Bloc country in which the communists were freely voted into power amid a wave of anti-communism that swept over Eastern Europe last fall. The election was the result of a violent revolution that ousted Romanian communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu in December.

Iliescu, whose opponents accused him of close association with Ceausescu's government, won 86 percent of the vote, according to official results with 80 percent of the vote counted. Liberal Party candidate Radu Campeanu got 10 percent and Peasant Party candidate Ion Ratiu won 3.7 percent.

Pre-election polls had suggested Iliescu would win 70 or perhaps even 80 percent of the vote, but the higher figure came as a surprise to almost everyone.

The victory came as a heavy blow to the opposition in Romania, which had hoped its supporters would signal their opposition to Iliescu's communist-dominated National Salvation Front by voting for one of the minor parties.

''We are shocked by the dimension of this victory,'' said Thomas Kleininger, vice president of the Group for Social Dialogue, a Bucharest-based group of leading intellectuals. ''The opposition, to tell you the truth, does not exist now.''

Kleininger, whose organization is not an official opposition group, said one factor in the lopsided vote may have been the protesters in University Square, which have been holding daily anti-communist rallies since mid-April.

He said while the demonstrations are important in terms of exercising individual liberties and exchanging views, ''it could be the actions of the people in the streets that made people turn to the Front.''

Final results of the presidential vote were expected late Tuesday or Wednesday, while final results of all parliamentary races may not be available before Friday.

Returns from the individual counties showed the greatest opposition to Iliescu came from Transylvania, where most of the nation's 2 million ethnic Hungarians reside.

In Harghita County, more than three-fourths of the voters went for Campeanu.

Even in Timis County, where the December revolution began in liberal-minded Timisoara, Iliescu held an overwhelming advantage over Campeanu.

The Transylvania-based Hungarian Democratic Union Party slipped into second place in parliament behind the Front, with about 7 percent in both houses. The Liberals polled about 6 percent and all other parties had less than 3 percent.

The Ecology Party placed fourth in the Assembly of Deputies, ahead of the Peasants. The ecologists were fifth in the Senate.

Despite charges and countercharges among the parties of massive fraud in Sunday's elections - the first free elections since 1937 - an official of the Central Electoral Board said it has received only one official complaint so far, involving an incorrect voting list in one district.

Board member Dolphi Drimer said the board is prepared to accept an act on all complaints brought to it. The Liberals said they were preparing a list of complaints.

The nonpartisan opposition, however, appeared to accept the results.

''We respect the results of the elections,'' Kleininger said. ''We don't contest them. If you live in a democracy - and we want to live in a democracy - you must respect the results of the majority even if they are shocking.''

He said the main problem for Iliescu is that it will be even more difficult to make unpopular changes that might alienate his conservative voting base.

Iliescu said after his election he wants to move Romania quickly toward a market economy. That could mean widespread unemployment and inflation as the inefficient, centrally planned Romanian economy adjusts to the new rules.

MOSCOW (MAY 22) UPI - U.S. officials said Tuesday that American businesses can help rescue the Soviet economy but warned a trade accord could be imperiled if Moscow continues to enforce a blockade against Lithuania.

While American and Soviet business leaders gathered for the 13th annual meeting of the U.S-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, President Mikhail Gorbachev and his senior advisers approved a plan to move the nation to a ''regulated market economy,'' the official Tass news agency said.

''Only American companies have the experience and the know-how to make a huge, continental ocean-to-ocean economy work,'' U.S. Assistant Secretary of Commerce Thomas Duesterberg told several hundred directors and members of the bilateral trade council.

''They did it in the United States and they can help to do it here,'' he said.

But Duesterberg and other American officials said further improvements in the two countries' economic ties are unlikely until Gorbachev stops the embargo he imposed last month to pressure the Baltic republic into annulling its March 11 declaration of independence.

''Importantly, the United States hopes that the Soviet Union will end its economic blockade of Lithuania and begin a productive dialogue with the Lithuanian people,'' Duesterberg said.

Under a tentative agreement reached earlier this month, Washington would lift the Jackson-Vanik amendment to the 1974 Trade Act, extend most-favored-nation trade benefits to the Soviet Union and ease restrictions on transfers of technology to the East Bloc.

''With the welcomed improvements in relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, we now look forward to a climate in which American companies will work with the Soviet Union to reduce barriers to trade, investment and the free movement of goods and ideas,'' President Bush said in a message to the trade council.

Bush and Gorbachev are expected to sign the trade treaty at their May 30-June 3 summit in Washington but Congress must then ratify the accord in order for it to take effect.

''If sanctions are still being applied in Lithuania ... it is going to be very difficult to persuade the American Congress to let the commercial agreement go into effect,'' U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock told the gathering of American and Soviet business leaders.

In an apparent reference to such warnings, Soviet Chamber of Commerce Chairman Vladislav Malkevich expressed the ''hope that the trade agreement will not become an instrument of a new political game as has happened in the past.''

Secretary of State James Baker, visiting Moscow last week for pre-summit arms talks, urged an end to the blockade at a meeting with Gorbachev, whose April 18 decree cut off crude oil deliveries and shipments of most other raw materials to Lithuania.

In approving the Jackson-Vanik amendment 16 years ago, U.S. lawmakers tied trade benefits for the Soviet Union to improved human rights for its citizens.

Matlock praised Gorbachev for the liberalized policies that have allowed emigration levels to reach a record high, but he called on the Soviet Parliament to pass draft legislation that would codify the right to leave the country.

Speaker after speaker noted the paltry trade level between the United States and the Soviet Union, which account for about half of the world's total gross national product but exchanged only $5 billion in goods last year - less than 1 percent of all international trade.

American exports filled 86 percent of the two nation's trade ledger, and more than three-quarters of all U.S. goods sent to the Soviet Union were agricultural products, mostly grain.

Matlock said ''excessive bureaucracy'' in the Soviet Union and the non-convertibility of the ruble are the largest impediments to increased trade with the United States.

The economic program approved by Gorbachev's new Presidential Council is expected to move the Soviet Union more rapidly toward a free-market system. Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov said Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov would present the plan to parliament Thursday for final approval.

JERUSALEM (MAY 22) UPI - A lower court erred in rejecting testimony that a key document identifying John Demjanjuk as a sadistic Nazi death camp guard was forged, the defense lawyer for the convicted war criminal told an appeals court Tuesday.

Attorney Yoram Sheftel, in the sixth day of the appeal, said a photo identification card said to belong to Demjanjuk was forged by the Soviet KGB to implicate Demjanjuk in Nazi atrocities because he served in an anti-Soviet militia toward the end of World War II.

Sheftel told the five-member Supreme Court panel hearing the appeal of Demjanjuk's 1988 conviction that at least three documents experts for the defense were bullied and ignored by the three-member lower court when they suggested the card was forged.

The experts were ''cross-examined mercilessly by the bench, not the prosecution,'' and their testimony ultimately carried no weight in the verdict, Sheftel said.

After his conviction on four counts of war crimes under Israel's 1950 Nazi and Nazi collaborators law, the native Ukrainian was sentenced to death.

Sheftel maintains Demjanjuk has been mistaken for the sadistic Treblinka death camp guard Ivan the Terrible, who was responsible for herding thousands of Jews into gas chambers and then operating the engines that filled them with gas.

Sheftel said Demjanjuk was actually a Nazi prisoner of war at Chelm, Poland during the the time of the Treblinka mass killings.

Sheftel said earlier that survivors picked Demjanjuk's photo out of lineups because his photos were prominently displayed. He also asserts that at least one survivor was senile when he identified Demjanjuk, a naturalized U.S. citizen living in a suburb of Cleveland when he was stripped of his citizenship in 1981 and extradited to Israel five years later.

The appeal is expected to last another three weeks.

Adolf Eichmann, mastermind of the Nazi's Final Solution, is the only person convicted and executed under the Israel's 1950 Nazi and Nazi collaborators law.

PITTSFIELD, Maine (MAY 22) UPI - Arlo Quint was digging for some worms Monday when his spade turned over an old can that contained an original Honus Wagner baseball card that may be worth thousands of dollars.

Quint, 12, a seventh-grader, was planning on going fishing with a couple of friends on Monday. The three boys started digging for worms next to the foundation of his family's barn.

Instead of worms, the boys uncovered an old Dr. Lyons Tooth Powder can. When they opened the cap, four old baseball cards fell out. One of the cards showed Hall of Famer Honus Wagner, a card which experts say can be worth thousands of dollars.

Quint said he went to a local baseball card shop early Tuesday to try to determine the worth of the card.

''There is one magazine that says the card can be worth $200,000 if it is in good condition,'' said Arlo, who stayed home from school so he could check out the value of his find. ''There are some marks on (the card), but it is not completely trashed or anything.''

Arlo said he also looked up the other cards that were in the can with the Honus Wagner card.

''One is Eddie Plank, and another says Evers and the fourth one says Bresnahan,'' Arlo said. ''Bresnahan played for St. Louis, Evers played for the Cubs, and Plank was with the Athletics, I think.''

Arlo's mother, Janet Quint, said nothing else was found in the hole dug by the boys.

''We've never found anything else out there, but we are thinking about digging some more now,'' she said.

Coincidentally, a 12-year-old boy from Stockton Springs reportedly found a similar Honus Wagner card recently in a can wedged between the rocks of an old foundation.

The cards were manufactured in 1909 by the Piedmont cigarette company. The Wagner cards are reportedly so valuable because Wagner, who neither smoke nor drank, demanded that the cigarette company halt distribution of his card.

HOLLYWOOD (MAY 22) UPI - A pair of premature summer releases, ''Bird on a Wire'' and ''Cadillac Man,'' slapped ''Pretty Woman'' down to the No. 3 spot among films showing in North America and flipped ''Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles'' down to No. 4.

The rivalry for leading turnstile grosses between ''Pretty Woman'' and ''Turtles'' goes on, however. They had been trading the one-two position for the past two months and both have topped the $100 million mark.

The new movies feature two of Hollywood's hottest properties, macho Mel Gibson and wildman Robin Williams.

''Bird on a Wire'' stars Gibson as a man being protected by the federal witness program who accidentally encounters Goldie Hawn, an ex-girlfriend. They spend the rest of the picture running from the felons that Gibson blew the whistle on.

The romantic-action-comedy-thriller with lots of violence and chases racked up $15.3 million in its opening frame in 1,944 theaters.

Universal Pictures said ''Bird on a Wire'' broke the studio's record for its largest opening weekend box-office gross previously held by ''Jaws 3-D'' in 1983.

Running second was ''Cadillac Man,'' starring Williams as a bounder of a car salesman who seduces more women than he sells cars.

The comedy posted $6.7 million in its opening week in 1,826 situations.

Both ''Bird on a Wire'' and ''Cadillac Man'' were skewered by reviewers and were not expected to stand up against such upcoming high-powered summer flicks as ''Dick Tracy,'' ''Robo Cop 2,'' ''Another 48 Hours,'' ''The two Jakes'' and ''Die Hard II.''

Dropping to third place for the first time in its nine weeks was ''Pretty Woman,'' the Richard Gere-Julia Roberts romantic comedy. It picked up $6.2 million on 1,811 screens for a grand total of $109.6 million.

''Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles'' was No. 4 with a gross of $3.2 million in 2,026 theaters. In eight weeks it has grabbed $114 million.

''Tales From the Darkside'' rounded out the top five in the weekly rankings with a gross of $1.9 million in 1,535 venues. In three weeks it has taken in $12.2 million.

For the first time in almost five months ''Driving Miss Daisy,'' this year's Academy Award winner for best movie, dropped out of the top 10. It was No. 11 with a gross of $515,297 and a total of $100.8 million in 23 weeks.

Despite the fast start of the two new leaders, the weekly box-office tally in North America's 23,000 theaters fell far short for the equivalent week last year. Last week's total was $49.3 million as against record-setting 1989's $63.7 million.

So far this year the total gross in all theaters was $1.5 billion, still a tick ahead of 1989's $1.4 billion at this stage of the game.

The top 10, last week's gross, total gross, weeks in release:

1. ''Bird on a Wire,'' $15.3 million, 1 week.
2. ''Cadillac Man,'' $6.7 million, 1 week.
3. ''Pretty Woman,'' $6.2 million, $109.6 million, 9 weeks.
4. ''Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles,'' $3.2 million, $114 million, 8 weeks.
5. ''Tales From the Darkside,'' $1.9 million, $12.2 million, 3 weeks.
6. ''The Hunt for Red October,'' $1.7 million, $108 million, 12 weeks.
7. ''Spaced Invaders,'' $1.3 million, $12.6 million, 4 weeks.
8. ''The Guardian,'' $857,460, $14.2 million, 4 weeks.
9. ''Wild Orchid,'' $740,000, $8.5 million, 4 weeks.
10. ''Q&A,'' $732,735, $9.2 million, 4 weeks.

LONDON (MAY 22) UPI - British Airways PLC announced Tuesday its pretax profits for the fiscal year ending March 31 climbed 29 percent to $583 million, or 58 cents a share, up from $453 million, or 41 cents a share, a year earlier. "We have retained our place as one of the most profitable airlines in the world," said British Airways Chairman Lord John King.

Group revenues for the year rose by $981 million to $8.1 billion, compared with $7.1 billion a year ago, the company said. The airline said it would recommend a 14 percent boost in its dividend to shareholders to about 36 cents a share.

On London's International Stock Exchange, BA shares eased three cents to $3.37 as analysts expected larger profits from the carrier which claims to operate the greatest number of routes for a Western airline. King said the increase in annual pretax profits mostly stemmed from the sale of six older aircraft and increased passenger numbers.

Fourth-quarter pretax profits were $25.3 million, compared with a loss of $8.4 million for the same period last year. The quarterly increase came from reduced aircraft depreciation and profits from the sale and leaseback of 10 Boeing 737-200 aircraft, the airline said.

British Airways said passenger loads on scheduled services rose almost 5 percent from 22.6 million to 23.7 million. For the first time, British Airways carried more than 25 million passengers in one year, with about 75 percent on international scheduled services, the company said.

OAKLAND, CA (MAY 22) UPI - Two computer billionaires bought a pair of rare Porsches in Europe - only to have them stuck in an Oakland warehouse indefinitely because the cars don't meet U.S. standards.

The limited edition Porsche 959s, now worth from $600,000 to $900,000 apiece, are souped up with turbo-chargers, all-wheel drive and other features that reportedly allow them to exceed 200 mph.

But the Transportation Department is refusing to turn them loose from storage because the technologically advanced West German speedsters have not been modified to meet U.S. safety and environmental laws.

They were bought in January by William Gates and Paul Allen, onetime prep school buddies who founded computer software maker Microsoft Corp. in Bellevue, Wash., in 1975.

Gates, 34, is Microsoft's chairman and was the personal computer industry's first billion-dollar earner, based on the value of the stock he owns. Allen, 37, left Microsoft in 1983 and nows heads another company, Asymetrix Corp. He has owned the NBA Portland Trail Blazers since 1988.

''They are just great cars,'' Allen, of Seattle, said. ''We each bought one, and now we're trying to federalize them.''

The 959 was introduced in 1986 at a cost of about $150,000. Only 200 were built before they went out of production.

Porsche never tried to certify the 959 for sale in the United States. For one thing, the Transportation Department wants data on how the car would withstand crashes. No one has been willing to wreck such expensive cars to see.

While lawyers for the computer magnates argue with the Transportation Department, the cars sit in a warehouse in an Oakland holding area treated as outside the United States for purposes of import regulations.

BOSTON (MAY 22) UPI - Most people who successfully quit smoking kick the habit ''cold turkey'' and without any help from organized programs, scientists said Tuesday.

Data from a nationwide survey of adult tobacco use shows smokers who quit on their own are twice as successful as those who seek the aid of a variety of stop-smoking programs, said Dr. Michael Fiore and colleagues at the University of Wisconsin.

The researchers also found those who succeed are generally better educated and older than those who fail, but other factors such as sex, race and number of cigarettes smoked per day do not play a major role in determining success or failure.

Fiore analyzed information compiled in a 1986 survey of 13,031 people conducted by the federal Centers for Disease Control. They included 2,049 ex-smokers who had quit at least one year prior to the survey and 2,465 active smokers who had made at least one unsuccessful attempt to give up smoking.

Among those who had smoked in the decade before the survey was done, 48 percent of those who tried to quit on their own succeeded, compared to only 24 percent of those who sought assistance, including counseling, hypnosis and acupuncture, Fiore said in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Of those who succeeded, 85 percent chose the cold turkey approach, while the rest gradually decreased the number of cigarettes they smoked, initially switched to low tar and nicotine cigarettes or substituted other tobacco products, he said.

Overall, ''succeeders and relapsers differed little by sex and race distributions, number of cigarettes smoked per day and whether they had ever received a physician's advice to quit smoking,'' Fiore said.

Education and age, however, did seem to make a difference. The researchers found that 42 percent of the successful quitters had at least some college education. In contrast, 70 percent of those who tried to quit and failed had a high school education or less.

The study also found younger people were more likely to relapse than those who were older. Of those who tried unsuccessfully to quit, 70 percent were aged 17 to 44. But among those who succeeded, 43 percent were 45 and older.

Fiore said it may be that people who quit on their own generally do not smoke as heavily, and thus are less dependent on nicotine, than those who seek help. For that reason, he said they ''may have more confidence in their ability to quit'' from the beginning.

Although only 15 percent of ex-smokers surveyed said they had received assistance, Fiore said organized programs nevertheless may help up to 2 million Americans a year try to kick the habit.

''It is important to stress that a small but significant minority of smokers use smoking cessation programs,'' said Fiore. ''They include the most hard-core and addicted smokers and, for that reason, these programs do serve a vital segment of the population.''

In a separate study, two Massachusetts researchers said illegal sales of tobacco products to American children under the age of 18 total an estimated $1.25 billion annually.

Although the sale of tobacco to minors is illegal in 43 states, 3 million children buy about 950 million packs of cigarettes and 26 million containers of smokeless tobacco each year, said Dr. Joseph DiFranza of the University of Massachusetts and Joe Tye of Baystate Medical Center in Springfield.

They estimate that in 1988, tobacco companies in the United States made $221 million in profits from the sales of their products to children.

Tye said the result is that 1 million ''American children become addicted to nicotine each year and 90 percent of all new nicotine addicts are under the age of 19.''

LIMA, PERU (MAY 22) UPI - After 10 years of violence and nearly 19,000 people killed, Peru's mysterious and fanatical Shining Path guerrilla movement is showing signs of abating, experts on the Maoist organization said Tuesday.

Peruvian security experts, anthropologists and sociologists who have studied the secretive, indigenous, ultraleft movement, said they believe the organization is suffering from an internal split, though none considered the movement vanquished.

Shining Path fighters, based mostly in impoverished Andean mountain communities, have regularly slain government officials in remote villages and executed suspected collaborators. In jungle areas, they have protected the growers of coca leaves, the raw material from which cocaine is produced.

But the internal power struggle, the experts said, has led to a recent tapering off of violence. They consider it a welcome, if temporary, respite.

The hardest evidence of a suspected split in Shining Path leadership was a leaflet distributed in the Andean city of Ayacucho, the movement's spiritual and organizational center. It was made public May 17, the 10th anniversary of the organization's first armed insurrection.

The document, which many experts believe is authentic, called for a temporary ceasefire and questioned the leadership of Abimael Guzman, 56, the shadowy philosophy teacher who founded the rebel organization in 1980 along the ideological principles of the late Chinese communist leader Mao Tse-tung.

The group is so secretive that security officials don't even know whether Guzman is dead or alive.

Large areas of Peru have been placed under military jurisdiction to fight the insurgents. Security authorities have been denounced by Amnesty International for human rights abuses, including the disappearances of prisoners.

Guzman's followers speak Quechua, an Indian language dominant in the neglected Andean agricultural communities, rather than Spanish, Peru's official language which predominates in the more modern coastal cities.

Security experts say Shining Path suffered setbacks when it failed to dissuade voters, with threats of violence, to turn out in large numbers for both the municipal elections in November 1989 and this year's first round of presidential elections April 8.

An expected wave of violence on the May 17 anniversary date never materialized. Only a minor bombing marked that day, a mild incident by Shining Path standards.

The possibility of a truce halting the Shining Path violence has brought cheers from politicians.

The two presidential candidates for the June 10 runoff election, Mario Vargas Llosa and Alberto Fujimori, believing there was some substance in the report that at least a part of the Shining Path stopped fighting, have said they would grant reconciliation to former combatants who give up their arms.

Vargas Llosa said he would welcome defectors with ''open doors.''

Peruvian anthropologist Carlos Ivan Degregori believes Shining Path is now in its worst internal crisis ever.

Other experts aren't so sure.

Sociologist Raul Gonzalez, a specialist in the Shining Path movement, thinks that the break-away faction represents only a small splinter, while Ruiz Zevallos, another sociologist who teaches at San Marcos university, warns that in the past the guerrillas have been able to overcome their internal differences and launch new offensives.

TOKYO (MAY 22) UPI - A U.S. Treasury official said Tuesday regulated interest rates have given Japanese banks an advantage over American banks in world markets and called on Japan to deregulate the rates within a year.

Vice Minister of Finance Makoto Utsumi said Japan was moving toward deregulation of interest rates but would not be committed to a timetable and did not want to move as fast as the United States proposed.

Treasury Undersecretary David Mulford and Utsumi failed to reach agreement on the issue of interest rate deregulation during the talks of the Working Group on Financial Markets.

''In the past seven or eight years Japanese banks, which used to account for one or two banks in the top 10 in the world, now account for something like eight or nine of the top 10 banks,'' Mulford told a news conference.

''This massive expansion has taken place as other markets deregulated much more quickly and Japan has kept a highly regulated market at home which in a sense has given a substantial financial advantage to those institutions expanding,'' he said.

''It is important to complete this process (of deregulating interest rates) quickly to establish a level playing field,'' Mulford said.

''On the fundamental question of interest rate deregulation, the United States has taken the position that after seven years of step-by-step transition, it is now necessary to complete the process of deregulation with the period of one year,'' Mulford said.

Mulford said the regulations which keep Japanese interest rates low act as a kind of subsidy to Japanese banks, giving them access to cheap money not available to American banks.

Utsumi disagreed, saying, ''There is no truth to the statement that Japanese institutions are enjoying an advantage by bringing into the market the funds raised at low cost in Japan.''

Still, he said, Japan wants to deregulate its rates.

''There is no difference of opinion between the United States and Japan with respect to the direction of liberalization,'' he said. ''The difference is in the timing.''

Japanese officials have said they are concerned about the damage deregulation may do to medium and small banks.

Mulford said Japan is also reluctant because major banks benefit from the low interest rates.

''The Ministry of Finance usually has one foot on the brake,'' Mulford said. ''There is the small bank question ... but also there is the large bank question because obviously these banks have been happy to expand their business worldwide under this arrangement, so obviously there is plenty of reasons why completing the deregulation process is a delicate matter.''

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - NBC was back on top of the ratings race last week with old reliable Perry Mason leading the Sunday movie pack, it was reported Tuesday.

CBS, which the previous week held clear title to the No. 1 spot for the first time since June 1988, was back in the cellar. On the bright side, the first half of a two-part ''Murphy Brown'' season finale was in sixth place and ''Designing Women'' was in seventh.

In the Sunday movie competition, NBC's ''Perry Mason: The Case of the Silenced Singer'' was in eight place, equalling the best ranking for an NBC Sunday movie this season - ''Blind Faith,'' part 1 on Feb. 5.

''Voices Within: The Lives of Truddi Chase,'' part 1, on ABC tied for 13th and CBS's ''In The Best Interest of the Child'' ranked 36th.

''Wings'' on NBC was the top-ranked new show, in 11th place, while the network's usually high-scoring ''Carol & Company'' was pre-empted by a Bob Hope special, which was 28th. ABC's ''Twin Peaks,'' which will be back on the schedule next fall, tied for 40th.

ABC's Monday movie, ''Columbo,'' which will not return next season, was 20th. ''Return to Green Acres'' on CBS won its Friday night time period and ranked 35th, while ''Hands of a Murderer'' on CBS tied for 52nd.

NBC was the most-watched network on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, while ABC took Sunday, Tuesday and Friday. CBS was tops on Monday.

NBC won the week ending May 20 with an 11.7 rating and a 21 share. ABC was second with an 11.5 rating and a 20 share, while CBS had an 11.2 rating and a 20 share.

The official 30-week prime time season ended Sunday, April 15, but working on a 52-week season, as of the week ending May 20 NBC had a year-to-date rating of 14.2 and a 24 share. ABC was second with a 12.7 rating and a 21 share and CBS third, with a 12.0 rating and a 20 share.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (MAY 22) UPI - Some 350,000 mourners beating their breasts and crying for revenge marched Tuesday in a funeral procession for the chief Moslem cleric of Kashmir, who was assassinated in his home by three unknown gunmen.

The procession passed peacefully although police say at least 50 died Monday when security forces fired on thousands of Moslems who seized Moulvi Farooq's body from a hospital and carried it through the streets. Police reported 25 of the 50 victims had died in hospitals after shootings Monday.

A senior police official said at least 300 other people were being treated in hospitals for gunshot wounds and injuries caused by baton blows.

Farooq was shot 15 times by gunmen during a meeting in his residential office Monday.

Police took no chances at the funeral, deploying thousands of combat-ready troops across the tense summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state. The predominantly Moslem Kashmir area has been convulsed since mid-January by an uprising against Indian rule.

A curfew also was maintained in many parts of the mountain-ringed city.

Soldiers were posted at major interesections and in rooftop machine-gun nests or moved slowly along streets in trucks, their weapons at the ready.

The curfew was lifted, however, in the areas through which the 3-mile-long funeral procession route passed, and authorities withdrew security forces from those areas to avoid provocations.

Crowds flocked throughout the morning to the join the procession, many first viewing Farooq's body as it lay in state at the headquarters of the Awami Action Committee, the social service he headed.

There was no word from the government on progress in the hunt for the three men who killed the 45-year-old cleric.

Police blamed the assassination on Moslem separatists engineering the anti-India uprising, pointing out that Farooq was placed on a militant ''hit list'' for criticizing the December kidnapping of the daughter of federal Home Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed. The abductors traded her for freedom for five jailed militants.

But Farooq's slaying was condemned by the Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, which staged the abduction and is the most popular underground separatist group, and other leading militant organizations.

Members of Farooq's family, his followers and thousands of protesters blamed the slaying on Jammu and Kashmir State Gov. Jagmohan, who has deployed tens of thousands of troops and police and used harsh measures to try to quell the anti-India uprising, which is supported by Kashmir's 4 million-strong Moslem majority.

Farooq, who inherited his position as chief Moslem cleric of Kashmir from his father, was long considered a moderate. He held ambiguous views on the question of independence and advocated Hindu-Moslem unity.

But, following the eruption of the insurrection, Farooq openly endorsed calls for Kashmiri self-determination.

More than 350 people have died since the insurrection against the Hindu-dominated government began when security forces killed dozens of protesters calling for self-determination for Kashmir, which constitutes part of northern Jammu and Kashmir state.

(MAY 22) UPI - Ethiopia said today 12 senior military officers were executed for their part in an attempted coup against President Mengistu Haile Mariam last May. Two other officers received long jail sentences. The Ethiopian news agency says four major generals and eight brigadier generals were condemned to death for trying to overthrow the government. Mengistu has ruled Ethiopia since a military coup of his own in 1974.

HANOI, VIETNAM (MAY 22) UPI - Thousands of Vietnamese Catholics wearing long white mourning headbands paid their last respects Tuesday to the country's highest ranking Catholic in an extraordinary religious display in the Communist nation.

Cardinal Trinh Van Can, 69, who had been Vietnam's cardinal since 1979, died of a heart attack Friday - the eve of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Vietnam's revolutionary leader, Ho Chi Minh.

Since then more than 3,000 people a day have filed past the cardinal's body in the Hanoi cathedral to pay their last respects. The streets around the cathedral, in the city' s center, have been jammed with mourners for the past three days.

''If the government doubted the Catholic following, they only have to look at this. It's phenomenal,'' said a Western observer in Hanoi. ''I've never seen anything like it.''

Despite Communist discouragement and tight control of religion, most of the mourners publicly desplayed long white headbands, the traditional Vietnamese symbol of mourning.

Can, who became a bishop in 1963 and archbishop of Hanoi in 1978, suffered from diabetes but had not been ill before his death, which colleagues described as sudden.

His death leaves Vietnam's estimated 8 million Catholics without a leader as improvements in relations between the Catholic church and the Communist state appear to have stalled because of Communist concerns that the country is liberalizing too rapidly.

Last week the government announced that two Catholic clergymen had been put under surveillance and a form of house arrest for ''anti-socialist activities.''

A number of other Catholic priests are under arrest for previous offenses.

But over the past three years Catholic leaders have won increased freedom of worship by pursuing a cautious policy of neither submission to, nor defiance of, the state. Can had been a key element in that policy.

Of the country's three archbishops, two have died in the past two years and have not been replaced.

The highest-ranking Catholic in Vietnam is now Nguyen Van Binh, archbishop of Ho Chi Minh City, the hotbed of demands for increased liberalization of the economic and political system.

TOKYO (MAY 22) UPI - Cambodian guerilla leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk will meet with Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen in Tokyo June 4 and 5 to discuss an end to the 11-year-old conflict in Cambodia, the Japanese Foreign Ministry announced Tuesday.

Sihanouk was invited to Japan as representative of three Cambodian rebel factions fighting to take control from the Vietnamese-supported government led by Hun Sen.

Japan, at the urging of Thailand's Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan, offered in April to host the Cambodian peace talks.

A Japanese Foreign Ministry spokesman said it is difficult to predict what will come of the meeting with Sihanouk and Hun Sen June 4 and 5, but events in Cambodia have given some observers reason to hope a settlement can be reached.

The rebel factions have made little progress on the battlefield, opening the possibility they may be more willing to compromise at the peace talks.

Sihanouk has proposed an immediate cesefire and an enhanced role by the United Nations in the peace settlement.

The rebel factions stepped up their efforts to gain military control of the country after Vietnam announced in September it had begun withdrawl of its troops.

But the three factions, including two non-communist factions and the communist Khmer Rouge, have made little progress and nearly 90 percent of Cambodia remains in the control of Hun Sen's government.

The non-communist rebel factions are supported by the United States and other Western nations.

The Uniteds States is withholding support for the Khmer Rouge, which is known for its bloody reign of terror in the late 1970s that left up to 1.5 million people dead.

Sihanouk supports including the Khmer Rouge in the peace process.

Son Sann, leader of one of the non-communist factions, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, may also join in the talks, according to a Kyodo News Service report from Bangkok.

NEWARK, NJ (MAY 22) UPI - Four high school athletes, including twins who were co-captains of their football team and a police officer's son, were formally charged Tuesday with sexually abusing a mildly retarded girl.

A special grand jury handed up an indictment after a six-month investigation that included tapes made surreptitiously by a friend of the defendants who encouraged the victim to confide in her. The 19-year-old woman also was named in the indictment as was a fifth young man charged with conspiracy.

Charged were Kevin and Kyle Scherzer, the sports stars in whose home the assault allegedly took place, Richard Corcoran Jr., son of a Glen Ridge police lieutenant, and Peter Quigley, who was accused of encouraging the others. All are 19.

Three juveniles, whose names have not been released because of their age, have also been charged. Judge Julio Fuentes of the family court must decide whether the three will stand trial as adults.

The case began more than a year ago when the victim, now 17, told a teacher she had been sexually molested with a broom handle and a miniature baseball bat in the Scherzers' basement recreation room on Mar. 1, 1989. The girl attends a special education program in West Orange and is described as falling between mentally retarded and neurologically impaired.

The victim, whose name has not been released because of her age, told police she met the defendants, all longtime friends or acquaintances, in a park and accompanied them to the Scherzer home. The parents were not there.

Authorities say at least 13 teenagers were present during the alleged hour long assault, some participating and others watching or cheering the alleged perpetrators.

The handling of the investigation has attracted criticism and controversy. No one was charged for several months and then, after the seven defendants were arrested, the grand jury investigation stretched out for more months.

The Glen Ridge police investigation was originally headed by Corcoran's father, although he stepped aside when he learned his son was involved.

The charges also brought notoriety to Glen Ridge, a small affluent suburb west of Newark. Seniors last year endured news photographers at their graduation ceremonies.

Two defense lawyers, Michael Querques and Louis Esposito, were attacked for using tapes of the victim's conversation, made without her knowledge, in which she allegedly discusses her sexual history.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Neil Bush, the president's son, was a director of the failed Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association when the thrift came up with a plan to cover up devastating losses and inflate its capital, regulators said Tuesday.

Silverado collapsed in 1988 and was taken over by government regulators in December of that year, four months after Bush stepped down as a director.

Bush, who lives in Denver and is in the oil industry there, joined the Denver thrift's board in 1985.

He is scheduled to testify Wednesday before the House Banking Committee, which is investigating Silverado's failure. Protecting Silverado's depositors from losses is expected to cost taxpayers more than $1 billion.

At the time of its closing in December 1988, Silverado had assets worth $2.2 billion and a negative net worth of $264.8 million.

Thrift regulators testified that Silverado's board acted as a ''rubber stamp,'' approving a so-called ''quid pro quo'' plan that permitted borrowers to receive loans for more than they requested.

The extra money was used to buy Silverado stock, repossessed real estate and shares in a ''pool'' of shaky commercial real estate loans.

The purpose of the plan, regulators testified, was to inflate Silverado's capital, operating income and book value, regulators said.

Brian McCormally, district counsel for the Topeka District of the Office of Thrift Supervision, said many of the participants in the ''quid pro quo'' loan plan were real estate developers ''who could not find financing elsewhere for their high-risk projects.''

Thrift examiners have found 16 transactions where Silverado loaned borrowers more than they requested. The deals resulted in losses to Silverado of $278.5 million.

These transactions, McCormally said, ''defied prudent banking practices and fundamental common sense.''

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., called the ''quid pro quo'' plan ''nothing more that a scheme of bribes and kickbacks'' that had the support of Silverado's board.

''Silverado presents a case where the directors of the institution failed in their duties,'' Annunzio said.

McCormally said Silverado's board did little to protect the savings institution's customers from a management team that ''became progressively more abusive over time.''

''Throughout Silverado's history, the board did little beyond rubber stamping the activities of its sophisticated, bright and manipulative management team,'' he said.

Five former Silverado officers and directors have agreed to consent orders that prohibit them from working in the savings and loan industry without prior regulatory approval. None of the executives admitted any wrongdoing.

Bush, 34, has not been accused of any wrongdoing and has denied doing anything wrong while serving on Silverado's board.

In January, the OTS filed an administrative complaint against Bush accusing him of violating thrift regulations. He has refused to sign a consent order similar to those signed by other Silverado officers and directors.

NAIROBI, KENYA (MAY 22) UPI - Sudanese rebels are pressing a campaign against supply routes in central Sudan, shelling a strategic town and threatening to cut government access to the south, rebels said Tuesday.

In a clandestine radio broadcast monitored in Nairobi, the rebel Sudanese People's Liberation Army said its forces were shelling military installations in the key town of Malakal, 430 miles south of Khartoum. It warned civilians to evacuate.

The reports could not immediately be verified by other sources.

''The bombardment of Malakal began on May 18,'' the broadcast said. ''Civilians living in Malakal town and near army barracks must evacuate to avoid being caught in cross-fire. We are serious.''

The reports of the assault on Malakal came only a week after the heavily armed rebels, fighting a seven-year war against Khartoum, cut government access to the Nile at Melout, 75 miles to the north.

The capture of Melout isolated Malakal, which is on the White Nile and which has a garrison of 7,000 government troops. With Sudan's rainy season on the way, it also threatened to sever all government access, except by air, to the rebel heartland in southern Sudan.

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - U.S. measles cases are up sharply for the second year in a row, underscoring the need to extend mandatory vaccination to pre-school children, a report said Tuesday.

There were about 17,000 cases of measles in the country in 1989, up from 3,396 cases the year before, and the latest numbers for this year show a continued acceleration, according to the Statistical Bulletin, a quarterly magazine published by Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

The average age of those catching the infectious disease has dropped from earlier years, with about 40 percent of 1989's cases occurring in preschool children under 5 years of age, the report said.

''Through February of this year, there were over 1,600 measles cases compared with 600 at the same time last year,'' said Dr. Charles Arnold, MetLife Medical Director and editor of the bulletin. + He said the increases were mainly in Chicago, Dallas, Los Angeles and Milwaukee.

''This 250 percent increase is shocking for a disease believed to be virtually eradicated nine year ago,'' Arnold said, and warned, ''There may be even worst news coming.''

Arnold listed what he said were the causes of the current measles outbreak:

-Low immunization rates for preschool-age children, which ''indicate that parental ignorance and apathy are indeed factors.''

-State laws that require children to be vaccinated before they can enter elementary school, but allow the same kids to enter preschool programs without vaccinations.

-Public immunization clinics that are hard to get to or have long waiting lines.

-Working mothers from the inner cities who can't get their children to daytime clinics.

The current measles outbreak has caused medical experts to drop the recommended age for vaccinations to 12 months.

In the face of an estimated 5 percent vaccine failure rates, the Immunization Practices Advisory Committee now recommends children be vaccinated twice.

The article recommended that, in areas where there are recurring measle outbreaks, the first dose should be administered at 12 months of age, followed up by a second vaccination between the ages of 4 and 6.

In other areas, the initial vaccination can be held off until 14-15 months the report said.

It also recommended that college and other educational institutions require all entering students born after 1956 be revaccinated if they do not have proof of two doses of measles vaccine after age 1.

LONDON (MAY 22) UPI - Stock prices closed broadly higher in brisk trading Tuesday on the London International stock exchange fueled by European Monetary System hopes and optimism over interest rates.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which gained 13.0 points Monday, climbed 29.2 points to 2,311.3. The narrower top 30 industrial average gained 18.7 points to 1,833.9.

An estimated 630 million shares changed hands, compared with 316 million shares Monday.

Analysts said investors were encouraged by Wall Street's strong performance Monday which helped to inspire speculators drive the Financial Times Stock Index up through the 2,300-level.

Hopes that Britain would enter the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS, an action that could help ease interest rates, continued to boost trading, analysts said.

Market watchers noted that buyers from Japan and Europe were attracted to London's recent good showing, pushing the key index which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization up nearly 50 points during afternoon trading.

Stocks eased slightly late in the session as Wall Street failed to hold its best level and trading slowed amid caution ahead of Britain's trade deficit figures expected Wednesday.

On the trading floor, among the most widely traded stocks, British Airways PLC slipped 3 cents to $3.38 despite reporting its earnings for the year climbed 29 percent and recommending a 14 percent boost in its dividend.

BA chairman Lord King sounded a note of caution for the year ahead, owing to stiffer competition and rising costs.

Rolls-Royce PLC gained 10 cents to $3.52 after itsir American Depositary Receipt listing was granted by U.S. authorities.

Bass surged 42 cents to $16.80. The company is expected to report higher earnings Wednesday.

Among the day's other highlights, Guinness gained 18 cents to $11.34 and Eurotunnel fell 20 cents to $8.13.

Elsewhere in Europe, prices closed slightly higher in moderate trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which Monday tumbled 32.41 points, or 1.76 percent, added 2.08 points to 1,813.26. The key index's gain was only its second in the last 11 trading sessions.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (MAY 22) UPI - After assessing the election rout inflicted by the communist-dominated National Salvation Front and its leader, Interim President Ion Iliescu, the Romanian opposition Tuesday began forming a ''School for Democracy'' to help the electorate prepare for the 1992 elections.

Known as ''The Group for Social Dialogue'' and including some of the country's leading intellectuals and opposition groups, the organization met Monday night to decide its future and decided to pursue two main goals.

The group said it would first continue acting as a government critic and also establish the ''School for Democracy'' to help Romanians prepare for the next elections in two years, an opposition spokesman said.

''We must make the government responsible for all its mistakes,'' said Thomas Kleininger, vice president of the opposition group. ''We must tell workers that the government is responsible for the actions that will affect them.''

He said this meant unemployment and economic dislocation if Iliescu makes good his promise to move Romania to a market-oriented economy.

For the second project, the center will make use of resources from the West to set up a library and conduct seminars with specialists on democracy, establishment of a a market economy and other subjects.

The U.S. Information Agency has contributed $100,000 to the Center For Social Research and Boston University is giving an undisclosed amount for research and study by journalists, he said.

The center will act as a liaison with the Timisoara Society, whose proclamation of democratic ideals after the revolution has drawn support from other opposition groups. They include the protesters who have gathered in Bucharest's University Square nightly for the past three weeks.

Kleininger said the center will continue to seek dialogue with the government, which won a resounding victory in last Sunday's voting, the first free elections in Romania for 50 years.

Silviu Brucan, the center's former liaison with the ruling front, has begun attacking it ''and relations are nearly frozen now,'' Kleininger said.

He said that ''we want to open and maintain dialogue between all forces of society.

''That is the most important thing that gathers us here: a dialogue without violence,'' Kleininger added.

One of Romania's most difficultlt problems the wide gap between intellectuals and workers, a problem found in all other former East bloc countries except Poland where the Solidarity movement managed to bridge the gap in 1980.

Kleininger said one of the most traumatic events of the revolution actually occurred last Jan. 29, when at a workers rally there were shouts of ''death to intellectuals: we are working, they are thinking.''

''It will take a long time to get the two groups together,'' he conceded.

That concern was mirrored in the election results, in which many voters who went to the polls expressed faith that Iliescu would allow them to keep their jobs or - in the case of peasants - their pigs and chickens.

The intellectuals also have few ties with the vast army of bureaucrats who owe their jobs to the Communist Party and are reluctant to give up the privileges that go with them.

SALT LAKE CITY (MAY 22) UPI - Kennecott Corp. and unions representing its 1,900 Utah workers have agreed to a tentative 3-year contract providing a 23 percent increase in average wages and fringe benefits.

Members of the 13 local unions will vote on the ''master contract'' before May 30, Don Babinchak, Kennecott vice president of human resources and head of the copper company's bargaining committee, said Tuesday.

Some relatively minor issues, mostly related to work conditions and job rules, still need to be worked out between the company's Utah copper operation and the individual unions, Babinchak said.

If the master contract is approved by May 30, he said, covered employees will receive a $3,000 bonus. The previous 4-year contract at Kennecott's Utah division expires at midnight June 30.

OTTAWA (MAY 22) UPI - Canada's constitutional crisis, which has set the French-speaking province of Quebec against the rest of the country, worsened Tuesday with the resignation of Environment Minister Lucien Bouchard from the Conservative government's Cabinet.

The resignation came two days after the 10th anniversary of Quebec's independence referendum, in which a slim majority of its mostly French-speaking residents voted to remain part of Canada.

Bouchard, who lobbied on behalf of the separatist option in the 1980 Quebec referendum, sent a telegram to the pro-independence Parti Quebecois when it met during the weekend to celebrate the May 20 anniversary. In the telegram, Bouchard praised the ''inalienable right'' of Quebecers to chose their own destiny.

Bouchard, a former ambassador to France, submitted his resignation to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney late Monday and was to formally announce his decision later Tuesday in Parliament.

Bouchard has grown increasingly frustrated by the failure of English-speaking Canada to give final approval to the so-called Meech Lake Accord, a proposed amendment to the 1982 Constitution that recognizes Quebec as a distinct society.

Quebec refused to sign the constitution in 1982 on grounds it did not recognize the province as the principal home in North America of French-speaking people. The amendment would recognize Quebec's distinct society and gives the province the power to promote and preserve the French language and culture.

Three provincial legislatures have refused to approve the accord, which will die unless it is ratified by June 23.

Earlier Tuesday, a member of the Conservative caucus from Montreal, Gilbert Chartrand, announced he leave the caucus would sit as an independent member of Parliament. Chartrand said he wanted the freedom to speak out on the Meech Lake Accord and to oppose proposed changes that would water down the distinct society clause.

''I cannot observe a policy of silence, because I would be ashamed before my children,'' Chartrand said in an emotional appeal in Parliament, adding that the terms of the original Meech Lake accord should be respected.

Other Quebec members of the Conservative caucus warned there would be further defections.

Francois Gerin, who left the Conservative ranks last week to sit as an independent, told reporters: ''I know that a lot of my colleagues are thinking of leaving the caucus.''

Transport Minister Benoit Bouchard, a close friend of the environment minister, said he was ''personally devastated'' by Bouchard's resignation. But Bouchard said remaining in the Conservative caucus offered a better opportunity to lobby for the Meech Lake Accord.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Pierre Blais told reporters: ''Canadians and Quebecers need us here to get Meech Lake passed.''

TEHRAN, IRAN (MAY 22) UPI - One of Iran's leading hard-line clerics responded Tuesday to the slayings of seven Palestinians by calling for the creation of Hezbollah armies to fight Israel.

Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani said the weekend incident, in which a lone Israeli gunman described as deranged killed seven Arab workers south of Tel Aviv, was a tragedy and could touch off reactions throughout the Moslem world.

The Speaker of Iran's Parliament, Mehdi Karubi, said Moslem nations should create Hezbollah, or Party of God, armies and secret resistance cells to attack Israeli interests worldwide ''so that the Zionists do not feel safe anywhere.''

Members of the Majlis, or Parliament, signed a letter saying the murders south of Tel Aviv ''took place under the security umbrella of the United States.''

Karubi's call for the setting up of Hezbollah armies and resistance cells came as representatives of several Shiite groups from Lebanon and elsewhere in the Middle East met in Tehran for a conference.

Attending the conference was Ayatollah Hussein Fadlollah, the head of the Lebanese Hezbolah, and Sheikh Mohammad Tofail, another prominent Lebanese Shiite leader.

Iranian Chief Justice Mohammad Yazdi said Sunday that Iran was ready to provide facilities for Lebanese fighters.

The relatively moderate newspaper Tehran Times poured scorn on Arab heads of state for not reacting strongly enough to the Tel Aviv murders.

They ''have chosen to remain silent observers of all abominable crimes of the Zionists against Palestinians,'' the newspaper said.

The forthcoming Arab summit in Baghdad, the Tehran Times said, would be an exercise in deception, where the Arab heads would make a ''pretext of finding a solution to the Palestinian people's problems.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Citing a survey that shows nearly one-third of older Americans skip meals almost daily, health experts Tuesday initiated a five-year drive to screen the elderly for proper nutrition.

''Nutrition is one of the important vital signs, just as blood pressure or pulse,'' said Dr. Gerald Keller of the American Academy of Family Physicians.

''The fact is, however, America has not effectively incorporated routine nutrition screening and care into the nation's system of health care delivery,'' he said.

The Nutrition Screening Initiative is led by the doctors' group, the American Diatetic Association and the National Council on Aging.

''Our message is that routine nutrition screening for the elderly and others who tend to be at risk for poor nutrition can help focus attention on nutrition and guide people to better nutritional behavior to keep them healthy and active,'' said Nancy Wellman, president of the American Diatetic Assocaition.

A telephone survey of 802 Americans age 65 and older found indications that many elderly Americans may have poor nutrition, officials said.

The survey, conducted by Peter D. Hart Research Associates, found about 30 percent of those surveyed live alone, 45 percent take multiple prescriptions, 30 percent skip meals almost daily and 25 percent have annual incomes less than $10,000.

In addition, the survey found that only 6 percent believe they are at risk for poor nutrition. While more than 85 percent believe nutrition plays a major role in preventing illness and disease, 71 percent said they had never had their nutrition assessed.

A nutrition screening can range from a simple review of factors like weight, skin tone, diet and living conditions to blood tests and other more advanced techniques, the experts said.

SUNNYVALE, CA (MAY 22) UPI - Atari Corp. is seeking a first-of-a-kind deal to trade personal computers to the Soviet Union for memory chips. "This thing came out of nowhere and it's moving very fast," Gregory Pratt, chief financial officer for Sunnyvale-based Atari, said Monday.

The proposal is for Atari to swap its computers for 256K DRAMs, a basic component of many Atari products, from a Soviet-owned semiconductor plant in Zelenograd, a center for much of the country's high-tech research.

The Soviets are seeking to trade their DRAMs through Global Development Corp., a Seattle trade consulting firm that has arranged for a series of meetings in Santa Clara next month between Soviet officials and U.S. high-tech companies. The Soviets are willing to provide all their excess production, as many as 2.5 million chips a month.

Workers at the Soviet plant would be allowed to keep 25 percent of any profit from selling Atari products, Mark Muchnick, president of Global Development, said.

"They're just dying to get their hands on computers," Muchnick said. "For the first time in their lives, these guys could get something more than a paycheck."

Atari engineers have been testing the Soviet chips to see if they meet Western standards. "Basically, the parts work," although there have been a few problems, David Harris, senior vice president for Atari's international division, said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - The Senate Commerce Committee approved Tuesday a uniform national system to deal with consumers injured by products, limiting punitive damages to cases of "flagrant indifference" by the manufacturer.

In addition to a uniform system, the bill, approved 13-7 and sent to the Senate for action, provides incentives for quick settlement of product liability cases. The bill is sponsored by Sens. Jack Danforth, R-Mo., Bob Kasten, R-Wis., Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii and John Rockefeller, D-W.Va.

"American companies face 50 different state laws, plus liability costs that are 20 to 50 times higher than their foreign competitors," Danforth said. "And liability cases drag on for years leaving too much of the money to attorneys instead of to victims. "It is time to put fairness and efficiency on the front burner," he said.

Kasten said, "We have a pro-consumer, pro-jobs bill that has support from Democrats and Republicans and we're going to move ahead" although the trial lawyers lobby "turned the heat on committee members at the last minute to suffocate this bill." The legislation does not set a cap on liability damage awards.

The bill provides that in states where punitive damages are permitted, they could only be awarded if the injured person proves with "clear and convincing evidence" of, in Danforth's words, "flagrant indifference" by the manufacturer or the seller of the product.

The bill also establishes a defense - except in cases of fraud - against punitive damages for drugs and medical devices approved by the Food & Drug Administration or planes certified by Federal Aviation Administration.

Retailers, wholesalers, and distributors can be held liable for the harm caused by their own fault but also can be made responsible for the errors or mistakes of the manufacturer if the manufacturer cannot be brought into court or cannot pay. If there are multiple defendants - manufacturers, retailers, wholesalers, distributors - each can be held for damages.

Under the bill, suits would have to be filed within two years of the injury; if the primary cause of the injury is intoxication or drugs, there will be no award; and an injured person's damage award would be reduced by the amount of worker's compensation he received.

The incentives to settle quickly include: if an injured person agrees to settle out of court but the defendant refuses and loses the case, the defendant must pay the attorney fees for the injured person; if the defendant offers to settle but the injured person refuses and the award is less than the settlement offer, the injured person must pay the defendant's attorney fees; if either party refuses non-court arbitration and loses, that party has to pay the others' attorney costs.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - A published report that the U.S. government has $50 billion in unspent funds that could be used to cut the deficit is "not an accurate reflection" of the situation, an aide to a congressman quoted in the story said Tuesday.

Jeanne Morin, press secretary to Rep. Andy Ireland, R-Fla., said a front-page story in Tuesday's Chicago Tribune about the $50 billion in unspent government funds "tends to lead people to believe that there are actually dollars sitting in an account somewhere." "That's not an accurate reflection of what the situation is," she said, adding the funds are "appropriated authority" that has not been used.

The Tribune story quoted Ireland as saying that the funds, mostly in defense-related accounts, "have lost their fiscal identity and they flow together into one big pot." He said the situation is "ripe for abuse."

Morin said there are two types of accounts involved. If money is obligated but the bill has not come due when the appropriation expires, the spending authority goes into an "M" account, which every agency has, she said. "The authority to spend the money is there," she said.

The other type of account involved is a "merged surplus account," in which money is authorized and appropriated but the appropriation expires before the money is obligated.

"The potential for it to turn into (spending) in any given year is definitely there," she said of the merged surplus funds. "There is no way that they could decrease (spending) in any given year. There's really no reason for that (spending) authority to continue and it ought to be turned back in."

She said that merged surplus accounts for the military services have about $25 billion and that Ireland believes the money in those accounts "just ought to be dissolved."

Asked if eliminating that money would reduce the deficit, Morin said: "No, it wouldn't." "It doesn't create money," she said of the possible dissolution of those funds. "It only prevents more money from being spent in the future."

BONN, WEST GERMANY (MAY 22) UPI - Opposition Social Democrats and conservatives traded bitter accusations Tuesday at the opening of parliamentary debate over a recently signed treaty for German economic unity.

The Social Democratic Party, or SPD, continued its harsh criticism of the treaty for economic, currency and social union with East Germany, but indicated it would not block its ratification by Parliament next month.

Members of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Union accused the SPD of using the debate with an eye to making political gains in the Dec. 2 West German general election, which could become an all-German vote.

They made the claims during the first parliamentary debate of the draft treaty at a special session of the Bundesrat - the state council - on Tuesday.

The Bundestag, the federal assembly, is scheduled to take up the issue Wednesday.

North-Rhine Westphalia state Prime Minister Johannes Rau of the SPD complained that the West German states had barely been consulted before the draft treaty was signed last week and were virtually told to ''eat it or die.''

He reminded deputies of the slogan used by East German advocates of reunification: ''We are the people.'' He said that Kohl appeared to have added to the slogan the words ''and I am the chancellor.''

But Rau said that he wanted cooperation rather than confrontation with the West German government on the issue, a statement which appeared to confirm indications the SPD will not oppose the treaty at its third reading in the Bundestag on June 22.

Recent victories in West German state elections, have given the SPD a 23 to 18 majority in the Bundesrat, which was previously led by the CDU.

The SPD does not have a majority in the Bundestag, but the government will need its support to get the two-thirds majority needed to ratify the treaty, which is due to take effect July 2 with the introduction of the West German mark in East Germany.

If the Bundesrat and the Bundestag fail to agree on the treaty, a mediation committee consisting of officials from both groups will have to be formed to seek a compromise.

Finance Minister Theo Waigel led conservative deputies in accusing the SPD of seeking to delay German unification against the wishes of the German people.

''Anyone who slows down this treaty will be responsible for blocking the path to German unity,'' he said.

The CDU strongly rejected demands by the SPD that several clauses be added to the treaty so that it might offer better protection to East German companies and individuals.

WARSAW, POLAND (MAY 22) UPI - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said Tuesday he was concerned over spreading wildcat strikes by railroad workers which have paralyzed transportation in Poland's vital northern region of Pomerania and urged the government to open negotiations.

''The situation is difficult,'' Walesa said of the wave strikes after arriving in Warsaw from West Germany where he took part in the two-day congress of the German DGB labor unions in Hamburg.

The striking employees, demanding an 85 percent wage hike to $67 a month, currently earn $37 a month compared with the national average of $80 monthly.

Walesa urged the authorities to start negotiations with the strikers to solve the conflict, which began 13 days ago in the northern city of Slupsk when 45 railwaymen from various parts of the country began a hunger strike.

The condition of two of the hunger strikers deteriorated Tursday and two of them were hospitalized, authorities said.

The full strike began last Sunday, halting 160 commuter trains and 22 long-distance trains.

''The people are getting impatient and everything has to be done to show them what is allowed and what is not allowed.'' Walesa said. ''Such conflicts must be solved and they should be eliminated.''

Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki said Sunday he would not give in to the demands, saying the country cannot afford it.

The Roman Catholic Bishop of Slupsk, Tadeusz Werno, urged the strikes to end the protest but was ignored.

Transport Minister Adam Wieladek said Poland's economy has been affected by the strike as more strikers join the protest.

GRAND RAPIDS, MI (MAY 22) UPI - A single poem by the unconventional e e cummings prompted school board members to withdraw a literature textbook used in a pilot program last year at City High School.

The board split 4-4 on the issue Monday night. Board President Thomas Jackson abstained, saying he could not make a decision until he had read the poem. The tie vote means the text will not be used unless the board reconsiders.

''The poem was open to numerous interpretations, one of which was explicitly sexual,'' said school board member Susan Zimmerman, who was among the four trustees voting to continue use of the textbook in which it appeared.

But fellow board member Gayle Orange, who voted against the textbook, said the poem - interpreted most frequently as a man's reaction to his first drive in a new car - had a ''thinly veiled'' double meaning.

''I found the poem personally objectionable,'' she said.

School staff recommended the textbook be adopted for use by City High seniors and the measure was approved unanimously by the school board's Education Committee, whose members include Orange and another trustee who voted against the text at Monday's session.

Edith Calloway said she backed the text at the committee level because she felt the issue should be discussed by the full board.

Board member John Hair said he voted to use the text chiefly because of recent efforts to censor controversial works of art.

The poet cummings, whose work shunned traditional punctuation and capitalization rules, in 1955 received a special citation from the National Book Awards committee for his Poems, 1923-54.

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN (MAY 22) UPI - U.S.-backed Afghan guerrillas unleashed a barrage of rockets at Kabul airport Tuesday, wounding four people, narrowly missing a U.N. plane and forcing the temporary closure of the facility, officials said.

An Afghan government spokesman said 12 rockets hit the airport area during a one-hour period early Tuesday. He said the shells left one civilian wounded and caused ''significant material damage'' in a residential neighborhood adjacent to the airport.

Three airport employees were wounded but no damage was caused to the facility, an airport official said. The airport was briefly closed and flights from New Delhi and Moscow were canceled.

U.N. sources said a rocket narrowly missed a U.N. plane that had just landed. There were no casualties and no damage to the aircraft.

The guerrillas have staged frequent rocket attacks against Kabul since last summer, leaving more than 1,500 people dead and about 2,000 wounded, according to government figures. The civilian deaths have cost the rebels good will among many Afghanis.

But officials and diplomats say the guerrillas have stepped up bombardments in the past few days as preparations are being made in the city for a traditional grand council, known as a loya jirgah.

On Saturday, 27 rockets hit Kabul, killing one person and wounding 29, including a Yugoslav diplomat and a U.N. official.

The loya jirgah, expected to be held this week, is expected to approve constitutional changes removing references to the leading role of the ruling Peoples Democratic Party of Afghanistan and committing the country to a multiparty pluralism.

The meeting is part of a political offensive by President Najibullah designed to build a more moderate image for his communist regime.

The Moslem guerrillas, who are based mostly in Pakistan and backed by the United States and Saudi Arabia, have rejected Najibullah's peace moves and refused to negotiate or share power with members of the PDPA.

The rebels, known as mujahideen, control about 90 percent of Afghanistan's territory, but they have failed to capture any major urban centers despite the February 1989 withdrawal of Soviet troops backing the government.

Najibullah, meanwhile, has defied Western predictions of his swift overthrow following the Soviet pullout.

However, many observers have described his latest liberalization moves as cosmetic and aimed at influencing the May 30 superpower summit in Washington, where which the Afghanistan stalemate is expected to be discussed.

LONDON (MAY 22) UPI - The Malaysian government has canceled a $676 million order for up to 12 Tornado jets, apparently because the fighter bombers are too sophisticated and costly, the Financial Times reported Tuesday.

The newspaper said the Tornado sale was regarded as the backbone of a $1.69 billion arms deal signed in 1988 by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher with Kuala Lumpur.

It said the decision by the government of Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad who was in London on May 11, will be revealed in a report of the authoritative Flight International magazine Wednesday. Defense Ministry sources confirmed that the order for up to 12 planes has been scrapped, it said.

More than 920 Tornados have been sold by an Anglo-German-Italian consortium, mostly to NATO countries. The twin-engined two-seat supersonic jet is a multi-purpose plane that can be used for reconnaissance, air strikes, troop support and intercepting other aircraft.

Although Malaysia did not specify why it canceled the contract, the Financial Times said the aircraft may have been too expensive and sophisticated for the South East Asian nation's defense needs.

BEIJING (MAY 22) UPI - The ministry that oversees imports of scientific equipment for key industries and research in China shocked Western manufacturers Tuesday by allocating only about $400,000 for purchases at one of the biggest trade shows of the year.

The paltry spending triggered speculation about the course of Chinese investment policies amid a business climate already chilled by Beijing's crackdown on democracy advocates last year. Trade with China fell off markedly after the Chinese army opened fire on protesters last June 3-4, and businesses have struggled to repair the damage.

The $400,000 allocated by China's Ministry of Materials and Equipment fell far short of the millions spent in earlier scientific instrumentation shows, disappointing Chinese buyers and Western manufacturers at the weeklong biennial fair that closed Tuesday.

"There's really a minuscule amount of money being allocated," said David Cantalupo of EGG Instruments Group, a U.S. maker of electronic testing equipment. "Altogether $400,000 for the whole show? My company alone did better than that in the show two years ago. It's a joke," he said.

Chinese importers prefer to buy equipment under ministry auspices because they can obtain scarce dollars at the low government rate of 4.7 yuan each. Importers failing to win ministry funds must scrounge up foreign exchange at the officially sanctioned "gray market" rate of 6.2 yuan per dollar, boosting import prices 32 percent.

"It looks like the gravy train is over," Cantalupo said. "The government can't afford to keep subsidizing imports with the artificially low level of the yuan."

Chinese importers also appeared dismayed by the miserly official outlays, shaking their heads and muttering under their breath as they reviewed tally sheets posted on an exhibition hall wall.

Since a nationwide austerity program was launched in September 1988 to curb inflation and unchecked growth, merchants have struggled to track subtle shifts in Chinese investment policies.

"There were signs in the first half of this year that things were picking up," said Richard Steamer of NIR Systems, a Maryland maker of scientific instruments. "Now the interest is still there, but the money is the problem.

Jack Chan of the Oregon firm Tektronix said the meager spending could be related to China's most-favored nation trading status with the United States, which President Bush has been under pressure to revoke to protest the repressive policies of China's hard-line leadership.

Loss of MFN benefits could cost China $10 billion in annual trade with the United States and Chan said Beijing may be trying to increase the pressure on Bush and the U.S. Congress to keep MFN. "A lot of what's going on here depends on what Bush does with MFN," he said.

Maurice Weld of Britain's Malvern Instruments raised another theory, saying the government's stinginess reflected not just tight finances but a strategy to woo investment.

"The Chinese have been trying to convince the rest of the world how poor they are so other countries will come over here and invest," he said, noting that his firm's 1990 sales would at best only match last year's.

TUCSON, AZ (MAY 22) UPI - The first patient ever kept alive with an artificial heart while awaiting a human heart transplant has now been implanted with a second mechanical heart, doctors said Tuesday.

Dr. Jack Copeland, head of the heart transplant program at University Medical Center, said he hopes Michael Drummond, 30, of Phoenix, will recover sufficiently with the ''bridge to life'' mechanical heart so it can be replaced with another human heart.

Copeland implanted a mini-Jarvik mechanical heart in Drummond's chest Monday night after the human heart he received in 1985 failed.

Drummond, a grocery store employee, made history nearly five years ago as the first person to undergo successful ''bridge-to-life'' mechanical heart surgery. He survived on an artificial heart then for nine days.

Drummond's sister, Debbie Micensky, said Tuesday that her brother ''didn't seem to have too much of a problem'' with the idea of a second artificial heart implant.

''He just wanted to get better,'' Micensky said.

Copeland said Drummond has been unable to eat for the past few weeks and is ''suffering from starvation.''

Nutrition, neurological functions and lung and kidney functions must improve before Drummond can undergo a human heart transplant, Copeland said. He said that might be three or four weeks away.

Drummond experienced a low blood pressure episode during Monday night's surgery, raising doubts about his neurological functions, Copeland said.

''It's not clear that he's going to be in any kind of shape for a transplant,'' the surgeon said. ''I hope that we weren't too late.''

Copeland and his transplant team gave Drummond the smaller Jarvik 7-70 heart during an operation that lasted more than five hours Monday night. Copeland said he used the mini-Jarvik because of fears that scar tissue from previous surgery had left too small a cavity to implant a larger mechanical device.

The mini-Jarvik ''fit nicely'' with no problems, Copeland said.

UMC spokeswoman Jan Howard said Drummond was in ''critical but stable'' condition Tuesday.

Drummond survived for nine days in August and September of 1985 on a full-sized Jarvik hert. He was admitted to UMC recently when his donor heart began failing. Copeland said the right side of the heart had deteroriated and was not working.

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - The Hearst Corp. and Izvestia, the official newspaper of the Soviet government, are exploring the possibility of jointly publishing a weekly Soviet-American newspaper to be distributed in both countries, Hearst said Tuesday.

A statement from the Hearst Corp. said the newspaper would be issued in both Russian and English for its readers in both countries. The first test issue is being edited by Soviet and U.S. journalists in Hearst's Washington, D.C., news bureau and will be published July 4, 1990, the statement said.

Some 25,000 copies of the test issue will be distributed to key government business and educational leaders in Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Washington and other U.S. cities. It will be published in standard newspaper size and will have full-color pictures.

"During the past few years, sweeping and dramatic changes in the Soviet Union have created a climate that makes this type of joint publishing venture an idea worth pursuing," said Frank Bennack, Jr., president and chief executive officer of the Hearst Corp., one of America's largest diversified communications companies.

"Many details remain to be resolved before a regular publishing schedule can be set, but the fact that such a newspaper could contribute significantly to mutual understanding and help foster democratic ideas make this undertaking well worth the effort," Bennack said.

The announcement said the newspaper will cover political, economic, and social issues and trends as well as fashion, sports, the arts, and entertainment.

"Today there is no widespread, direct access to the Russian people through any independent Western publication," said John Wallach, foreign editor of Hearst Newspapers and one of the new publication's founding editors. "That is our audience."

The statement quoted Vladimir Nadeine, correspondent for Izvestia in Washington, as attributing the unprecedented publishing venture to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's glasnost policy. "With the issue of this paper, we have started to push glasnost further and further - to the plain and simple press freedom we need," Nadeine said.

Sergei Dardykin, deputy foreign editor of Izvestia, was quoted as saying it was the first time in the history of mass media "when we, together, have the opportunity to publish a newspaper that we hope will be trusted by both American and Soviet readers."

WHITE'S CITY, NM (MAY 22) UPI - The worst forest fire ever in southeastern New Mexico has charred 27,590 acres of brush and trees in the Lincoln National Forest, officials said Tuesday.

Merle Glenn, National Forest Service spokeswoman, said 520 firefighters were battling the blaze in near 90-degree temperatures. Winds were gusting at 20 mph.

Glenn said the Forest Service hopes to contain the blaze by Wednesday evening.

''Most of the fire is in the Lincoln National Forest, with the exception of some acreage in the Guadalupe Mountains National Park, some Bureau of Land Management land and some private property,'' she said.

Forest Service officials said the previous worst fire in southeastern New Mexico was the Elk Spring fire in 1971 when 26,000 acres burned in the Lincoln National Forest and adjacent lands.

The present fire, dubbed ''The Big Fire,'' has damaged mostly desert brush and pines.

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - Fallen Wall Street arbitrageur Ivan Boesky, testifiying in the fraud trial of a former associate, admitted publicly for the first time Tuesday he traded securities on inside information and knew it was a crime.

Boesky said he shared his tips with stock speculator John Mulheren, who is charged with conspiracy and securities fraud, but Mulheren did not know it was inside information nor where it originated.

Mulheren, who allegedly helped Boesky evade taxes and securities laws in exchange for valuable investment tips, was implicated when Boesky settled charges of inside trading by turning government informant in 1986.

Much of the government's case against Mulheren rests on Boesky, who testified publicly for the first time in U.S. District Court Tuesday. Information from Boesky also helped lead to prosecution of former junk bond king Michael Milken.

Boesky testified he obtained information in the 1980's from investment bankers Dennis Levine and Martin Siegal. Asked by assistant U.S. Attorney E. Scott Gilbert if he knew it was inside information, Boesky replied in a strong voice, "Yes." Asked if he knew it was illegal to trade on that information, but did so nevertheless, he also replied, "Yes."

Boesky, wearing a dark gray suit, white shirt and pocket handkerchief, appeared stern and businesslike. Mulheren, who has spent much of the trial relaxed and slouched in his seat, sat up and watched intently as Boesky testified.

Mulheren, 40, once allegedly threatened to shoot Boesky and is on probation on gun charges stemming from the 1988 incident. His family said he had failed to take the medicine he uses to control manic-depression.

On the witness stand in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, Boesky said he shared tips with Mulheren, but Mulheren did not know it was inside information. "If I provided information to John Mulheren, he would have no knowledge of my source," Boesky testified.

Boesky, 53, pleaded guilty to securities law violations and also agreed to pay $100 million to settle civil charges. He was sentenced to three years in prison and was released last month from a Brooklyn halfway house. Barred for life from participation in the securities industry, Boesky said he now works as a financial consultant.

Boesky also testified he and Mulheren were close friends, particularly after Mulheren developed "an imaginative and what I would call courageous" financial strategy to rescue Boesky's firm from financial troubles in the early 1980s. Mulheren even was named trustee of trusts Boesky established for his children, Boesky said.

Boesky said he agreed to pay both Levine and Siegal between one and five percent of his profits for their inside information. While he never paid Levine, he testified he paid Siegal about $800,000 in cash packed in briefcases.

Levine, formerly with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., pleaded guilty to four counts related to insider trading and was sentenced to two years in prison and paid $11.5 million in restitution. He agreed to cooperate with the government and led investigators to Boesky.

Siegal, a former investment banker at Kidder, Peabody, pleaded guilty to conspiracy and tax evasion charges related to insider trading and agreed to pay $9 million to settle civil charges. He is still awaiting sentencing. Mulheren faces 41 counts of fraud and conspiracy. His trial before U.S. District Judge Miriam Goldman Cedarbaum is expected to take six weeks.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - President Bush indicated to Republican congressional leaders Tuesday that he intends to extend ''most favored nation'' trade status to China, despite reservations over its human rights policy.

House GOP leader Bob Michel and several senators told reporters after an hourlong meeting with Bush that he is ''leaning in the direction'' of continuing the benefits to China ''for the long haul.''

Deputy White House secretary Roman Popadiuk said that Bush has not yet made up his mind.

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft indicated to reporters Monday that the announcement would come this week, but refused to confirm a Wall Street Journal report that the president has decided to extend the special trade status for China.

''Stay tuned,'' Scowcroft said Monday on Air Force One while en route to Los Angeles with the president.

The Wall Street Journal reported the special trade status would be accompanied by a warning that lowest-possible tariff treatment for China's exports to the United States could be revoked if the situation there does not improve.

Michel said that he expected Bush to confer with Democratic leaders Tuesday afternoon, and that a decision would be announced before Congress adjourns Thursday before the Memorial Day holiday.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., said Bush ''gave me the impression he would do it, but he didn't say it. I think he'll do it in the next day or two.''

Both Michel and Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., indicated that the president's strongest argument to extend the trade designation was on grounds of its impact on American and foreign business interests.

Bush has been under heavy pressure from American and other foreign business interests in Hong Kong, a major exit point for goods leaving China for the United States, to renew the most-favored nation status. China also threatened to retaliate in kind if the United States raised tariffs on its products.

Sen. John Chaffee, R-R.I., said the discussion centered on ''its future leverage on China. I strongly recommend we grant it to have some leverage on China. He (Bush) indicated it will be provided this week.''

While the memory of the Tiananmen Square massacre of student protesters last June remains a strong factor, some of the lawmakers said they believed that U.S. ''outrage'' has been ''properly expressed.''

Michel said there was no discussion of a quid pro quo to extract more concessions from China on human rights before granting the extension.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine urged Bush not to renew most favored nation trade status for China, saying withholding it was the ''only decent response'' to China's record on human rights.

In remarks in the Senate, Mitchell said that granting the trade benefit to China would mean agreeing with Chinese leaders that the massacre at Tiananmen Square in Beijing last year was ''much ado about nothing.''

''Should we tacitly adopt the Chinese government's casual dismissal'' of the Tiananmen massacre, Mitchell asked. ''I say we should not.''

''Our nation's future lies with people of China, not with the cynical leaders who think they can paper over the brutal suppression of the anti-democracy movement,'' Mitchell said.

''The Bush administration is sowing the seeds of disaster with respect to the next generation of leaders,'' Mitchell said. ''The question and challenge for the Senate is if we are going to support a regime that cause the death of many of its people ... and called it much ado about nothing.''

China has had its most-favored nation status renewed on an annual basis since 1980. Under the law, Bush's decision, which must be transmitted to Congress, can be overridden with a two-thirds vote of the House and Senate.

A group of Chinese dissident students in Washington, meanwhile, called on Bush to temporarily revoke the most favored nation status and make Chinese reforms - such as the lifting of restrictions on students and the release of prisoners - conditions for its reinstatement.

Haiching Zhao, spokesman for the Independent Federation of Chinese Students and Scholars, said that to revoke the status would give moderate leaders a chance to mount an organized challenge to Beijing's hard-line authorities.

''The factions, the moderates need the opportunity to gather their forces '' he said at a Tuesday news conference. ''It would encourage the reformers to challenge the hard-liners.''

LENEXA, KS (MAY 22) UPI - Syntro Corp. said Tuesday the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office would reassess the validity of a patent for a genetically engineered vaccine previously issued to The Upjohn Co.

Syntro, which requested the reassessment, said the patent and trade office's Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences would interfere between Upjohn's patent and a pending application under which Syntro's animal health subsidiary is licensed.

"We believe that Upjohn's patent was invalidly issued," said J. Donald Todd, Syntro's president and chief executive officer. "The PTO's declaration confirms that our arguments are persuasive and well documented. We are confident that the interference process will confirm the proprietary position of the product which Syntro scientists developed and which SyntroVet markets under the trade name PRV/Marker."

The dispute centers on a genetically engineered vaccine to prevent pseudorabies, an infectious disease of swine. Syntro and Upjohn have been involved in litigation since March 1989 when Upjohn filed suit in Delaware charging Syntro with direct and willful infringement of the Upjohn patent. A similar suit was filed by Upjohn in Kansas against SytroVet in September 1989.

In March 1990, Syntro was granted a partial summary judgment in the Delaware court when the court ruled Syntro could not be held liable for willful or direct infringement. Syntro then filed counterclaims against Upjohn, requesting substantial monetary and punitive damages.

Syntro Corp., of Lenexa and San Diego, is a biotechnology company that develops and commercializes technology with applications in the health sector. SyntroVet was established in 1985 to register, manufacture, and market products resulting from Syntro's research.

JERUSALEM (MAY 22) UPI - Violence flared for a third day Tuesday in the occupied territories with the deaths of three more Palestinians as the father of an Israeli man held for the slayings of seven Arab workers asked the nation for forgiveness for the incident's bloody aftermath.

In Arab East Jerusalem, police sprayed tear gas and used batons to break up a demonstration by several hundred Palestinians in front of the U.S. Consulate to protest the killing of the seven workers at Rishon Le Zion by Ami Popper,21.

Among the protesters, who carried black flags in mourning, were three Israeli Arab members of Parliament.

Arab member of Parliament Abdel Wahab Darousha, his eyes red from tear gas, said the demonstrators wanted the United States to pressure Israel into holding talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization ''instead of killing people.''

At the State Department in Washington, spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said: ''The United States continues to view the absence of a peace procress a continuing cause for violence in the Middle East...The situation is crying out for a peace process to give these people some hope.''

The slayings at Rishon Le Zion last Sunday set off an explosion of rioting in the Israeli-occupied territories and Israeli Arab communities.

''My family and I take part in the anguish of the families of the killed and I hope for a quick recovery of the wounded,'' said Haim Popper, father of the Israeli detained in connection with the slayings of the seven Palestinian workers from Gaza.

''We are shatteren by the enormity of the calamity and we ask forgiveness from the whole nation for all the incidents that happened due to this marginal and crazy act,'' Popper told Army Radio.

Police remained on alert, especially in Jerusalem where Israelis began their ''Jerusalem Day'' celebrations marking the 1967 capture by Israeli forces of the Old City and Arab East Jerusalem.

Among the dead Tuesday was Ata Ali Abu Shaab, 20, from the Gaza village of Bani Suela, Palestinian sources and the military reported. A commander of a military patrol shot and killed the Palestinian after he had detonated a road-side charge near the patrol, military sources said.

In a statement, the U.N. Relief and Works Agency based in Vienna deplored what it called the ''excessive use of force'' by Israeli soldiers in quelling the violence.

Chief of Staff Dan Shomron said he regretted the casualties in the aftermath of the slayings and he said he hoped ''we can avoid additional injuries and reach calm.''

Three Palestinians were killed and at least 13 wounded by army gunfire during the day in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, where authorities have imposed curfews and deployed army reinforcements in an effort to calm the volatile situation.

Violent protests also continued Tuesday in Jordan, where riot police using tear gas and live ammunition killed one man while trying to disperse some 7,000 angry demonstrators in the northern Jordan Baqaa refugee camp. Police shot to death a 14-year-old boy late Monday in the northern Jordanian city of Irbid.

An estimated 60,000 people had demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy in Amman Monday.

The violence Tuesday in the occupied territories, especially the Gaza Strip, was significantly less than on Sunday and Monday, two of the bloodiest days of the 29-month-old Palestinian uprising.

Shmuel Goren, the senior government official who oversees the territories, told Army Radio he hoped the violence would continue to subside.

''The amount (of violence) was very high on the first day, yesterday it was less," he said. "We hope this trend will continue and the calm will continue."

Israeli leaders in a rare show of unanimity strongly condemned the killings and appealed for restraint.

Nearly 1 million Arab residents of the occupied territories, including the entire Gaza Strip, remained under curfew for a third day Tuesday.

Arab shops in the occupied territories were closed and many workers stayed home in a general strike called to protest the slayings but, shops in some Arab towns reopened after a one-day protest strike.

Palestinians defied curfews in several areas of the Gaza Strip, Palestinian sources said. One Palestinian, identified as 18-year-old Ahmed Msabeh, was killed and 13 wounded during clashes, the sources and hospital officials said.

CHICAGO (MAY 22) UPI - The grain market rallied to session highs about midday Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade, then sold off and gave up most of the gains.

Closing prices were mostly lower with the exception of deferred corn.

New-crop corn and soybeans were supported by slow planting progress during the past week.

The weekly crop report showed about 75 percent of the corn and 17 percent of the soybeans have been planted. Additional progress could be made this week, although fields remain wet in much of the Grain Belt and more rain was predicted for the weekend.

Trading in corn was active in response to weather concerns and a possible reduction in yields.

Soybean prices tumbled during the final minutes of the session. Aggressive selling pressured the beans, along with the weakness in soybean oil.

Wheat futures turned lower in sympathy with the losses on the rest of the floor. However, there was underlying support from China's purchase of 400,000 tons of export bonus wheat.

At the close, corn was off 2 1/4 to up 1 3/4, soybeans down 1 3/4 to up 1 1/2, wheat off 2 1/4 to 3 1/2 and oats off a half-cent across the board.

BY WILLIAM B. RIES - UPI

JERUSALEM (MAY 22) UPI - The explosion of Palestinian rage over the killings of seven Arab workers revealed that the Palestinian uprising is far from over and the grievances that fuel it are as deep as ever.

In many ways, the killing of the workers by an Israeli Sunday and the subsequent eruption of violence in the occupied territories and Israeli Arab towns resembled the start of the Palestinian uprising - the intifada, in Arabic - nearly 30 months ago.

In both cases it was individual tragedy, not a political event, that triggered fierce clashes between Arab youths and Israeli soldiers.

In December 1987, riots started in the Gaza Strip and spread throughout the territories after the deaths of four Gazan workers in a traffic accident involving an Israeli truck driver.

The outburst of anger this week, which once again began in the impoverished Gaza refugee camps, sprang from the acute personal vulnerability felt by Palestinians who see themselves at the mercy of any Israeli with a gun and without political or economic recourse.

''We are afraid of people who have guns,'' said an Arab worker who arrived moments after the shooting. ''Who is the terrorist - Palestinians or Israelis?''

Life for the Palestinians, especially the 100,000 Gaza workers who commute daily to jobs in Israel, has become harder during the long months of the intifada because of curfews and strikes. The prospects of a political settlement became more remote with the collapse of the Likud-Labor coalition government two months ago.

''The basic conditions which caused the intifada to break out have not only failed to be eradicated, but have actually grown worse,'' wrote Ze'ev Schiff, military commentator for the daily Ha'aretz newspaper.

Dedi Zucker, a left-wing member of Parliament, said the violence was re-ignited because of a feeling of hopelessness among Palestinians.

''These insulted ones, these oppressed, these disgraced, our backyard workers, those who get rid of the rubbish of our houses, these hopeless ones took to the streets of Beach, Sujaiya and Bureij (in Gaza) because they have no way out,'' he told parliament.

Israeli leaders, displaying rare unanimity, condemned Sunday's killings in Rishon Le Zion and portrayed them as the work of disturbed individual.

But several Israeli newspaper editorials blamed the incident on the political polarization in the government and support shown for extreme right-wing elements by members of the government.

Adding to the Palestinians' sense of frustration is the lack of progress in the peace process. The expectations that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's peace initiative would bring some relief from Israeli occupation were dashed when he refused to approve a U.S. plan for holding Palestinian-Israeli talks.

The government remains as divided as ever over the peace process and paralyzed by the inability of the Labor and Likud parties to form a new government.

In addition, the government has become preoccupied with the absorption of thousands of Soviet Jewish immigrants. Integrating the newcomers is viewed as Israel's biggest challenge, not a resolution of the Palestinian problem.

While waiting to see if the killings will invigorate the languishing uprising, the military fears a new ''cycle of hate'' will be set in motion. In the past, many attacks on Israelis by Palestinians have been motivated by a desire for revenge rather than ideology.

''We have a grave problem with the growing number of people who have a personal account to settle,'' said Maj. Gen. Matan Vilnai, head of the Southern Command that oversees the Gaza Strip.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - The House passed landmark legislation Tuesday outlawing discrimination against America's 43 million mentally and physically disabled people.

''This is a significant and historical step forward for the disabled,'' Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., said.

The House bill, approved on a 403-20 vote, must be reconciled with a somewhat different Senate-passed version before the legislation gets final approval and is sent to President Bush.

One of the most controversial differences is House language aimed at people with contagious diseases who handle food, which critics saw as playing on fears about AIDS.

The Americans with Disabilities Act would protect the disabled from discrimination on the job, on public or private buses or trains, and in public places such as restaurants and theaters. Hearing- and speech-impaired individuals also would be provided access to special telephone services.

The legislation builds on the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which does not address the disabled, and the 1973 Rehabilitation Act, which does not specifically deal with public accommodations, private sector employment and programs not receiving federal money.

The House rejected, 192-227, an attempt by Rep. James Sensenbrenner Jr., R-Wis., to limit the legal remedies for victims of job discrimination to those currently available under the Civil Rights Act. These include getting a court-ordered injunction against bias and the awarding of back pay and attorneys' fees.

Instead, the House will allow disabled victims of discrimination to take advantage of whatever is provided in the pending Civil Rights Act of 1990. Under consideration is a proposal to allow monetary damages for victims.

''The Sensenbrenner amendment looks to the future and says if the remedies for minorities and women victims are strengthened, these remedies won't apply to persons with disabilities,'' Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., said. ''This is gross discrimination in advance.''

House members defeated an attempt to modify a provision that requires all new rail cars purchased or leased by Amtrak or commuter trains to be readily accessible to the disabled.

Rep. William Lipinski, D-Ill., suggested that one accessible car per commuter train would be sufficient, but Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., said that would be segregation.

''What disabled Americans seek is the dignity that can only come with the full recognition of their civil rights. To be segregated is to be misunderstood,'' Collins said.

Last week the House narrowly passed a controversial amendment allowing employers to reassign food handlers with communicable or infectious diseases ''of public significance.''

The debate focused on the fear that people with acquired immune deficiency syndrome could spread the disease through handling food, but opponents contended the amendment panders to unfounded fears about AIDS transmission. Health Secretary Louis Sullivan had said such an amendment is not medically necessary.

To protect the disabled, the bill would require employers to make ''reasonable accommodations'' unless it would impose an ''undue hardship.''

The employment requirements would become effective two years after enactment and would cover employers with more than 25 workers. Two years later, employers with 15 or more employers would be subject to the measure.

The bill also would bar discrimination in hotels and retail stores as well as in restaurants and theaters. Small businesses could, under an approved amendment, phase-in the provisions, which require, for example, newly constructed buildings be readily accessible to the diasbled.

Also, telephone companies would be required to provide relay services allowing people with hearing and speech impairments to place and receive calls.

CINCINNATI (MAY 22) UPI - A judge said Tuesday he will view the controversial Robert Mapplethorpe photo exhibition before it closes at Cincinnati's Contemporary Arts Center this weekend.

Hamilton County Municipal Judge David Albanese, scheduled to be the trial judge in an obscenity case concerning the photos, said he will keep the date and time of his visit a secret in order to prevent his tour from becoming a media circus.

Attorneys for both the prosecution and defense had requested that the judge look at the exhibit before it leaves Cincinnati for Boston.

When the display of photographs opened in Cincinnati six weeks ago, a Hamilton County grand jury indicted the art gallery and its director, Dennis Barrie, on obscenity and child pornography charges. The exhibition, which has attracted a Contemporary Arts Center record 67,000 people, contains several photos of homosexual activity and two photos of nude or nearly nude children.

Albanese said at a pretrial hearing Tuesday he does not know when the case will come to trial. However, because of numerous motions and requests for depositions, a trial is not likely to begin until mid- or late-summer.

Another pretrial hearing is scheduled Thursday to argue motions, including a defense motion to throw out the indictment.

Prosecutor Frank Prouty told the judge he considered it ''critical'' that the judge look at the photos.

''The state requests a view of the scene so the court will have some idea what the exhibit is,'' said Prouty. ''It's critical because the exhibit will be leaving this weekend.'' Defense attorney Marc Mezibov echoed Proty's request.

''The court will make an effort to view the exhibit,'' responded Albanese. ''It will do so at its own convenience, at its leisure, without outside interference.''

Defense attorneys told the judge they intend to take depositions from the parents of two children who appear in the photographs with their genitals exposed. The parents have told reporters they gave Mapplethorpe permission to photograph their children and approve of the photos.

''They may be very crucial witnesses,'' Mezibov said of the parents. ''They are absolutely essential to our case.''

Albanese also granted a request from the American Civil Liberties Union to join the case as a friend of the court. The judge said the ACLU can file legal briefs as the case goes along, but cannot join the defense team in arguing the case.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - The Bush administration will support a $300 million World Bank loan to China despite strong congressional opposition in the aftermath of the Tiananmen massacre, congressional sources said Tuesday. "The Treasury briefed congressional staff about its support for a World Bank $300 million forestry loan to China," a congressional aide said.

The World Bank is currently considering the $300 million forestry loan and a second operation, a $150 million loan for transportation. Under normal circumstances, both loans would be brought up to the bank's board for approval May 29.

After the repression of the pro-democracy movement in Beijing last June, the administration opposed the resumption of full lending to China by multilateral organizations such as the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank and only endorsed loans for "basic human needs and humanitarian purposes."

A congressional aide, who asked not to be identified, said that in its briefing to congressional staff, Treasury claimed that the forestry loan would fit in the definition of basic human needs "because it would create jobs." "They are making the definition of basic human needs so broad, you could drive a truck through it," the aide said.

Sources close to the World Bank said they expected the forestry loan to be considered by the board in its May 29 meeting, and the transportation loan to be shelved for lack of support among the major bank members. Approval of the forestry loan could unleash a storm in Congress, the congressional aide warned.

House Banking Committee Chairman Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, would oppose legislation authorizing a U.S. $3.2 billion contribution to the International Development Association, the concessionary-lending World Bank affiliate which loans to the poorest countries, the source said.

The aide claimed that the Bush administration "is counting that less than a majority of the House of Representatives would oppose" its stance on lending to China. "The opposition (to lending to China) is a majority," he added.

Gonzalez and other House member could also try to hold other administration initiatives, such as the U.S. $1.2 billion contribution to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development that would help East European countries, and some securities law exemptions for the World Bank's International Finance Corporation that helps the private sector in developing nations, the aide said.

The transportation loan was one of seven loans, for a total of $780 million, frozen by the World Bank in the aftermath of the Tiananmen repression. It was to be considered by the bank's board at the beginning of the year, but was shelved after enough support for it could not be found among the major industrial democracies.

The congressional aide said that Japan now favors the resumption of World Bank lending to China. World Bank President Barber Conable favors a resumption of lending to China on the gounds that the institution's statutes prohibit the organization to make lending decisions based on political issues.

Meanwhile, President Bush indicated to Republican congressional leaders that he intends to extend "most favored nation" trade status to China despite reservations over its human rights policy.

After a meeting with Bush, House GOP leader Bob Michel and several senators told reporters that the president is "leaning in the direction" of continuing the MFN benefits to China "for the long haul."

RADNOR, PA (MAY 22) UPI - Two Valley Forge Military Academy seniors were arraigned in Delaware County Court Tuesday on charges of assaulting two freshman cadets under their command.

Two other cadets, a junior and a senior, also had hearings in the case Tuesday in the county's juvenile court.

The four are charged with beating two 15-year-olds with fists, hangers and lacrosse sticks, as well as with throwing darts at them and forcing them to give massages to other cadets. One of the freshmen said one of the seniors also shot BBs in a six-inch space between his legs while he stood against a wall.

The four teenagers were charged by Radnor Township police in March with simple assault, reckless endangerment, criminal conspiracy and harassment after the mother of one of the freshmen filed a complaint. Charges of aggravated assault were dropped against the youths.

All four were officers in charge of the academy's H Company, which is composed of some 60 seventh and eight graders.

Senior Jesse Phillips, 18, was commanding officer of H Company, and additionally was charged with indecent assault in the case.

Orlando Mendoza, 18, was the other adult charged in the case. The remaining two youths, both 17, were charged as juveniles.

The two freshman, both aged 15, have since left the all-boys military school.

Phillips, Mendoza and the two other officers have since been relieved of their command posts and have been demoted to privates, according to school officials.

Valley Forge spokesman Larry Edwards said the academy's own investigation of the charges should be concluded this week.

Edwards characterized the allegations as an ''extremely rare'' occurrence at the academy, which was established in 1928.

Nevertheless, the academy was investigating to see if the alleged abuse was part of a wider problem, Edwards said.

The results of the academy's investigation are expected to be turned over to a quasi-military tribunal by the end of this week, Edwards said, adding that the tribunal could recommend punishment as severe as expulsion.

Edwards said commencement for the academy's senior class is slated for June 1, and that the three seniors could be expelled as late as graduation day.

No criminal trial date has yet been set in Delaware County Court or the county's juvenile court.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Tacit Rainbow is a new, high-tech U.S. anti-radar missile that still is being tested, but the weapon had the Soviet military concerned enough that it became a major issue in recent strategic arms talks.

The air-to-ground missile, also known as the AGM-136A, is designed to use its sophisticated onboard computers and sensors to seek out and destroy enemy air defense radar systems. It packs a 40-pound fragmentation warhead.

''Tacit Rainbow searches hostile territory for radar emitters while entering a target area,'' the Air Force said in a written description of the new weapon, which was classified until recently.

''If radars are not active, the missile will enter a loiter pattern over the target area,'' it added. ''Once a signal is detected, Tacit Rainbow attacks. Should the target be turned off, the missile returns to loiter in the target area, searching for it or other radar emitters.''

The missile became a major point of contention in pre-summit talks in Moscow last week between Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Insisting it is non-nuclear, Baker wanted the weapon excluded from limits on air-launched cruise missiles in strategic arms control agreements expected to be signed in Washington next week by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The Soviet military balked at first, concerned that the new missile - which the Soviets said has a range of 360 miles - could be fitted with a nuclear warhead.

The Soviets relented, however, and agreed to exclude Tacit Rainbow from the restrictions after Baker sought the personal support of Gorbachev and provided a letter describing characteristics and limits of the missile - a letter U.S. officials refused to release.

''The letter contained a simple description of the capabilities of the system and did not make any kinds of commitments or assurances,'' the State Department said Monday, adding that the note pointed out the missile ''is conventional, not nuclear, and describing its range.''

Despite having given the information to the Soviets, U.S. officials said the range of Tacit Rainbow remains classified.

The air-launched version of Tacit Rainbow was developed by the Northrop Corp.'s aircraft division in Newbury Park, Calif., and underwent its first flight test March 30, 1989. It has since completed 12 of 25 tests.

Of the 12 flights, the Air Force ''scored six as fully successful, five as partially successful and one as unsuccessful,'' said Helen Kavanaugh, spokeswoman for the Aeronautical Systems Division at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio, where the program is managed.

The Tacit Rainbow is being test-launched from B-52 bombers and Navy A-6 attack jets at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The Raytheon Co. of Bedford, Mass., is developing a ground-launched version of the missile for the Army that would be fired from rocket launchers.

Kavanaugh said $231 million was included in Bush's 1991 defense budget for production of the air-launched missile, although a decision of whether to go ahead with production will not be made by the Air Force until the spring or summer of 1991.

The Air Force will not say how many missiles it plans to buy, and defense officials have declined to release per-missile cost estimates of Tacit Rainbow.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (MAY 22) UPI - Prime Minister-designate Jozsef Antall called for his country's withdrawal from the Warsaw Pact in a speech Tuesday, setting the agenda for Hungary's first non-communist government in 43 years.

Antall, who was expected to be elected prime minister by Parliament Wednesday, also said he would not agree to an extension of a June 30, 1991 deadline for the withdrawal of all Soviet troops from Hungary.

The Democratic Forum leader's 90-minute speech to the new Parliament was his first clear and public indication that he supports Hungary's withdrawal from the Warsaw Pact. In previous interviews he said he believed the Soviet-led alliance would dissolve itself in time.

''Hungary's membership in the Warsaw Pact is contrary to the will of the people, as it was expressed in 1956 (at the time of the anti-communist revolution) and confirmed by the latest election,'' Antall said.

He said Hungary's military defense in the future should come under a new ''all-European security and cooperation system.''

The Parliament already has agreed to consider a proposal by the opposition Alliance of Free Democrats for immediate negotitions aimed at ending Hungary's involvement in the Warsaw Pact.

Referring to Red Army troops that are based in Hungary as part of Budapest's Warsaw Pact commitments, Antall said his government will strive to ''make sure that the Soviet troops leave Hungary before June 30, 1991.''

Czechoslovakia and Hungary have won agreements from Moscow for the withdrawal of all Soviet troops from both countries by the middle of next year, but in recent weeks Soviet military officials have complained they need more time to complete the pullout.

After a debate about Antall's proposed government program, the Parliament is expected to formally elected him prime minister and approve his 16-member Cabinet on Wednesday.

Antall, whose center-right Democratic Forum was the biggest winner in multiparty elections in March and April, would become Hungary's first non-communist head of government in 43 years.

He was named prime-minister desigate in the new Parliament's inaugural session May 3.

Despite his intention to break with the Warsaw Pact, Antall said his government hoped to maintain ''good neighborly relations based on equal rights'' with all Hungary's neighbors, including the Soviet Union.

He promised Hungarians a ''government of the center, which means a government of freedom in which every Hungarian citizen would have equal rights and opportunities.''

''This is a moment of great change,'' Antall said in his speech. ''A revolution has taken place in Hungary, which has brought the possibility of the exercise of full human rights.''

Hungary's new coalition government is dominated by the Democratic Forum, with support from two smaller conservative parties, the Independent Smallholders Party and the Christian Democratic Party.

The Forum's chief non-communist rival, the Alliance of Free Democrats, and the reformed communists, who call themselves the Hungarian Socialist Party were not given positions in the new government.

With an external debt of about $22 billion in a country of about 11 million people, Hungary is facing its most difficult period in recent years.

The outgoing Cabinet of Socialist Prime Minster Miklos Nemeth, which had been in power for about 18 months, will go down in history as the communist government that engineered the changeover from one-party rule to multiparty democracy. But it also leaves a legacy of formidable social and economic problems.

Antall's nominee for finance minister, Ferenc Rabar, made clear during confirmation hearings Monday the new government plans to completely overhaul Hungary's centrally controlled economy, while maintaining a heavy emphasis on social programs.

Rabar said the government would try simultaneously to liberalize production and accelerate privatization while curbing inflation, but he admitted the changes were bound to bring hardships for many.

He said, ''1990 will be a year of suffering for Hungarians.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - A genetically engineered version of a naturally occuring protein appears effective at increasing infection-fighting white blood cells in patients with two bone marrow diseases, a researcher reported Tuesday.

Dr. John Thompson of the University of Washington in Seattle told a meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology a substance called granulocyte macrophage colony stimulating factor, or GM-CSF, appears promising.

In a study, 100 patients with myelodysplastic syndrome (MDS) and aplastic anemia (AA) were given GM-CSF through 20 university medical centers nationwide beginning in February 1989.

The patients were randomly assigned to two groups, one receiving the drug and the other transfusions and antibotics alone with no GM-CSF, he said.

In preliminary findings, results were analyzed from the University of Washington, Cornell University and the University of Chicago.

''The first patients to enter the expanded study have now been treated for over nine months,'' Thompson said. ''With continued injections, the improvement in white blood cell count is sustained. The patients who received GM-CSF show a five- to 100-fold increase in their white blood cell counts.''

Some patients reported side-effects, such as rashes and bone pain, but they stopped after dosages were decreased, Thompson said.

Both diseases can be fatal by reducing the function of the bone marrow, which produces white blood cells needed to protect the body from infection.

''Although there were previous suggestions that the drug could have a positive effect on white blood cell counts in MDS patients we wanted to confirm these results in MDS as well as AA patients and also determine if the improvement in the number of circulating white blood cells could result in a meaningful decrease in infection rates along with better survival rates and quality of life for the patients involved,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - China, one of the world's largest importers of wheat, bought 399,350 metric tons of U.S. wheat at subsidized prices - its first large purchase in several weeks, the Agriculture Department reported Tuesday.

The wheat was worth $49.6 million, based on Chicago prices. There are 36.7 bushels of wheat in a metric ton of 2,204.6 pounds, so the sale called for delivery of 14.6 million bushels during July and August.

Officials announced the decision to sell the wheat through the Export Enhancement Program on the same day President Bush announced he was leaning toward renewing "most favored nation" trade status with Beijing.

China has purchased 5.68 million tons of U.S. wheat for delivery in the marketing year that ends May 31. With the latest transaction, it has ordered 1.44 million tons for delivery in the new wheat marketing year.

It was the first major Chinese purchase in more than two months. The Agriculture Department on May 2 offered China the opportunity to buy up to 2 million tons of wheat at subsidized prices.

Under the EEP, exporters are given bonus amounts of surplus commodities if they lower their prices to make a sale to a targeted nation. Seven exporters were given subsidies worth $11.20, or 30.5 cents a bushel, for the sale to China.

MOSCOW (MAY 22) UPI - The Lithuanian Parliament Tuesday again rejected Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand that the republic suspend its declaration of independence before starting any negotiations on secession.

The Parliament voted to combine three draft proposals into a final response to Gorbachev, offering to suspend laws implementing independence as soon as talks begin, but preserving the independence declaration itself.

''That's like it was before - non-negotiable,'' government spokeswoman Rita Dapkus said of the independence proclamation.

Lithuania has repeatedly said it is willing to discuss anything except its March 11 declaration, and Gorbachev has been just as adamant that the republic annul or freeze the unilateral act.

In Moscow, Gorbachev met with the presidents of Estonia and Latvia and repeated his demand that the rebellious Baltic republics rescind or freeze their independence declarations before any talks can be held.

''It did not bring any new results,'' Allen Martinson, a spokesman for the Estonian mission in Moscow, said of the talks - the first known meeting between Gorbachev and the presidents of any of the three republics since their proclamations over the past 10 weeks.

Martinson said Estonian President Arnold Ruutel and Latvian President Anatolijs Gorbunovs met privately with Gorbachev for 20 minutes while they were in Moscow for a meeting of the Council of Federation, the new advisory group of the 15 Soviet republics' leaders that Tuesday approved an economic reform plan.

The independent Interfax news service quoted Ruutel as saying after the meeting that ''so far the deadlock has not been broken, with each side sticking to its own opinion and unwilling to compromise on its positions.''

In Estonia Tuesday, the official Soviet news agency Tass said strikes called Monday to protest the independence drive had spread to 21 enterprises where mainly ethnic Russian workers walked off the job.

Estonian media said Monday the strikes were having little effect on businesses in the republic.

In Lithuania, the Parliament heard a report from Deputy Prime Minister Algirdas Brazauskas outlining the economic problems caused by the blockade imposed by Gorbachev after the declaration of independence.

Brazauskas said the republic had all but run out of fuel supplies because of the Soviet cutoff of oil, and all private sales of gasoline were to be stopped Thursday.

Interfax reported Tuesday that a tanker headed for Lithuania from Rotterdam with 80,000 tons of oil was moored off the coast because Soviet border guards were refusing to allow it into the port of Klaipeda, but Dapkus denied the report.

There have been rumors for weeks that a tanker was on its way to Klaipeda with oil bought by Lithuanian emigres, but there has been no official confirmation or sign of the ship at the Lithuanian port.

Brazauskas said the republic was also running short of such essentials as vegetable oil and sugar, but no new provisions for rationing food were announced.

The Lithuanian official said direct trade agreements have been signed with enterprises in Byelorussia, the Ukraine and Russia, but a rail transport blockade has prevented any goods from being traded.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Chinese students announced plans Tuesday for nationwide rallies and marches in memory of Tiananmen Square and urged all Americans to wear traditional mourning white on June 4 to mark the massacre of a year ago.

''The people in China are not able to mourn for the people who died for democracy. We must mourn for them,'' said Yongchuan Liu, president of the Independent Federation of Chinese Students and Scholars.

The group, which represents the interests of 40,000 Chinese students in the United States, urged President Bush to temporarily revoke China's ''most favored nation'' trade status to pressure Chinese authorities toward reform.

Republican congressional leaders said Bush was leaning Tuesday toward renewing the status, which gives Beijing special tax and trade concessions despite reservations about China's human rights policy.

Student leaders said at a news conference that U.S. protests from June 2-5 will include an art exhibit and rally in Washington, a march down Broadway in New York, memorial services in Chicago and Houston and a concert in Los Angeles.

Soliders killed an unknown number of students - believed to be in the hundreds - on the night of June 4, 1989, in and around Beijing's Tiananmen Square when the Chinese military cracked down on a weeks-long pro-democracy protest led by students.

Some students were tried and executed for their part in the movement, and many dissidents are still jailed in China.

Liu urged all Americans, including Bush, to wear white, the traditional color of mourning in China, on June 4 in memory of the massacre.

''We will be asking the Chinese people, the American people, President Bush and Congress to wear white June 4 and join us in five minutes of silence,'' he said.

Haiching Zhao, chairman of the group's committee on Chinese student affairs, said that by temporarily lifting the most favored nation status, the United States would be giving moderates in Beijing an opportunity to mount a challenge against the hard-line leadership.

''The factions, the moderates need the opportunity to gather their forces '' Zhao said. ''It would encourage the reformers to challenge the hard-liners.''

The student group sent a letter to Bush urging him to set a number of conditions for the renewal of the trade agreement, such as China's lifting of restrictions on students and the release of prisoners.

Zhao said recent moves by Beijing indicate China can be moved by international pressure.

''The Chinese government will give in,'' he said, citing Beijing's recent decisions to lift martial law in Tibet and China.

''This is human rights vs. business, and the Chinese need to be told that the world stands firm on human rights,'' Zhao said.

MELBOURNE BEACH, FL (MAY 22) UPI - One of two people shot by a distraught church member said Tuesday the gunman was upset over the molding used in a church remodeling project and killed himself in the very early stages of a six-hour standoff.

Authorities waited outside the church for about six hours Monday before entering the building to find the gunman, Douglas James Pearson, dead of a gunshot wound to the head.

''He shot me at 9:20 Monday morning, and he shot himself about 9:25. It was in the next room, but I could see,'' said George Smodell, 62, the deacon of St. Sebastian Episcopal Church.

Pearson, a church member, was a manic depressive, said the church's pastor the Rev. Perry Collins.

Smodell was in stable condition Tuesday at Holmes Regional Medical Center in Melbourne. A bullet from a .45-caliber pistol - one of two guns Pearson carried - pierced Smodell's left leg and penetrated his right leg, fracturing a bone.

Before arriving at the church, Pearson, 47, shot Diane Conarroe, the wife of another church official, at her home, the Brevard County sheriff's office said.

Conarroe was listed in critical but stable condition Tuesday at Holmes, said hospital spokeswoman Valerie Davis.

Smodell said Pearson, head of a major church remodeling project, entered the church office and fired into a telephone and a wall before ordering church secretary Barbara Baldwin and painter David Oraboni to leave.

''He said that he was going to have to shoot me because I disagreed with him about a bunch of molding, a real big issue,'' Smodell said.

Conarroe's husband, John ''Jay'' Conarroe, the church's junior warden, removed some wood trim last Wednesday so the floor could be cleaned, Smodell said.

''He said, 'I just wounded you, but I'm going to kill myself,' and I asked him to think about it and not to do any more damage and maybe go up to the altar and pray about it, but he just wouldn't do it.

''Little things like that upset him. He just was easily depressed, and he wanted to be the boss, and it wasn't working out that way,'' Smodell said.

Smodell said he did not try to crawl out of the church because he believed he would be rescued.

''I figured somebody would come and get me. I didn't dare move because I had been bleeding real bad. I said a prayer, and I stopped bleeding, and I didn't want to move because I'd start again and bleed to death before someone saw me,'' he said.

''There was a radio sitting there very low, and I could hear them say they were surrounding the place, and I threw a shoe through the window and started hollering, but nobody heard me,'' he said.

Smodell said he crawled the 12 to 15 feet to the church's front door about 3:15 p.m., when the assault began, because tear gas had been fired into the building.

Smodell, also a part-time aluminum contractor, said he initially was in great pain but was feeling better Tuesday. ''I'm doing pretty good,'' he said.

He said doctors told him he could expect to recover in six to seven weeks.

Collins said Pearson was manic depressive and had not attended Sunday services - something very unusual - but had come to his house Sunday evening and talked to the pastor for about three hours.

Ted Ferris, a close friend and church member, said Pearson called him about 7:30 a.m. Monday and talked about a church meeting that morning being his ''last hurrah.''

''He was taking medication for that, but he had stopped taking it, off and on he had stopped taking it,'' said Smodell. ''His wife was worried about him, and Father Collin and I had worried about him too because he had talked about killing himself.''

KANSAS CITY, MO (MAY 22) UPI - Marion Merrell Dow Inc. plans to "turn up the heat" in marketing its Cardizem product, including using a sales force that doubled when the company was formed, and increasing advertising by 50 percent, President Fred Lyons said Tuesday.

Lyons told shareholders at the first annual meeting since Marion Merrell Dow was formed last December the company would fight competition for Marion Merrell's cardiovascular and hypertension drug from similar products marketed by rivals Pfizer and Searle.

Combined sales of Cardizem and a sustained-release version of the drug are expected to reach $1 billion this year. Sales of Cardizem products were $667 million in 1989. Lyons said Marion Merrell also plans to extend the Cardizem line to include an injectable form of the drug.

Marion Merrell has requested Food and Drug Administration approval of once-a-day versions of Cardizem as well as Seldane, the company's non-sedating antihistamine, and Pentasa, a product to fight ulcerative colitis.

Lyons' discussion of Marion Merrell Dow products included drugs marketed in Europe and Japan, in keeping with the company's goal of making Marion Merrell a leader in the global marketplace for prescription drugs.

Chairman Joseph G. Temple said the new company still has much to accomplish, but first-quarter results, the first full quarter for Marion Merrell, were promising. Earnings during the quarter were $111 million on sales of $578 million.

Marion Merrell was formed by a merger of Marion Laboratories Inc. of Kansas City and Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc. of Cincinnati.

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - Two major U.S. oil companies said Tuesday they had settled out of court in a case that has thrown U.S. trading in Britain's North Sea Brent crude oil into a legal muddle.

Exxon Corp. and the Conoco Inc. unit of Du Pont in Houston said they had reached an out-of-court settlement with Transnor (Bermuda) Ltd., which had claimed losses from the two companies for trading in an allegedly illegal futures market. The trial before the U.S. District Court was scheduled to begin this week.

"The parties have reached an out-of-court settlement on this matter. The parties have agreed that the terms of the settlement shall remain confidential," the brief statement said.

In rejecting last month a motion of the two companies to dismiss the case, Judge William Connor had ruled that Brent trades constituted a futures market under the U.S. Commodity Exchange Act and came under the jurisdication of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. The CFTC has been working hard to wiggle out from under what was apparently the judge's legal blunder into the arcane world of futures trading.

In a joint statement last week with Britain's Department of Trade and Industry, the CFTC said, "The Brent market is an international market and cannot be regarded as or regulated as if it were exclusively a U.S. market."

A CFTC task force said that the Brent market in question was not a futures market since it involved negotiated trades between two commercial parties, each of which were capable of making or taking delivery of the oil, and was not offered to the general public.

The Brent trades were therefore excluded from the jurisdiction of the Commodity Exchange Act and no action against U.S. companies trading in Brent should be taken, the task force said.

Unlike trades involving the purchase and delivery of a product, the futures market concerns contracts for future delivery at a specified time. In the futures market, the commodity may be traded many times before actual delivery.

A CFTC spokesman said the task force is currently writing "a forthcoming statutory interpretation" on the Brent issue. But, the judge's ruling has apparently still left the oil industry in a political limbo, unsure about prospects for trading in the Brent.

An Exxon spokesman said, "The issue will not be fully resolved until it is tested in court. Until further action is taken by the CFTC, Exxon does not intend to trade in the Brent forward market from its U.S. offices, or with U.S.-based companies, but is considering other possibilities."

Exxon stopped trading in Brent crude "shortly after the judge's decision," the spokesman said. No comment could be obtained from Conoco on the Houston company's status with regard to Brent trading.

ASPEN, Colo. (MAY 22) UPI - A pornographic movie producer testified Tuesday she saw widespread drug use during a five-hour visit to the home of gonzo journalist Hunter S. Thompson last winter.

Thompson, 52, charged with five felony counts of possession of illegal drugs and dynamite and one misdemeanor count of sexual assault, appeared in Pitkin County District Court for a pre-trial hearing.

The charges were filed after the producer, Gail Palmer-Slater, 35, told sheriff's deputies she was assaulted during a visit with Thompson at his Woody Creek home outside Aspen last Feb. 21. She told deputies Thompson grabbed her left breast.

The district attorney's office conducted an 11-hour search of Thompson's house on Feb. 26, which investigators said turned up cocaine, marijuana, Valium-type pills, LSD, four sticks of dynamite and three blasting caps.

The atmosphere outside the courthouse was almost festive Tuesday as 50 people, each given access cards, crowded inside the courtroom. Cars drove by with the horns honking and a group of Thompson's supporters paraded outside carrying signs.

Tourists and locals stopped to take pictures and videos.

The writer's supporters included Roxi and Gigi, two young porno stars from San Francisco, and Jim and Artie Mitchell, owners of a chain of pornography theaters and producers of XXX-rated movies in the Bay area. They drove into town in a red convertible.

Thompson, whose bizarre and unrestrained lifestyle and writings won him the sobriquet ''gonzo journalist,'' entered the courthouse through a backdoor. He occasionally snickered and grinned during the testimony. Thompson has accused the authorities of being on a ''witch hunt.''

Palmer-Slater, who said she produced but did not appear in pornographic films, testified she sent Thompson a greeting card that said, ''Sex is a dirty business but somebody's got to do it.'' She had included a handwritten note that said ''We could have a real good time.''

Palmer-Slater also said she sent Thompson a video entitled ''Shapeup for Sensational Sex'' and asked him for an interview. She said she hoped the card and video would get his attention.

Palmer-Slater said her purpose in meeting with Thompson was to obtain the movie rights to his novel, ''Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas,'' although she also testified that an ''undercover reporter'' named Dan Shriner and a ''freelance undercover cop named Moon'' had suggested she might persuade Thompson to meet with them.

After arriving at Thompson's house about 7 p.m., Palmer-Slater testified she witnessed use of drugs by Thompson and several of his friends. She said she was offered some ''white powdery fluffy stuff,'' which she refused.

At one point, she said, Thompson walked into the kitchen, looked at the counter and said, ''Oh look, coke,'' and dipped his head into the substance.

Thompson, his nostrils covered with a white residue, said, ''There's coke everywhere I look in this house. That's why I love this house,'' Palmer-Slater testified.

Palmer-Slater did not testify about the alleged sexual assault incident.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (MAY 22) UPI - The European Community's executive commission proposed Tuesday to spend more than $8.3 billion on assistance to 12 Mediterranean countries in an effort to stem emigration.

Abel Matutes, commissioner in charge of relations with the Mediterranean area, told a news conference the aid would include $2.28 billion in grants from the EC budget between 1992 and 1996.

He said the move would almost triple aid granted the countries under the present EC five-year assistance program.

Another $6.07 billion would be made available in loans from the European investment bank.

Matutes said about 5 million immigrants from the 12 countries were now living in the European Community and that their numbers were expected to grow by 5 million a year.

''Emigration is not a solution to their problem,'' he said. ''We have to help them to solve their problems.''

Matutes said the EC money would go toward new investments, environmental programs, and improved training and scientific cooperation. He said improving their exports would give the countries easier access to the EC market.

''Our plan is a strategic response to the evolving situation,'' he said.

The 12 countries included in the agreement - Algeria, Cyprus, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Malta, Morocco, Syria, Tunisia, Turkey and Yugoslavia - have a population of about 200 million, Matutes said.

By the year 2025 their population will total 400 million, while that in the Community will remain roughly 320 million, he said.

Matutes said the EC feared the Mediterranean countries will face increased unemployment, balance of trade deficits and problems finding enough food.

''This tends to give rise to political instability,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Eleven Democratic senators, in a rebuke to President Bush, introduced legislation Tuesday to provide $25 million for an international fund to help developing nations reduce the use of ozone-depleting chemicals.

The senators, including Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, said the legislation is needed because Bush refused to join other industrialized nations in creating the fund, making the United States ''an environmental outcast.''

Earlier this month, Bush instructed U.S. delegates to an international ozone depletion meeting in Geneva to reject requests that the United States provide $25 million over three years for the effort.

The fund's supporters, which included most of the countries of Western Europe, said developing nations need help in switching from ozone-depleting chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, to new substitute chemicals that are environmentally preferable but more costly.

But White House officials said the international fund was not necessary because there are other institutions, such as the World Bank, that finance Third World efforts to cut CFC use.

The senators criticized the administration's position as short-sighted, saying failure to help Third World nations could accelerate depletion of Earth's protective ozone layer, worsening possible health risks worldwide from higher levels of ultraviolet solar radiation.

The lawmakers said current efforts by industrialized nations to reduce CFC emissions would not pay off if developing nations increase CFC use in their drive to raise living standards.

''We cannot accept the administration's preference for environmental negligence,'' said Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., the bill's prime sponsor.

''And we will not allow the United States to become an environmental outcast, isolated within a world community that recognizes the urgency of the need for action,'' he said.

CFCs, widely used in refrigeration, cleaning solvents and the production of foam products, are the major cause of depletion of the ozone layer. Health experts say heightened ultraviolet radiation may cause millions of additional cases of skin cancer and cataracts and damage the human immune systems.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Three Democrats pressed for the inclusion of a broad ban on assault weapons in anti-crime legislation Tuesday and one warned that the National Rifle Association has ''pulled out all the stops'' to kill the move.

Sens. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Howard Metzenbaum D-Ohio, flanked by representative from several police organizations, called for enactment of the ban at a news conference as the Senate prepared to begin work on the bill.

''We have a tough fight ahead of us,'' Metzenbaum said. ''The National Rifle Association has pulled out all the stops to get this bill and this amendment defeated.''

''Their tactic of lies and distortion will be at work today,'' Metzenbaum said.

Senate Democrats and Republicans have proposed competing anti-crime bills - with each claiming theirs is the toughest - to start off what is expected to be a bitter, partisan fight.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said he is certain crime will be an issue in the November elections but added, ''This bill may add but not cause'' it to be used in the fall campaigns.

Both bills deal with an expansion of the death penalty, a curb on appeals, a relaxed standard for search and seizure by police, and with the question of semi-automatic weapons used increasingly by drug traffickers and other criminals.

Both bills also contain numerous other provisions and amendments are expected from senators who have not been closely involved in drafting the two major alternatives.

The Democratic bill included the DeConcini proposal that ban the importation of five assault weapons and the manufacture of four domestic ones used most often in violent and drug-related crimes and increases penalties for using these weapons.

''These weapons are the choice of drug dealers in our country,'' DeConcini said. ''In fact, they are the choice of drug dealers worldwide.''

''I believe strongly in our Second Amendment right to bear arms,'' he added. ''But I also believe that the right of our citizens to live is the most precious right we have.''

Metzenbaum's amendment would expand the DeConcini proposal by 12 additional assualt weapons ''identified by the police as being the most deadly. These are not guns used by hunters and sportsmen. They are weapons of war designed for use in combat conditions.''

Neither the DeConcini or Metzenbaum proposals would take away these weapons from people who now have them.

The Bush administration and Senate Republicans do not support the ban on assault weapons proposed by the Democrats.

The Republican bill would, however, increase the penalties for the use of assault weapons in the commission of a violent or drug-trafficking offense and would make it illegal to assemble from imported parts any semi-automatic weapon identical to those President Bush has banned through executive order.

AMMAN, JORDAN (MAY 22) UPI - Two Palestinians were killed Tuesday in clashes with Jordanian security forces sparked by an Israeli man's killing of seven Arabs in the Gaza Strip, the government said.

Unofficial sources said at least nine Palestinians were killed.

On Monday, the Jordanian government admitted that police shot to death a 14-year-old boy. Sources in the Amman hospital said the boy was found with four bullets in the chest.

A second 14-year-old boy died during clashes on Tuesday, Palestinian and family sources said. Both youths were reported to have been killed in the northern Jordanian city of Irbid, 50 miles north of Amman.

''Two people died during clashes (on Tuesday) with police,'' the official Petra news agency quoted a Jordanian government spokesman as saying.

The spokesman did not name the dead or say where they had died, only that the incidents took place in various parts of the country and they ''fired shots at police officers.''

Officials at Palestinian refugee camps in Jordan denied that demonstrators fired at police, and accused the Jordanian authorities of using excessive force.

Unofficial Palestinian sources told United Press International in Amman that at least nine Palestinian demonstrators died Tuesday in clashes with security forces around the country, bringing the total death toll in two days to ten.

Jordan's Cabinet held an emergency session Tuesday and Prime Minister Mudar Badran said afterwards the governnment would take ''all measures to ensure law and order within the country.''

Some of Tuesday's clashes occurred when Jordanian police stormed the northern Jordan Baqaa Palestinian refugee camp to quell protests after Sunday's killings in Israel.

Witnesses said some 300 Jordanian riot police using 40 armored vehicles and fired live bullets to enter the Baqaa camp, home to some 48,000 Palestinian refugees, and demolished at least one house while the residents were still inside, injuring 10 of them.

The government did not immediately provide details of the number of people arrested, but said residents had burned hundreds of tires, raised black flags of mourning and were chanting anti-Israeli and anti-American slogans.

In other incidents, police sealed off all roads leading to the city of Zerqa, situated some 10 miles north of Amman, after about 10,000 Palestinians marched to protest the weekend killings in Israel.

In Irbid, police Tuesday dispersed some 15,000 demonstrators trying to reach Yarmouk University. There were no immediate reports of casualties or arrests.

On Monday, a Palestinian shot and wounded nine French tourists and a Jordanian in Amman, apparently to avenge the killings in Israel, authorities said. The suspect was identified as Ahmad Badwan, a 28-year-old Palestinian originally from the Gaza Strip, who lives in Amman and carried a temporary Jordanian passport.

On Monday, thousands of Palestinians and Jordanians protesting the Israeli slayings clashed with riot police outside the U.S. Embassy in Amman.

About 60,000 Palestinian and Jordanian demonstrators tried to storm the U.S. Embassy complex, but were beaten back by riot police who fired tear gas and beat marchers with batons.

Witnesses said at least three police officers were wounded in the Monday clashes, and there were an undetermined number of injuries and arrests among the demonstrators, who hurled stones and fire bombs at security forces.

The witnesses said the army also positioned at least five armored cars around the heavily guarded U.S. Embassy to prevent demonstrators from entering.

They said the demonstrators, who included Moslem extremists waving copies of the Moslem holy book the Koran, and shouting ''Allah Akhbar!'' or ''God is Great!'' burned at least 60 cars parked in the downtown Amman area.

It was the largest demonstration seen in the Jordanian capital in recent years.

ATLANTA (MAY 22) UPI - The Atlanta Hawks, looking for a coach who calmly draws off the strengths of his players, Tuesday named Bob Weiss as the successor to fiery Mike Fratello.

Weiss coached San Antonio for two seasons and had a 59-105 record. He spent this past season as an assistant with Orlando. Hawks General Manager Pete Babcock said Weiss is the ''best person to coach this particular team.''

He replaces Fratello, who had 50 or more wins four straight seasons before the Hawks missed the NBA playoffs this past season after going 41-41. He was eased out a month ago after seven years although Babcock called him one of the ''top five coaches in the NBA.''

Babcock said he and Hawks President Stan Kasten started with a long list of prospective candidates.

''We cut the list to seven and talked with four of those seven,'' he said. ''All four had terrific interviews. All were very capable. We felt Bobby was the best for the comfort level of this team.''

Weiss said he not sure which direction the Hawks will take.

''You get a different perspective when you play against a team,'' he said. ''I need to meet with the players and get their input. I hope I can direct the talent in the right direction.

''My style is to coach what my players can do. I don't have a real style. I don't try to force players to fit into my system.''

Weiss is said to be more of a ''player coach'' than Fratello, who made no attempt to disguise his displeasure when things failed to go the way he wanted.

''A player coach cares about his players,'' Weiss said. ''It's like when you discipline one of your children. You get on them, but they know you like them.''

Weiss, 48, played at Penn State and was drafted by Philadelphia in the third round in 1965. He played 12 seasons in the NBA - with Philadelphia, Seattle, Milwaukee, Chicago, Buffalo and Washington, before retiring after the 1976-77 season.

''I'm better prepared than when I took over at San Antonio (1986),'' he said. ''When I started, I had a team that was getting old. We changed to a much younger team. This will be a third experience, having a team with talent.''

Weiss has a reputation for a calm approach to the game.

''I don't always remain calm,'' he said. ''But I'm not a berater. I go with the assumption that people want to do what we want them to do. We all want to win. I'd only get upset when I believe a player is not on the same wavelength.

''For so many years, the stereotype (of an NBA coach) was a ranter and a raver. Our season is too long for a galley slave driver. You're a man among men and you go by how you can get it done.''

Weiss was asked if he could lead the Hawks to 50 victories next season.

''I'm not going to put myself in a box by predicting how many games we will win,'' he said. ''One thing about this team is that these players don't have to prove themselves. They can concentrate on winning.''

Said Babcock: ''Bringing Bobby in is not a process of rebuilding. It will be more of a fine tuning. We don't want to hurt the talent level, but, rather, improve the chemistry.''

Weiss said he has been out of basketball one year since the fourth grade.

''That was the year after I retired as a player,'' he said. ''I had a good job that year, but I felt like a wood carver selling aluminum siding. I only got the juices flowing when I met with old friends and talked about basketball.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Police will reinstate special overtime police patrols in the historic Georgetown area this weekend after reports of unprovoked attacks on visitors, residents and police officers, Police Chief Isaac Fulwood told business leaders Tuesday.

The special patrols used in the past to bolster police presence on busy nights in Georgetown - a favorite drinking area for city residents and suburbanites - were supposed to have been in place last weekend, but were cancelled because of budget restraints.

Five officers and at least two pedestrians were reportely injured in separate incidents Saturday night involving large bands of young men on Georgetown streets. Police spokesman Lt. Reginald Smith was quoted as telling visitors to ''avoid Georgetown if they can'' because of the danger sparking an outcry from merchants.

Fulwood, in a morning meeting with business leaders, announced special police overtime patrols, including a ''Georgetown summer detail,'' would be reinstated beginning this weekend, said Beth Davis, executive director of the Georgetown Business and Professional Association.

''The detail is very effective,'' she said, noting that expanded police presence has been used the past six years. ''It's tremendously successful in controlling crowds.''

Davis also predicted the extra police would ''negate'' the statements attributed to Smith, which were included in a front page story in The Washington Post Tuesday. ''I think the statements are no longer relevant '' Davis said.

Smith could not be reached for comment.

''I think that this publicity is exaggerating the actual level of the problem,'' said Kristin Mueller, general manager of the 120-store Georgetown Park mall. ''We're dealing in perceptions here instead of reality.''

Greg Casten, manager of Tony & Joe's Seafood Place, said the publicity ''is not going to help business, I can promise you that.''

''There's an awful lot of people in Georgetown,'' he said. ''Whenever you get a lot of people in one place drinking ... problems can occur.''

Georgetown is a river-front section of town known for its nightlife, shopping and history.

''When people are being told to stay out of Georgetown or being told to go directly to their place of destination and not to walk the street,'' it damages business, said Mueller. ''The charm is being able to wander around and explore and have fun.''

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - Marla Maples, the ''other woman'' in the marital split between Donald and Ivana Trump, will be the spokeswoman for No Excuses Jeans, it was disclosed Tuesday.

Maples will take the job once held by Donna Rice, whose reported romance with Gary Hart helped end his 1988 presidential bid, and TV entertainer Joan Rivers, said Laura Finnerty, a spokeswoman for New Retail Concepts, manufacturer of No Excuses Jeans.

Finnerty said a formal announcement of her appointment will be made Wednesday at a news conference.

Maples, a Georgia-born beauty and aspiring actres, has had experience as an advertising model and bit role player in Hollywood films.

She reportedly attracted real estate billionaire Trump's attention about two years ago and was one of factors contributing to his separation from Ivana Trump last February.

Finnerty said Maples will use the news confefence at the Four Season restaurant as the occasion for presenting Dr. Lloyd Richardson, president of the Better World Society, with a check for $50,000.

The society, an environmental organization, was founded by television tycoon Ted Turner.

Finnerty declined to say how much Maples' salary will be or whether her philanthropic contribution is being made out of the financial arrangements of her new contract.

BERN, SWITZERLAND (MAY 22) UPI - Police used tear gas and rubber bullets Tuesday to disperse about 150 rock-throwing demonstrators trying to enter the hotel where South African President Frederik de Klerk was staying for the Swiss leg of his nine-nation European tour.

The protest - the first major demonstration of his tour - came as de Klerk met with government officials in the Swiss capital of Bern before financial discussions with bankers and businessmen.

About 150 people, some wearing masks, demonstrated outside the Hotel Bellevue. The demonstrators, throwing rocks and bottles, tried to get inside but were repelled by police, who made several dozen arrests and used tear gas and rubber bullets to break up the protest.

Another protest erupted in Zurich, where several hundred anti-apartheid demonstrators gathered in the Paradeplatz, the large square in the middle of the banking and luxury shopping district.

In Spain, an anti-apartheid group formed a human chain in downtown Madrid Tuesday to protest de Klerk's scheduled arrival Thursday for official visits with King Juan Carlos and President Felipe Gonzalez. Spain has begun easing sanctions against the white-minority government in Pretoria, and the Spanish national airline, Iberia, has decided to resume freight flights it suspended three years ago.

De Klerk arrived in the Swiss capital from West Germany, where he said his talks - like those earlier in Paris, London and elsewhere - produced ''support and encouragement'' for his recent racial reform efforts.

The South African president has instituted numerous racial reforms in South Africa, where blacks are an overwhelming majority, but the structure of apartheid, or racial separation, remains.

As he had in other countries, de Klerk said he saw no need to ask Switzerland for an end to economic sanctions against the white government in Pretoria.

Switzerland has always opposed sanctions in general as being counter-productive, although it has banned arms sales to South Africa because policy bars such exports to any region of conflict.

De Klerk met first Tuesday with Justice Minister Arnold Koeller, who is the Swiss president for 1990. The presidency rotates annually within the seven-member Federal Council, or governing cabinet.

After an official luncheon, de Klerk had meetings with Finance Minister Jean-Pascal Delamuraz and Foreign Minister Rene Felber.

''The topics centered on the general situation in southern Africa, the specific situation in South Africa, bilateral relations and developments in East and West Europe,'' a Swiss government spokesman said.

Swiss-South African trade rose sharply in 1989 because South Africa moved much of its diamond trade from London to Switzerland.

On Wednesday, de Klerk scheduled financial and business talks in Zurich.

As in other capitals, de Klerk asked the Swiss government to help political, social and economic reforms in his country by backing expanded trade and financial credits.

Credits will be the main issues for the talks in Zurich Wednesday, South African and Swiss officials said.

Swiss banks sharply reduced their exposure in South Africa by half over the past three years by providing no new credit facilities while several outstanding loans were paid off.

De Klerk was seeking to persuade the big Swiss banks to provide new credits, the officials said.

Also Wednesday, de Klerk was scheduled to address the ''Friends of South Africa Club'' at a private dinner before heading to Madrid on Thursday.

PARIS (MAY 22) UPI - Prime Minister Michel Rocard ruled out Tuesday giving the vote to immigrants and warned of a ''massive new wave'' of immigration into France from Third World countries and Eastern Europe that ''must be dammed up.''

''If we are not on our guard, we are on the eve of a massive new wave (of immigration) coming from the further away south, and from an east (Europe) ever more uncertain.''

''I say clearly: This wave must be dammed up by all means that are at the same time reasonable and useful.''

Rocard told the legislators he would present a report on the immigration problem during round-table talks to be held with all mainstream parliamentary parties at his Hotel Matignon office May 27.

President Francois Mitterrand, in his 1988 presidential race, briefly espoused the cause of giving votes to non-European Community immigrants in local elections. But he quickly dropped the controversial idea as popular opposition furiously mounted.

Rocard told the National Assembly he ''always had adhered'' to a policy statement by the president, who, in an open ''Letter to the French,'' said he took note that ''a majority of French are hostile'' to giving votes to immigrants.

Rocard insisted on the need to curb immigration, which has become the most burning political issue in France because of a series of racist attacks and acts against Arabs and Jews.

The prime minister reiterated in his speech a vague proposal he has floated for a ''minimum charter'' on immigration. About 150 deputies, including 15 government ministers were present for the debate in the National Assembly, the lower house of Parliament.

Rocard said the minority government would undertake ''an increased mastery of migratory fluxes'' including ''searches at frontiers ... and the repression of clandestine work.''

Rocard admitted that politicians had ''delayed'' in carrying out the necessary measures.

However, some Socialist deputies on the left of Rocard's party criticized him for conceding too much to the opposition on immigrants' rights.

Left-wing Socialist Jean Le Garrec said giving the vote to immigrants could be ''a powerful factor for integration. We are sure that history will say we are right. Let us talk about it.''

Socialist parliamentary group leader Louis Mermaz also said Socialists could not rule out adopting voting rights for immigrants.

Rocard rejected another request by the conservative Rally for the Republic and Union of French Democracy groups for a reform of French nationality law.

Le Monde, France's leading newspaper, accused the government of hypocrisy and reneging on the nation's traditional role as a haven for political exiles.

A front-page cartoon recalling the end of the international Cannes Film Festival Monday showed immigrants lining up to see a film entitled ''France, land of exile,'' billed as having won the ''Golden Palm for hypocrisy.'' The billboard showed caricatures of Rocard, Mitterrand and the hard-line conservative former interior minister, Charles Pasqua.

CHEYENNE, WY (MAY 22) UPI - Establishing a population of about 100 gray wolves in Yellowstone National Park would have little adverse impact on other wildlife in the park or livestock outside the park, a study by 15 wolf experts said.

The study commissioned by Congress and released Tuesday also said bringing wolves back to the park where they were eradicated by government hunters 60 years ago could enhance visitors' enjoyment of the park without reducing safety.

Congress ordered the study as a prelude to a possible environmental impact statement on the wolf recovery plan. The 586-page report was completed by experts with the National Park Service, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Interagency Grizzly Bear Study Team, University of Wyoming, University of Idaho and University of Minnesota.

The recovery plan proposes introducing 10 breeding pairs of wolves into the park and predicts that over a 20-year period a stabilized population of 13 packs of seven to 10 wolves each would develop.

Such a population would allow removal of the wolves from the endangered species list in the Yellowstone area.

The experts believe the park itself can support anywhere from 70 to 150 wolves and most would live in the north-central area where prey is most plentiful.

The report says there would be an abundance of large hoofed mammals in the park for the wolves to prey on including elk, mule deer, bison, antelope, bighorn sheep, moose, elk, white-tailed deer and moutain goats.

During recent years, the park's average population of hoofed mammals has ranged from an average of 37,800 during the summers to 23,100 during the winters and the report suggests introduction of wolves would actually benefit the park's large elk population.

It says each wolf would consume an average of seven to 13 elk per year and the result would be a drop of about 20 percent of the elk population.

''Wolf predation on elk will reduce nutritional stress on elk, improve their physiological condition and increase their reproduction,'' the report says.

The reduction in populations of the other species is projected to be about 25 percent for mule deer, 12 percent for moose, 10 percent for bison and little or no loss for antelope, bighorn sheep, white-tailed deer and mountain goats.

The experts say, because sport hunting and wolf predation affect different animals, reintroduction of wolves would be expected to have little effect on big game hunting in areas surrounding the park.

The study notes wolves coexist with bears in Canada, Alaska, Europe and Asia and the wolves in Yellowstone would be expected to have little impact on the park's threatened grizzly bear population estimated at about 200.

The wolf reintroduction could reduce coyote numbers in the park, but coyotes would remain abundant, and the number of red foxes and other scavengers could increase. The effect of wolves on the park's mountain lion population is still being studied.

Many of the park's visitors would get to hear wolves howlings and a few would get to see them, the report says, but the risk to humans would be virtually nonexistent.

''Rabies is rare in wolves,'' it says, ''There are no verified cases of serious human inhuries from healthy wild wolves in North America. Most wolves are very shy and make every effort to avoid people in national and provincial parks and other wildlands across North America.''

The most severe opposition to the wolf recovery plan has come from ranchers who fear the wolves will stray from the park and prey on their livestock, but the study says livestock deaths are expected only occasionally.

''Wolf depredation on livestock is very low in Minnesota, Alberta and British Columbia, where wolf-livestock interactions have been studied,'' it says. ''Because livestock grazing on allotments in the greater Yellowstone area is mainly for short periods in summer, the period of exposure of livestock to wolves would be shorter than in the areas studied.''

(MAY 22) UPI - The case of convicted Nazi war criminal John Demjanjuk is in an Israeli appeals court, where his lawyers argue that a lower court made a mistake in rejecting testimony that a key document was forged. Defense lawyers say a photo I-D card was forged by the Soviet K-G-B to implicate Demjanjuk in Nazi atrocities because he served in the anti-Soviet military at the end of World War Two. The retired American auto worker was convicted in 1988 of being a Nazi death camp guard responsible for herding thousands of Jews into gas chambers.

12-year-old Arlo Quint of Pittsfield, Maine, was digging for some worms in his back yard when his spade hit an old can. When he looked inside, he found NOT a can of worms, but an original Honus Wagner baseball card that may be worth thousands of dollars. The cards were made in 1909 by the Piedmont cigarette company.... but are considered especially valuable because Wagner demanded the cigarette company stop distributing his card.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (MAY 22) UPI - A general court martial accused 21 military officers Tuesday of conspiring to commit murder and mutiny in the December coup attempt that almost toppled President Corazon Aquino.

The two brigadier generals and 19 other officers are the first to be tried for their part in the rebellion, in which 119 people were killed.

Arraignment was deferred until next week at the request of defense lawyers who made the motion after the court read 31 pages of charges, a task that took three hours.

The court accused the defendants of ''murder and frustrated murder'' in connection with the deaths of 21 people, including two officers, and the wounding of 51 soldiers.

In addition, the 21 also were charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman by commiting acts that brought ''dishonor and disrespect'' to the military.

About 2,100 officers and enlisted men involved in the coup attempt have either surrendered or have been captured. But most of the soldiers have since been freed.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Next week's summit should produce a ''substantive agreement'' on strategic arms issues and a thorough discussion of future arms goals between President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, a senior administration official said Tuesday.

The official, who outlined the summit's arms control aspects on the condition he not be identified, also said that if major issues in a conventional forces treaty were not resolved by summer, it is unlikely that pact would be ready for signing before the end of the year.

However, the official said the United States no longer was insisting the conventional arms pact - sometimes called CFE for Conventional Forces in Europe - be completed before the one on long-range weapons, called the START treaty, is signed.

A Moscow meeting last week between Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze cleared away problems on the issues of air-launched and sea-launched cruise missiles, small drone jets that can carry nuclear warheads.

Those issues, said the official, ''were the most contentious'' of the outstanding strategic arms issues. He said there was some ''plain horse-trading'' on the issues.

''Although there are other issues that remain to be resolved, I am hopeful that the two leaders will be able to record their substantive agreement on major START issues at the summit.

''Likewise, I hope they will be in a position to issue a joint statement on follow-on negotiations,'' the officials said.

There had been optimistic talk in the past year from both sides of progress toward a treaty cutting U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals by 50 percent, on the way to total elimination. But in recent months, according to U.S. officials, Moscow began throwing up obstacles that blocked completion of a treaty.

The United States also has said it would not sign a final START pact until a Soviet radar installation at Krasynarsk - which the Soviets have admitted violates the 1972 Anti-Ballisitic Missile treaty - is demolished. The official said the United States is confident the Soviets will destroy the installation before the treaty is ready to be signed.

Among the unresolved START issues are whether Moscow can modernize the huge SS-18, whose numbers would fall from 308 to 154 under the treaty. The official said the United States proposed that a date be set beyond which ''heavy'' ICBMs could not be modernized and that limits be put on flight testing to restrict any effort to develop more advanced models.

Verification issues also have been resolved on two nuclear testing treaties, the threshold test ban treaty and the peaceful nuclear explosion treaty. The treaties have been held up in the Senate awaiting resolution of those matters.

During the summit, set for May 30-June 3, both sides will agree to destroy their chemical weapons stocks down to levels equal to 20 percent of the current U.S. stockpile and also quit producing new ones. The official said those steps are seen as adding new impetus to global chemical weapons talks.

On the CFE talks, the official said the United States detailed some of its latests positions and Moscow recited ones already on the table in Geneva. But the official said the Soviet postions were ''clearly non-starters, not serious in our view.''

SARATOGA, CA (MAY 22) UPI - A delegation of American businessmen will meet with Mikhail Gorbachev and his key ministers to advise the Soviets on ways to heal their troubled economy, the organizer of the U.S. team said Tuesday.

''We literally have an opportunity here to shape the future of the Soviet Union with respect to economic progress,'' said Steven Puthuff, a former Commerce Department official under Presidents Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan.

Puthuff, 49, a Silicon Valley developer, said he was assembling a 10-member group called ''Americans for the Success of Perestroika'' that has been contracted to meet July 8-15 in Moscow with 10 Soviet ministers as the Soviets make the difficult transition to a free-market economy.

Included in the American delegation is Jeffrey Sachs, a Harvard economist who has been advising Poland's Solidarity government and who helped put together a plan to reduce Bolivia's inflation rate.

Other members include former Memorex and Collins Radio chief executive Robert Wilson; legal specialist Christopher Osakwe (who is advising the Soviets on how to institute private property laws); Eastern European economic specialist Josef Brada, a professor at Arizona State University, and Dr. V. Vernon Woolf, a lecturer on human development from Provo, Utah.

Economist Milton Friedman will consult with the group, but won't make the trip to Moscow, Puthuff said.

''We are also trying to find, at the request of the Soviets, a top marketing and public relations person,'' Puthuff said.

In addition to himself, the final members on the team are expected to be a top attorney and technologist, whom he was still recruiting.

The contract for the team of American advisors was arranged following a visit Puthuff made in January to the Soviet Union, where he appeared on a national television show and said only competitive goods and services would drive that nation's economy, he said.

The Soviets will pay all expenses for the team of advisors. ''But we're not asking for salaries for this,'' Puthuff said.

(MAY 22) UPI - U.S. crude oil prices plunged Tuesday as traders squared accounts on an expiring contract and anticipated that an oil-industry report would show a worsening of the current glut of crude supplies.

Gasoline, which had supported the market last week, slipped for the second day, with traders expecting the report to show an increase in refinery output.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the benchmark West Texas Intermediate for June delivery was down 58 cents from Monday's close to $17.68 a barrel.

Tuesday was the final day of trading of the June crude contract and a good deal of the price plunge was the result of traders' squaring accounts, said Tom Bentz, director of trading at United Energy Inc. in New York.

The July contract, which becomes the Merc's lead spot-month contract Wednesday, declined 12 cents to $18.92 a barrel.

Bentz said there was selling in anticipation that the American Petroleum Institute's weekly report would show a continued buildup in U.S. crude oil stocks, which have already reached enormous proportions.

Released after the Merc closed, the report showed stocks last week rose 4.4 million barrels to 380.6 million barrels - one of the highest inventory levels in recent years.

Unleaded gasoline for June delivery, which lost 1.08 cents Monday after gaining 2.55 cents last week, declined another 0.31 cent Tuesday to 63.04 cents a gallon on the Merc.

Bentz said the market was reacting to expectations the API report would indicate higher refinery runs, the percentage of the nation's refinery capacity actually pumping out gasoline. Imports also were expected to register an increase, he said.

API reported capacity utilization rose 0.8 percent to 85 percent last week from 84.2 percent the prior week.

The percentage had dipped over recent weeks during the annual refinery maintenance ''turnarounds,'' in which production is switched from heating oil to gasoline.

''If the runs are up significantly today, it could indicate a price trend '' Bentz said.

Prompt delivery unleaded gasoline rose 0.15 cent on the U.S. Gulf Coast cash market to 65.50 cents a gallon but declined 0.75 cent on the New York Harbor spot market to 64.25 cents a gallon.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, prompt delivery WTI plummeted 60 cents to $17.65 a barrel.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent crude dropped 18 cents to $16.75 a barrel.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - traded 13 cents less at $14.45 a barrel.

On the Merc, heating oil for June delivery declined 0.04 cent to 51.40 cents a gallon.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Striking Greyhound workers made an unconditional offer Tuesday to return to work and end their 12-week-old strike, putting additional financial pressure on the economically beleaguered bus line.

In a letter to P. Anthonty Lannie, Greyhound vice president in charge of labor relations, the Amalgamated Transit Union announced its ''unconditional offer to return to work immediately.''

''Please advise us as to when employees should return to work,'' said the letter from Edward Strait, president of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, which represents some 9,300 striking employees.

But the offer is unlikely to settle the bitter, violence-marred labor dispute involving the national bus line. Instead, it puts more pressure on Greyhound management - and the company's creditors - to return to the bargaining table.

The unconditional offer to return to work is required under the National Labor Relations Act as part of the process in which a union makes its case that an employer is engaging in unfair labor practices.

In effect, the unconditional offer to return to work puts in motion a back pay clock that could cost the bus company up to $10 million a month between now and when a new contract is signed.

The was no immediate comment from Greyhound.

If the company accepts the offer, returning employees would be working under the same terms as when they went out on strike March 2 and, union officials said, ''presumably there would be further bargaining.''

At the same time, if the company accepts the union's offer to return to work, it must bring workers back in order of seniority, meaning that the 4,000 replacement drivers Greyhound has hired in its effort to break the strike probably would have to be dismissed to make room for returning workers.

''Under the law, we have to make an unconditional offer which the company has to refuse,'' said Earl Putnam, the Amalgamated Transit Union's general counsel.

If the company refuses the offer, it changes the nature of the dispute from a strike to a lockout. It also allows strikers to apply for unemployment benefits, Putnam said.

The union's new move grew out of an announcement May 14 by the National Labor Relations Board that it will file a complaint against the company alleging that ''the current strike is an unfair labor practice strike.''

Putnam called the union move ''an important additional element'' in putting pressure on the company, especially in view of its financial difficulties.

On Monday, the company - in an effort to stave off bankruptcy - offered to buy back some $225 million of its debt for a little more than $100 million in cash. But it did not say how it would finance the buy-back and last week it reportedly missed a $9.8 million interest payment.

In addition, J. Michael Doyle, Greyhound's chief financial officer, has predicted that costs associated with the strike could be as high as $75 million to $100 million.

Putnam said the company has five days to respond to the union letter before the back-pay clock begins running but, he said, ''the preliminary indications are out there'' that the company will reject the union's offer.

In early May, Greyhound officials boasted they had a strike fund large enough to cripple the union and called the strike ''irrelevant,'' adding: ''From a driver's point of view, the strike is over, or at least its irrelevant.''

Economist Milton Friedman will consult with the group, but won't make the

''We are also trying to find, at the request of the Soviets, a top marketing and public relations person,'' Puthuff said.

In addition to himself, the final members on the team are expected to be a top attorney and technologist, whom he was still recruiting. ''They have not agreed to release their names yet, as we are still negotiating,'' Puthuff said.

A few days later, Puthuff said, he was asked to put together a team of consultants to meet with Soviet ministers. Evgeny Velikov, vice president of the Academy of Science, seemed to be the driving force behind the plan, he said.

The Soviets will pay all expenses for the team of advisors. ''But we're not asking for salaries for this,'' Puthuff said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Texas investors Sid and Lee Bass have sold two-thirds of the stock they owned in Sensormatic Electronics Corporation of Deerfield Beach, Fla.

During May, the brothers sold 1.21 million shares of Sensormatic common stock, according to a filing Monday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

They had owned 1.86 million, or 6.9 percent of the 26.7 million Sensormatic shares outstanding.

However, they have retained 650,000 shares, or 2.4 percent of Sensormatic's outstanding stock.

The filing did not contain an explanation of why they were selling the stock at this time, but it did say each of the investors had recouped his entire net investment in Sensormatic.

Sensormatic manufactures and services electronic article surveillance systems and microprocessor-controlled closed-circuit television systems used by retail stores to spot shoplifters.

The company had annual revenues of $150.9 million in fiscal year 1989 ended May 31, and $134.7 million for the first nine months of fiscal year 1990.

Neither of the Basses could be reached for comment.

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - The stock market's rally, now in its fourth week, overcame some midday weakness and rolled on Tuesday, with the Dow industrials closing at another record high.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 24.77 Monday to the previous record of 2844.68, gained 7.55 to close at 2852.23, a new all-time high and its fifth in the last seven sessions.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.30 to 195.58 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index added 0.43 to 358.43. The price of an average share rose five cents.

Advances led declines 808-686 among the 1,992 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume was 203,350,000 shares, compared with the 166,280,000 shares traded Monday. Tuesday was the fifth-heaviest trading day of the year.

Stocks opened higher and extended their gains in early trading, with the Dow industrials up 25 points after about a half-hour of action, bolstered by gains in overseas markets and higher bond prices. But investors, beginning to feel the rally had gotten ahead of itself, then took prices off their highs and, by midday, into negative territory.

A combination of profit taking and computerized program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, erased the early advance, analysts said.

By mid-afternoon, prices turned slightly higher again as the profit taking and computerized selling subsided. In late trading, these factors resurfaced and stocks turned down again, but in the last hour of trading buyers had their way, sending the market to a gain on the day and the Dow to another record high.

"This is an incredible run we're on," said Ralph Bloch, senior vice president and chief market analyst at Raymond, James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Fla., noting the market's rally entered its 17th day Tuesday, with just some minor setbacks along the way.

"What we saw today was nothing more than some profit taking exacerbated by sell programs," he said. "I don't think it changes the direction of the market.

"Before this comes to a conclusion, we're going to have to have a selloff and then try again to rally. On that rally try, if there's going to be problems, they're going to show there."

Bloch said he expects sentiment to show signs of greater acceptance of the rally: "A lot of institutions haven't spent money. We could run up another 100 points before it concludes."

On the trading floor, Nova Corp. of Alberta was the most active issue, down 3/8 to seven after gaining Monday. The company sold its rubber division to Bayer AG of West Germany but late Monday the Italian company Enimont reportedly said Nova did not respect bidding rules established in selling the unit. Enimont said it was scheduled to make its bid Monday but was preempted by the sale to Bayer.

Varity followed, unchanged at three. Computer Associates International was third, down 3/8 to 15 1/2 after reporting fiscal fourth-quarter profits at the low end of analysts' expectations.

Federal Express was also actively traded, plunging 5 1/8 to 47 after its April volume figures for packages and documents delivered, released late Monday, prompted some analysts to lower earnings estimates and ratings on the stock. Volume grew from April 1989 to April 1990 but at a far lower rate than the usual year-to-year growth.

Among the blue chips, AT&T lost 1/4 to 43 1/4, Sears fell 3/4 to 36 5/8, USX lost 1/2 to 33, IBM rose 5/8 to 117 1/2, and Woolworth added 3/8 to 64 1/2. Procter & Gamble lost much of its early gain but still rose 1 1/2 to 79 1/8, extending Monday's rally sparked by the company's prediction of strong growth in sales and earnings for fiscal 1990.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 242,362,580 shares, compared with 201,144,750 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index rose 0.49 to close at 359.85. Advances led declines 294-264 among the 848 issues traded. The price of an average share rose two cents. Composite volume totaled 18,232,600 shares, compared with 14,161,980 shares traded Monday. Hillhaven led the Amex issues, up 1/4 at 1 1/2.

COLUMBUS, OH (MAY 22) UPI - A network of steel girders at a construction site at Ohio State University collapsed Tuesday, killing three iron workers and seriously injuring a fourth.

The accident occurred about 11 a.m. at the $50 million Prime Site Computer Facility, which is scheduled to open in mid-1991.

Rick Lombardi, vice president of Turner Construction Co., said the men were installing steel beams, bolting them to the structure, when the top floor collapsed on to the floors below.

''The men were on the steel and fell into the hole,'' he said.

One man, whose name was not immediately released, was pronounced dead at the scene.

The other two died at hospitals: William Nicholason Jr., about 25, Lancaster, at Grant Hospital, and Robin Starr, 24, Columbus, at University Hospitals. Nicholason suffered multiple injuries and Starr suffered severe head and chest injuries.

A hospital spokesman said the fourth worker, Roger Anthony, 44, Columbus, was in serious condition at University with head, arm and leg injuries.

In addition to local police agencies, an investigator from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration was on the scene.

The building will be a state-of-the-art facility to serve six state agencies and three elected state officials, enabling them to combine their computer operations with backup power and climate control. Their operations are now scattered throughout Columbus.

The four-story facility is located on a 15-acre site in Ohio State University Research Park, where the Ohio Supercomputer Center and the university's satellite communications are located.

Computer systems operated by the Department of Administrative Services, the Department of Education, the Department of Taxation, Highway Safety, Bureau of Workers' Compensation and the Ohio Industrial Commission will be in the facility, along with systems operated by the attorney general, treasurer and secretary of state.

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - A state judge ruled Tuesday that Staten Islanders can take the first step toward secession by voting on the issue this fall without interference from the rest of New York City.

In his ruling at state Supreme Court in Manhattan, Justice Herman Cahn found constitutional an amended bill giving the state Legislature final say in the secession. Under the amendment, a commission would draw up a charter which would be considered first by Staten Island and ultimately by the Legislature.

The judge ruled that Staten Islanders may vote alone this fall on whether to create the charter commission. He rejected efforts by the city's remaining four boroughs to take part in the vote.

Staten Island has 352,121 residents, or 5.2 percent of the city's 7 million residents.

The city, fearing secession would have a negative impact on its bond status, filed suit last fall and sought to give all New Yorkers a chance to vote on Staten Island's proposed independence.

Now that Cahn has removed the last roadblock, however, Staten Island officials appeared less confident that secession is a smart idea.

''We are neither for or against secession at this time,'' said Tom Cocola, a spokesman for Staten Island Borough President Guy Molinari. ''What we would like to see is a more comprehensive secession study. We're worried that the tax rate will double.''

Corporation Counsel Victor Kovner said the city would seek an ''expedited appeal'' to the state's highest court, the Court of Appeals in Albany.

''We're hoping to expedite the review so we can get a decision before Staten Island goes through the expense of preparing for a referendum this fall,'' he said.

''It is our contention that there is enormous economic impact to the city as a whole and equal protection requires an equal opportunity for all New Yorkers to vote,'' Kovner said.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (MAY 22) UPI - The editor of a Colombian newspaper, a Polish economic editor and a writer for a Soviet journal were among 11 foreign journalists named by Harvard University Tuesday as 1990-91 Nieman Fellows.

The 11 foreign journalists join 12 Americans selected earlier this month for the prestigious fellowships, which offer a year of independent study - away from deadlines - at Harvard.

The 11 foreign newspersons chosen for the 53rd class of Nieman Fellows are:

-Fernando Cano, 34, the editor-in-chief of El Espectador in Bogota, Colombia. Cano's father Guillermo, the publisher of the paper, was shot and killed in 1986, allegedly by a Colombian drug cartel.

-Maria Dunin-Wasowicz, 37, deputy economic editor of Przeglad Tygodniowy in Warsaw, Poland.

-Joseph Latakgomo, 42, senior assistant editor of The Star in Johannesburg South Africa.

-Vladimir Vessenski, 55, a special correspondent for the Literary Gazette in Moscow.

-Rui Araujo, 36, a field producer with the Portuguese Broadcasting Corp. in Lisbon.

-Kabral Blay-Amihere, 37, a freelance reporter and former publisher of The Independent in Ghana.

-Raj Chengappa, 33, a special correspondent for India Today in New Delhi.

-Tony Eluemenor, 29, assistant editor of This Week in Lagos, Nigeria.

-Nanise Fifita, 28, a senior journalist with the Tonga Broadcasting Commission.

-Jennifer Lewington, 40, Washington bureau chief for The Globe and Mail in Toronto.

-Luis Alberto Moreno, 37, director of TV Hoy in Bogota.

More than 200 journalists from 50 foreign nations have studied at Harvard as Nieman Fellows since 1952.

The Nieman Fellowships were established in a 1938 bequest from Agnes Wahl Nieman, the widow of the founder of The Milwaukee Journal. The bequest provides funding only for American journalists, so the foreign Nieman Fellows are supported by other grants.

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (MAY 23) UPI - Roy F. Weston Inc. said Tuesday it was pulling out of talks with Chemical Waste Management Inc. aimed at forming a jointly owned subsidiary that would have handled chemical and nuclear waste.

''We have determined that it is not in the company's long-term business and professional interests to continue negotiations and have elected to terminate the agreement,'' said Chairman Roy F. Weston.

The environmental technologies company said it and Oak Brook, Ill.-based Chemical Waste Management had ''mutually agreed'' to discontinue talks to form Chem-Nuclear Environmental Services Inc.

''Although no formal ties remain, we expect, from time to time when it will be mutually advantageous, that Chemical Waste Management and Weston will team or enter into other business relationships,'' Weston said.

''Weston will pursue its own interests by teaming with others to provide full services to (the federal waste management marketplace),'' Weston said.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 22) UPI - Marlon Brando's son, charged with murder for allegedly shooting to death his half sister's Tahitian boyfriend, was ordered held without bail Tuesday.

Christian Brando, 32, who has been held without bail since his arrest last week in the slaying at his father's mountain-top estate, sat expressionless in the courtroom.

His lawyers, insisting he is no threat to the community, hoped to obtain his release pending trial, but West Los Angeles Municipal Court Judge Rosemary Shumsky denied the bail motion and ordered Brando returned to court June 11 to schedule a preliminary hearing.

''The court finds there is no basis for setting bail in this case,'' Shumsky said.

Along with first-degree murder, Brando is charged with one count each of possession of a machine gun and possession of a silencer.

Brando allegedly shot and killed Dag Drollet, the boyfriend of his 20-year-old half-sister, Cheyenne Brando, in the den of Marlon Brando's 12-room house in the Santa Monica Mountains last Wednesday night. Drollet died of a gunshot wound to his head and neck.

If convicted of murder, Brando would face a state prison term of 25 years to life. Prosecutors are seeking the death penalty. Brando pleaded innocent to the charges at his arraignment Friday.

According to a police report, Brando admitted shooting Drollet, but said he did not mean to.

One of his defense lawyers, William Kunstler, said the shooting was accidental and occurred during a fight between Brando and Drollet that was apparently sparked by Cheyenne Brando's accusation that Drollet had beaten her. Cheyenne Brando is pregnant, reportedly with Drollet's child.

''I shot him, man, but not on purpose,'' police quoted Brando as saying. ''Please, believe me. I wouldn't do it in my father's house.

''I didn't want to shoot him. If I was going to kill that guy, I would have taken him to Franklin Canyon and hit him in the head with a baseball bat and pulverized the guy.''

Investigators have discounted any notion of an accidental shooting, saying there was no evidence of a struggle between Brando and Drollet. Investigators said Drollet was sitting in front of a television with a remote control in one hand and cigarette lighter in the other when he was shot.

After his arrest, Christian Brando was told of his right to remain silent, but insisted on speaking with investigators, police said.

He told police that a .45-caliber handgun went off accidentally during a scuffle over the weapon, killing Drollet.

''I wasn't crazy about the guy, but what was I going to do?'' he told police. ''There was a round in the chamber. He fought for the gun.

''We were rolling around on the couch. He was trying to shoot me. I don't know who was trying to shoot who. He grabbed me, and the ... thing shot him in the head.''

Brando also told police that he had had three drinks at dinner prior to the shooting and that his blood alcohol level was .19, twice the California legal limit for motorists.

Marlon Brando told police he was in another room in the home at the time of the shooting, and called the 911 emergency line.

Christian Brando's mother is actress Anna Kashfi, whose divorce from the Academy Award-winning actor and subsequent custody battle over young Christian were played out in gossip columns around the world.

Cheyenne Brando is the daughter of the actor and his current wife, Tarita Tariipia, who co-starred with him in the remake of the film ''Mutiny on the Bounty'' in 1962.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - The National Transportation Safety Board said Tuesday that infants and small children should be required to use restraint devices aboard airliners, meaning they would have to buy tickets or be given free seats.

The board, which has no regulatory authority, said the Federal Aviation Administration should adopt such a rule.

Safety Board Chairman James Kolstad said the call was prompted by the deaths of infants held in parents' laps in the July 1989 United crash in Sioux City, Iowa, and the January 1990 Avianca crash on New York's Long Island.

''Our basic concern is one of saving lives,'' Kolstad said in an interview. ''This recommendation is for a segment of the population that is currently not afforded the same kind of protection as those people of all other age groups.''

In order for infants or toddlers to be restrained, they would have to have seats. That means either tickets would have to be bought for them or the airlines would have to provide them free seats.

Also, small children would need special restraint devices, which either parents or airlines would have to provide.

Kolstad said it was unclear who would pay for the increased safety.

''Obviously parents could pay, bring their own seat, or the carriers could make them available. We haven't really dealt with it,'' Kolstad said. ''The thrust of our recommendation focused on filling this loophole in the statute.''

Under the recommendation, all passengers on airplanes must be restrained during takeoffs, landings and turbulent weather. Children weighing less than 40 pounds and shorter than 40 inches would have to be restrained in an approved device appropriate to their height and weight. These could include child seats similar to those now used in automobiles.

Currently, all passengers over 2 years old must use seatbelts during takeoffs, landings and turbulent weather.

The safety board also recommended research into whether aircraft seatbelts are adequate for children too large for child safety seats and to develop some suitable means of providing such restraints.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said the safety board recommendation goes further than a proposed FAA regulation that requires airlines to allow parents to use thier own child restraint system at the parents' cost.

Farrar hinted the FAA has no desire now to go as far as the safety board wishes, noting the proposed rule seeks public comment on the issue of whether infant restraints should be made mandatory.

''If you issue a notice of proposed rule-making ... and after everyone has commented, you issue a final regulation that is much stronger, you'll have people going to court,'' Farrar said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Amid escalating violence, President Bush extended his sympathies Tuesday to the families of seven Arab workers gunned down in Israel and again sought to give a push to the stalled Middle East peace initiative.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, ''We believe that violence ... will continue to grow so long as there is an absence of a promising peace plan that nourishes hope among Israelis and Palestinians alike.''

The slayings Sunday of the seven Palestinian workers by an Israeli described as deranged triggered an explosion of rioting in the Israeli-occupied territories and Israeli Arab communities.

In Arab East Jerusalem Tuesday, police sprayed tear gas and used batons to break up a demonstration by several hundred Palestinians in front of the U.S. Consulate. Three more Palestinians were killed.

Fitzwater said in a statement, ''The president wishes to extend his sympathies to the families of the Palestinian workers who lost their lives in the tragic killings'' Sunday.

''The president is also deeply troubled by the violent aftermath to these deaths ... and calls upon the Israeli security forces as well as others to act with maximum restraint,'' the press secretary said.

Meanwhile, representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization in the United States called for an ''international presence'' in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to protect the population.

The statement did not define the international presence or propose an organization to take over such a function.

The group also asked the United States to support an international conference to discuss the Palestinian situation and possible international sanctions against Israel.

The State Department had no immediate reaction to the proposal, but it said it supports the idea of a United Nations Security Council session to discuss the issue.

Palestinian sources have said that PLO chairman Yasser Arafat is planning to come to the United States to address such a U.N. session.

The State Department had not received an application for a visa from Arafat by late Tuesday, and department spokesman Richard Boucher said no decision had been made about whether to grant such a visa.

A year ago this month Israel proposed a peace plan that the United States embraced but that Israel later dropped. It called for local elections in the occupied territories.

Secretary of State James Baker has proposed putting the initiative into effect with a series of direct talks between the Israel and the Palestinans, but Israel has balked.

Fitzwater said, ''We believe that the initiative of the government of Israel, which the United States has been trying to implement, offers the best path to a negotiating process that would protect Israel's security, further the legitimate political rights of Palestinians, and bring about a broader reconciliation between the state of Israel and its Arab neighbors.''

Referring to internal political struggles within Israel, Fitzwater said, ''We look forward to the quick emergence of an Israeli government that is capable of making decisions on issues of peace and is committed, just as we are, to moving ahead on the peace process.''

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - The dollar dropped sharply against the Japanese yen in New York trading Tuesday as foreign exchange players worldwide sold the U.S. unit on bearish remarks by a senior U.S. Treasury official.

At the same time, though, the dollar advanced strongly against West Germany's mark amid rising political controversy in both West and East Germany over the terms of the two nations' proposed July 2 monetary union.

In late New York dealings, the dollar was trading at 1.6735 West German marks, up nearly a pfennig from 1.6640 Monday, and 151.20 Japanese yen, nearly 2 1/2 yen below Monday's close of 153.65.

Another feature was a sharp Canadian dollar decline on political strife over the secession threat by French-speaking Quebec Province. The Canadian unit plunged from 84.74 U.S. cents to 84.18 cents.

U.S. Treasury Under Secretary David Mulford said in written comments provided to Congress Monday that he would ''welcome'' the dollar fall which would result if U.S. interest rates were brought lower.

Mulford's ''lack of concern about the level of the dollar'' gave a strong cue to global currency players to sell dollars for yen, said John McCarthy chief dealer for the Amsterdam Rotterdam Bank in New York.

West Germany's governing Christian Democrats and Social Democrat opposition leaders traded bitter accusations Tuesday in the Bundesrat, or State Council, on the shape of a draft treaty on economic union.

The Social Democrats say the treaty will be ruinous, leading to ''chaos, mass unemployment, economic standstill (and) state bankruptcy.'' Debate on the pact has become a central general election issue.

''The opposition party's concerns about (economic union) obviously undermine the mark a bit,'' McCarthy said. He said world investors have also been selling off the mark holdings for appreciating yen.

Other dollar rates: 1.4190 Swiss francs, down from 1.4210; 5.6270 French francs, up from 5.60; and 1,228 Italian lire, up from 1,222.25.

The British pound climbed to $1.6925 from $1.6870.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly higher as it drew advantage from a weaker West German mark. But the general absence of major economic indicators left the dollar looking for direction in quiet trading.

''The market has been pretty quiet,'' a London trader said. ''It's waiting for U.S. durable goods figures and personal income later in the week.''

In Frankfurt, the dollar climbed to 1.6715 deutsche marks from 1.6595 Monday, but came down in Zurich to 1.4175 Swiss francs against 1.4185.

In London, the pound eased slightly amid caution over Britain's trade figures for April, which are due for release Wednesday. The pound closed at $1.6915 compared with $1.6925.

The U.S. unit rose in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to 5.6320 francs against 5.5930, 34.40 Belgian francs against 34.27, and 1,228.35 Italian lire against 1,220.30.

In Tokyo earlier, the dollar fell against the yen on the remarks by Mulford, who was in Japan for talks on interest rate deregulation. The dollar closed at 152.40 yen against 153.25 Monday.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $375.25 an ounce, up from $373 Monday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled spot gold at $375.60 an ounce, ahead from a revised $373.30. Gold climbed in Zurich to $374.50 an ounce from $373.50. London gold rose to $374.75 an ounce from $369.75.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.30 an ounce, up from $5.15. Comex spot silver moved up to $5.283 an ounce from $5.131. Zurich silver advanced to $5.20 an ounce from $5.15. London silver climbed to $5.18 an ounce, compared with $5.15 Monday.

AUSTIN, TX (MAY 22) UPI - Gov. Bill Clements Tuesday killed a $555 million plan to reform the public school finance system, then won a victory in the Senate when minority lawmakers joined the Republican effort to sustain the veto.

An angry Sen. Carl Parker, the chief architect of the reform measure, pulled his override motion down without a vote after it became clear that a coalition of Hispanic lawmakers representing mostly poor school districts would side with the governor against the bill.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he was disappointed in the Senate's failure to override the veto, but he noted that history showed most override attempts succeed on a motion to reconsider. The Senate adjourned until 2 p.m. Wednesday and could vote on Parker's override motion at that time.

Hobby said the action effectively foreclosed consideration of any other school finance bill and would almost certainly deliver the school system into the hands of a special court master on June 1.

Clements, threatening to call a record sixth special session, said he vetoed the bill because would raise taxes.

''This veto is a stand against a half-cent increase in the sales tax,'' he said. ''This veto is a stand against higher property taxes. This veto is a stand against an income tax.''

Clements said he had been willing to go along with an increase in ''sin taxes'' on cigarettes and alcohol as part of a compromise with lawmakers, but that ''liberals resurrected the sales tax increase.''

The legislature was ordered to reform the state education system by the Texas Supreme Court, which in October ruled the state's method of funding schools discriminated against students in poor school districts.

Legislative leaders had been meeting with Clements' staff for nearly two weeks trying to reach a compromise on the issue that has bitterly divided the Legislature and Clements since February.

Two Senate Democrats led a the small coalition of Hispanic senators who withdrew their support for a veto override. They claimed that poor school districts will get better treatment from special master William Kilgarlin in a court-ordered plan than they would from the compromise measure adopted by the House and Senate.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 22) UPI - FBI agents searched two Northrop Corp. aircraft assembly plants Tuesday in an investigation of the aerospace giant's work on the F/A-18 Hornet fighter-bomber.

The search involved Northrop's Aircraft Division plants in Hawthorne and in El Segundo, two suburbs in southwestern Los Angeles County, company spokesman Tony Cantafio said.

Northrop, as the principal subcontractor to McDonnell Douglas Corp. on the F/A-18, builds the aircraft's center and rear fuselage, vertical stabilizers and all related susbsystems.

''We're working with the government, but that's all I can say,'' Cantafio said.

Fred Reagan, a spokesman in the FBI's Los Angeles office, declined to comment on the investigation.

The searches come six weeks after the U.S. Justice Department sued Northrop for millions of dollars in damages and penalties, alleging that Northrop fraudulently inflated bills it submitted to the Navy for work on the F/A-18.

The suit marked the fourth time in the last two years that the government has sued a Northrop operation for fraud or has joined in suits that were filed against the company by whistle-blowers.

The civil suit alleged that the company failed to disclose savings it achieved from a new manufacturing process that enabled it to produce parts for the F/A-18 at a lower cost than previously stated. The suit was originally filed in 1987 by Eldon L. Janssen, a former Northrop employee.

Northrop also faces at least three federal criminal investigations and several other suits filed by former employees.

In February, the company agreed to plead guilty to 34 counts of making false statements in connection with falsification of tests on the Navy's Harrier jet and the Air Force's air-launched cruise missile. As part of the settlement, reached just as the case was to go to trial, Northrop also agreed to pay a $17 million penalty, the largest fine ever assessed a defense contractor.

The F/A-18 has been produced for the Navy and Marine Corps, along with a number of allied air forces, including those of Australia, Canada, Spain and Switzerland. Northrop spokesman Ronald Owens said the company has been producing the ''shipsets'' - the term for the center and rear fuselages - for the past 16 years.

''We recently began work on our 1,000th shipset,'' Owens said.

The aircraft went into full production in 1981. Northrop revenues from the F/A-18 totaled about $3.85 billion between 1985 and 1989, but the sales have been gradually declining, from $880 million in 1985 to $629 million last year.

In its 1989 annual report, Northrop said that it delivered 137 completed shipsets in 1985, 134 in 1986, 141 in 1987, 123 in 1988 and 101 last year. The company said it expects to deliver 94 shipsets this year.

Northrop has received recognition for its F/A-18 work, which it converted early last year to a ''paperless'' assembly line, replacing 16,000 pages of paper per plane with three dozen microfiche cards.

MOSCOW (MAY 22) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev's senior advisers Tuesday approved a plan that would more than double the price of food as the first step in the country's economic recovery.

The plan is a part of a Soviet economic overhaul that provides ''for the nation's transition to a market-driven economy,'' Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov told reporters Tuesday.

Gerasimov said Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov will submit the economic-reform package to the Supreme Soviet Thursday.

In acknowledgment of a potentially stormy parliamentary debate over the proposals, the official Tass news agency said, ''May 24 may be the most difficult day for the present Soviet government since it was formed last summer.''

The complicated package sparked immediate debate among deputies to whom it was distributed in advance.

''The entire meaning of this document is to request the population to agree to a 100 to 200 percent increase in prices and tighten their belts '' said lawmaker Gennadi Filshin, head of the Parliament's Planning and Budget Commission. ''I don't think the people will accept that.''

The economic plan, which must be approved by the legislature to take effect, would slice state subsidies and raise the country's government-set retail prices to allow products to reflect the true costs of production.

The average cost of food would more than double, including a threefold price hike for bread and jumps of 2.5 times the present price for fish and 2.3 times for meat.

To offset the price increases, the economic program would give workers an average 15 percent wage ''bonus'' and bolster the Soviets' social security system for pensioners and other low-income citizens.

In separate action Tuesday, firebrand deputy Boris Yeltsin, in a fierce debate over possible Russian sovereignty the republic's legislature, said the Soviet Union's core republic has ''sustained the greatest damage from the obsolete administrative-command system that is desperately clinging to life.''

Nationalist deputies in the republic's founding legislature called for the formation of a separate Russian army, the opening of Russian embassies in foreign countries and Russia's entry into the United Nations.

Gorbachev had promised to announce the controversial new economic plans by May 10 but delayed its release amid reports of sharp internal administration disagreement between aides urging radical economic steps and more moderate advisers warning the president about violent public opposition to such measures.

Two newly created advisory panels, the Presidential Council and the Council of the U.S.S.R. Federation, met in joint session and sent the economic package to the Soviet Parliament.

Even before its details were known, the program had sparked widespread fears among Soviets of increased unemployment and inflation.

Deputy Prime Minister Leonid Abalkin, who oversees Gorbachev's economic reforms, recognized the hard Parliament fight ahead, telling the independent Interfax news service: ''Now we have to launch a large-scale education campaign.''

Gerasimov, acknowledging that ''there is an internal contradiction'' in the notion of a controlled market economy, quipped: ''It is rather like saying 'fried ice.'''

''At the preparatory stage, extending until the end of 1990, the legal basis for a market economy will be finalized and the necessary technical measures taken,'' said the government's report to Parliament. ''Particular attention will be paid to preparations for a reform of prices and for setting up a developed network of social support for the population.''

ANCHORAGE, AK (MAY 22) UPI - An oil company has agreed to pay $175,000 to the state of Alaska as a penalty for operating tankers without oil spill response plans, state environmental officials announced Tuesday.

The Union Oil Co. of California continued to operate its tankers in Alaska waters without state-required spill plans even after the Exxon Valdez spill - despite warnings from the state that it was cracking down on the industry and that no tankers would be allowed to ship oil without such plans.

Operating an oil tanker without a spill plan is against the law in Alaska. By agreeing to the out-of-court settlement Unocal avoids criminal charges or a civil suit, said Joe Sautner of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation.

The payment is the largest assessed against an oil shipper in Alaska for not having a state-approved oil spill contingency plan, Sautner said.

Unocal subsidiary West Coast Shipping Co. of Los Angeles had three tankers operating in Alaska waters without contingency plans, the Sansinena II, the Sierra Madre and the Coast Range, Sautner said.

Last October, almost seven months after the disastrous 11 million-gallon Exxon Valdez spill, the nation's worst, Alaska put the oil industry on notice that the state planned strict enforcement of laws requiring oil tankers to submit spill plans for approval by the state.

In mid-November, one month after the warning, at the deadline for submitting the plans, Unocal still had no state-approved plan and the Sansinena II was barred from entering a Cook Inlet oil port southwest of Anchorage.

Unocal made hurried plans to have Arco Marine cover the company in case of a spill so the Sansinena II, with a capacity of 23.5 million gallons, could resume operations. Unocal now has a state-approved spill, Sautner said.

Although Alaska focused its attention on oil spill prevention and preparedness after the March 24, 1989, Exxon Valdez spill, Unocal violations went back as far as 1981 involving the three tankers, Sautner said. He said the company's own records, obtained by the state, bolstered the state case.

''Our intent after the Exxon Valdez is that we look at contingency plans as being important,'' Sautner said. Contingency plans spell out what response woul occur if a spill occurred.

''Having an approved oil spill contingency plan is the core requirement of Alaska's spill prevention and response program,'' said Dennis Kelso, the commissioner of the Department of Environmental Conservation. ''Consequently we take this violation very seriously.''

Alaska Attorney General Doug Baily said, ''While the company quickly and forthrightly admitted error and cooperated in the state's investigation, we nonetheless felt an appropriate monetary sanction was necessary in order to serve the goals the Legislature sought to achieve in the enactment of the oil spill response law.''

The Sansinena II loaded crude oil at the Valdez terminal in Prince William Sound and at the Drift River terminal in Cook Inlet. It delivered the oil to the Nikiski refinery in Cook Inlet - where it was temporarily barred last November - and to Unocal refineries in California.

Earlier this year, the Sansinena temporarily stopped operating in Alaska when the continuing eruptions of Redoubt Volcano forced the nearby Drift River oil terminal to close until bigger and better dikes could be built to protect it from flooding caused by volcanic debris flowing into the Drift River.

The other two vessels have delivered refined petroleum products to southeastern Alaska but have operated elsewhere in the state, too, Sautner said.

Besides the Sansinena II, the state temporarily stopped two Exxon tankers from entering Alaska oil ports last fall and has turned back military fuel tankers without spill plans.

OTTAWA (UPI) - The Canadian dollar plunged more than half a cent against its American counterpart Tuesday amid a deepening constitutional crisis over the secession threat of French-speaking Quebec Province.

Immediately triggering the dollar's fall was the resignation of two Quebecers from the ruling Conservative Party caucus. One was Environment Minister Lucien Bouchard, the senior Quebec minister in the Conservative cabinet.

In Toronto, the Canadian dollar opened at 84.60 cents U.S. and fell to as low as 83.79 cents before closing at 84.15 cents, down from a Friday close of 84.76 cents. Canada's financial markets were closed Monday for a national holiday.

Money market analyst Steve Boutilier at the Toronto Dominion Bank said the Canadian dollar took ''a beating'' Tuesday morning. He said foreign investors have been ''more than sensitized'' to turmoil surrounding the Meech Lake Accord, a constitutional amendment on Quebec rights.

Trading in the Canadian dollar was ''really ugly,'' said foreign exchange dealer Ron Hoover at Burns Fry Ltd. in Toronto.

Bouchard told Parliament Tuesday he was quitting the Conservative Party over the anticipated failure of the Meech Lake Accord.

Finance Minister Michael Wilson said the dollar fell because foreign investors see ''economic implications'' if Meech Lake fails. These include higher interest rates to protect Canada's dollar.

''There is an effect of the Meech Lake Accord in the markets today as there was last week and the week before,'' Wilson told reporters. ''That adds a risk premium that leads to higher interest rates.''

The Canadian government intervened heavily, selling hundreds of millions of U.S. dollars for Canadian dollars, to little effect.

But John Day, vice-president of foreign exchange at Richardson Greenshields of Canada, said the Canadian dollar rebounded slightly after a large U.S. firm put in an order for $350 million in Canadian securities.

Earlier in the day, another Quebec member of the Conservative caucus, Gilbert Chartrand, said he would sit in Parliament as an independent. Yet a third Conservative Quebecer joined independent ranks last week.

The walkouts came amid a worsening constitutional crisis setting the mainly French-speaking province of Quebec against the country's other nine provinces, mainly English-speaking, raising fears Quebec will secede.

Manitoba, New Brunswick and Newfoundland provinces have refused to ratify the constitutional amendment recognizing Quebec as a ''distinct'' French-speaking society and empowering it to protect French-language culture.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 22) UPI - With a grim-faced Marlon Brando looking on, a judge ordered the actor's son held without bail Tuesday in the shooting death of his half-sister's Tahitian boyfriend.

''My son has been denied bail,'' Marlon Brando said shortly after the bail hearing. ''He's had his day in court. We will abide by that, but I believe my son is innocent of the charges.

''We must be strong and the family, with love and supporting each other, will prevail,'' Brando said in his first public comments on his son's arrest. ''The misery we see on the television each day has come to my house and has also come to the house of (the victim's family) in Tahiti.''

Wearing jailhouse blues, Christian Brando, 32, who had been held since his arrest last week in the slaying at his father's mountain-top estate, sat expressionless in the courtroom as his lawyers beseeched the judge to free him. His father and other members of the family sat nearby.

The lawyers, insisting he is no threat to the community, hoped to obtain Christian's release pending trial, but West Los Angeles Municipal Court Judge Rosemary Shumsky denied the bail motion and ordered Brando returned to court June 11 to schedule a preliminary hearing.

The defense presented 18 declarations of support on Brando's behalf, including one from actor Jack Nicholson, who lives in one of three houses in a complex that includes Marlon Brando's home.

One of Christian Brando's lawyers, Dan Stormer, said the declarations described the defendant as ''realible, sensitive, caring, responsible and hard-working.''

But prosecutors said they believe Brando might flee if released.

Along with first-degree murder, Brando is charged with one count each of possession of a machine gun and possession of a silencer.

Brando allegedly shot and killed Dag Drollet, the boyfriend of his 20-year-old half-sister, Cheyenne Brando, in the den of Marlon Brando's 12-room house in the Santa Monica Mountains last Wednesday night. Drollet died of a gunshot wound to his head and neck.

If convicted of murder, Brando would face a state prison term of 25 years to life. Prosecutors are seeking the death penalty. Brando pleaded innocent to the charges at his arraignment Friday.

Deputy District Attorney Steve Barshop, in arguing against bail, said Brando allegedly placed the gun against Drollet's head and that no evidence was found to support defense assertions that the shooting occurred during a struggle for the weapon.

''This case is a criminal homicide, not a tragic accident,'' Barshop told the judge.

According to a police report, Brando admitted shooting Drollet, but said he did not mean to.

One of his defense lawyers, William Kunstler, said the shooting was accidental and occurred during a fight between Brando and Drollet that was apparently sparked by Cheyenne Brando's accusation that Drollet had beaten her. Cheyenne Brando is pregnant, reportedly with Drollet's child.

Drollet was sitting in front of a television with a remote control in one hand and cigarette lighter in the other when he was shot, authorities said.

''I shot him, man, but not on purpose,'' police quoted Brando as saying. ''Please, believe me. I wouldn't do it in my father's house.

''I didn't want to shoot him. If I was going to kill that guy, I would have taken him to (Hollywood's) Franklin Canyon and hit him in the head with a baseball bat and pulverized the guy.''

In arguing for bail, the defense noted that Brando was drunk at time of the shooting, saying his blood-alchol level several hours later was 0.19, double the state's legal limit for motorists.

One of the defense lawyers, Ronald Kuby, said, ''(Brando) has had an alcohol problem in the past. We're trying to help a young man who is going to get chewed up because of his famous last name.''

After his arrest, Christian Brando was told of his right to remain silent, but insisted on speaking with investigators, police said.

He told police that a .45-caliber handgun went off accidentally during a scuffle over the weapon, killing Drollet.

''I wasn't crazy about the guy, but what was I going to do?'' he told police. ''There was a round in the chamber. He fought for the gun.''

TOLEDO, OH (MAY 22) UPI - Fourteen people were arrested for blockading the entrance to an abortion clinic Tuesday to protest what they said was the death of a woman who underwent an abortion.

About two dozen members of Operation Outrage surrounded the Toledo Medical Services clinic after 7 a.m., saying they were protesting the April death of a Sandusky County woman during an abortion at the clinic.

By mid-morning, 10 people were arrested and citations were issued to four other protesters. Police said they were charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. One person also was charged with obstructing official business.

Some of the protesters chained themselves to the front door of the clinic and police used hand tools to cut them loose. Police said 10 of those arrested had refused to give their names while being booked into the Lucas County jail.

Police ordered protesters into police vehicles and at least one arrested demonstrator crawled the 30-foot distance. Other protesters refused to move and police summoned stretchers to carry them.

On Monday, the Supreme Court let stand a ruling that ordered another anti-abortion group, Operation Rescue, to pay nearly $70,000 for ignoring court orders limiting demonstrations against abortions in New York.

Organizer Kelly Hescht said Monday's ruling did not pertain to the Toledo protest. She said the Supreme Court had been wrong previously and had ruled incorrectly in its decision against Terry's Operation Rescue.

''The Supreme Court said at one time that black people were chattel property and they were obviously false,'' Hescht said, ''so the Supreme Court is false to say that babies should not be protected and women should not be protected.''

Hescht said her group was not associated with Operation Rescue, although the tactic of harassment in front of the Toledo clinic's three doors was similar in method. She said demonstrators came to Toledo from four states.

Protesters handed reporters copies of an April 27 death certificate of a Green Springs woman who the group claimed died from an abortion performed at the clinic. Sandra Milton, 28, died of an internal hemorrhage from a laceration of the uterus during an abortion.

The clinic's operations were apparently unaffected by the protest as police escorted several people out a rear door.

SANTO DOMINGO, DOMINICAN REPUBLIC (MAY 22) UPI - Police and armed forces stepped up vigilance Tuesday following reports indicating that members of presidential candidate Juan Bosch's Dominican Liberation Party planned to take to the streets in protest over last week's election.

The controversial vote count for the May 16 presidential election has been delayed by charges of fraud from the second-place Bosch, who twice has claimed victory over President Joaquin Balaguer of the Reformist Social Christian Party.

A detailed review of reports from all voting booths was ordered, and it has been moving at a snail's pace. The Central Electoral Board, in its last release, said that with slightly more than 90 percent of the vote counted, Balaguer had 620,181 votes and Bosch 601,954, a lead of less than 2 percent. No official winner had been declared.

The agreement to revise the count followed charges by Bosch that there was a ''colossal fraud,'' and that his party had won by 30,000 votes. The four major political parties agreed Friday to the revision.

On Sunday, the Dominican Liberation Party's computer center coordinator, journalist Victor Grimaldi, said the party had lost the elections and charged party leaders were trying to alter the results.

Grimaldi said Monday he had received death threats, and added that certain groups within the party were planning street protests.

A spokesman for the armed forces said Tuesday that vigilance had been stepped up.

''For no reason will we permit any alteration in public order,'' the spokesman said.

Last Thursday, as Balaguer took an early lead in election returns, Bosch charged there was ''colossal fraud'' and called on his supporters to take to the streets, warning of bloodshed. He drew criticism from former U.S. President Jimmy Carter, who was in the Dominican Republic to monitor the elections.

Carter met with Bosch Friday, and all four major candidates agreed to respect the outcome of the vote revision.

No more election results are expected until the revision, by representatives of Dominican parties and international observers, is completed.

The Caribbean nation of 7 million people, which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti, has been tense during the vote count but violence has largely been averted. In pre-election clashes, one person was killed and many were wounded.

Hungary's prime minister-designate says he plans to pull his country out of the Warsaw Pact, and he gave Moscow a deadline to get its troops out of Hungary.

Jozsef Antall is expected to be elected prime minister by the Parliament tomorrow. His center-right Democratic Forum was the biggest winner in elections in March and April. Today Antall set the most radical agenda of Eastern Europe's new democracies.

In a speech to the new Parliament in Budapest, Antall declared Hungary's membership in the Warsaw Pact ''contrary to the will of the people.''

Soviet troops are based in Hungary as part of the Warsaw Pact. Antall said his government will work to ''make sure that the Soviet troops leave Hungary before June 30th, 1991.''

Hungarians have previously called for the removal of Soviet troops, but this marks the first time a deadline has been set.

Earlier this year Czechoslovakia won a commitment from Moscow for the withdrawal of Soviet troops from its territory.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (MAY 22) UPI - Sweden, a staunch supporter of the former Sandinista government, will renew close ties and give Nicaragua financial aid under President Violeta Chamorro, a Swedish Embassy official said Tuesday.

A high-level Swedish delegation will arrive in June for talks with Chamorro, said Socorro Alvarado, secretary of the co-operation sector at the Swedish Embassy in Managua.

Swedish diplomats and Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Enrique Dreyfus were scheduled to make the announcement Wednesday.

Alvarado said the talks are expected to result in a one-year renewal of trade agreements, and a pact whereby Sweden will provide Nicaragua with financial assistance.

Nicaragua, which is in dire need of international aid, suffered a further devaluation Tuesday of the cordoba. The devaluations have had a negative effect on consumer prices, which have doubled and tripled since Chamorro took office April 25.

Tuesday's devaluation dropped the official exchange rate from 120,000 to 130,000 cordobas to $1, and the black market rate to 235,000 cordobas to $1.

Before Chamorro's inauguration, the official rate was 53,800 cordobas to $1.

Central Bank President Francisco Mayorga, who ordered the latest devaluation, said Tuesday it was ''to stop inflation: which for the month of May will be more than 60 percent.''

Mayorga has asked Nicaraguans to tighten their belts until the results of his economic recovery plan begin to show some fruit - in July, by his predictions.

Chamorro's government, which is struggling to implement its economic reforms, has faced problems of congressional delays in passing $300 million in promised U.S. aid and a crippling five-day strike by government workers, most of whom support the opposition Sandinistas.

A quick arrival of Swedish aid could provide a significant boost to the depleted Nicaraguan treasury.

Late Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme first established close relations between the two countries during his administration, defying the United States and many other Western countries that opposed the Sandinistas.

Managua's huge, modern convention center bears Palme's name.

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - A distant relative of the AIDS virus that causes a form of leukemia is unusually common among southern and Caribbean blacks living in central Brooklyn, a researcher reported Tuesday.

The virus, known as human T-cell lymphotropic virus type 1, or HTLV-1, infects a type of white blood cell called a T-cell and can cause a rare, highly malignant cancer known as adult T-cell leukemia.

''Our study indicates that HTLV-1 infection is much more widespread than previously believed and, because of its long latency period, could become a public health problem in the future,'' said Dr. Harvey Dosik, director of medicine at the Interfaith Medical Center in Brooklyn.

In a study presented at a meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology in Washington, Dosik and his colleagues found 20 out of 480 people, or 4.4 percent, tested positive for HTLV-1 virus, a much greater percentage than in previous studies.

The virus, which is most common in Japan, Africa and the Caribbean, is spread the same way as the AIDS virus, through the exchange of bodily fluids such as blood through such contact as sex or blood transfusions.

The study is the first to show a high incidence of the virus in blacks from the American south, Dosik said. Central Brooklyn has the highest concentration of Caribbean and American blacks in the nation, the study said.

Of the 480 people in the study, 252 came from the South, 162 of them from North or South Carolina, and 183 came from outside the United States, most from the Caribbean.

One additional person in the study tested positive for another virus known as HTLV-2. That virus is believd to cause hairy cell leukemia and other forms of leukemia and lymphoma that are more chronic than those associated with HTLV-1.

Both are in a family of viruses known as retroviruses, which includes the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS.

Dosik began the study after diagnosing 15 patients with adult T-cell leukemia type 1 in 1986 in the largest outbreak to date in the United States. All of the 15 were black and came from the south or Caribbean and all have since died.

Most doctors are unfamiliar with the virus, Dosik said, and because deaths from the cancer are not being reported the true danger of the disease may not be recognized.

''It was necessary to undertake the study without funding because public health authorities have failed to recognize the significance of HTLV-1 in the United States,'' Dosik said.

The true impact of the disease has not been felt because of the long delay between infection and the time symptoms appear, but ''once the leukemia develops, it is devastating,'' he said.

(MAY 22) UPI - Vote totals in Romania today show Romanians apparently prefer a communist-dominated government to opposition parties.

With four-fifths of Sunday's vote counted, Interim President Ion Iliescu has a whopping 86 percent of the vote. Iliescu heads the communist-dominated National Salvation Front.

Romania is the only former East Bloc country in which the communists have been freely voted into power... amid a wave of anti-communism in Eastern Europe since last fall. The election resulted from a violent revolution that ousted Romanian communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu in December.

Opponents had accused Iliescu of close association with Ceausescu's government. But even voters in the town of Timisoara ... whcih helped spark the revolution... chose Iliescue overwhelmingly.

The greatest opposition to Iliescu came from Transylvania, where most of the nation's two-Million ethnic Hungarians live.

Spring showed its dangerous side again today in the South, while winter gave an encore performance in Maine.

Kentuckians are cleaning up from as many as eight tornadoes that swooped across 20-counties last night. One of the twisters tore apart a tavern in Richmond just after about 40 people got out of it. NO serious injuries are reported.

Thunderstorms are scattered from the Florida Panhandle to North Carolina.

In Arkansas, the rain-swollen Ouachita River is receding upstream, but is expected to crest 13 feet above flood stage downstream near Camden on Thursday.

Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton declared Garland County a state disaster area after inspecting the resort town of Hot Springs.

NEW YORK (MAY 22) UPI - Mayor David Dinkins headlined a ''day of solidarity against bigotry'' Tuesday by urging New Yorkers to come together in a color-blind campaign for ''respect and unity'' to combat simmering racial tensions in the city.

An overflow crowd of more than 5,000 people packed into the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine to hear the mayor call on New Yorkers to re-dedicate themselves to ''the values of justice, opportunity and caring.''

''This is the time to come together to create a wave of energy and unity so powerful that it can wash away the hate and the hurt,'' the mayor said. ''I'm sick of the pain. I've seen too much. I need you to be my companions in this campaign for respect and unity.''

The mayor called the rally to promote what he has dubbed the ''gorgeous mosaic'' of the city's multi-ethnic culture.

Also scheduled to speak were Gov. Mario Cuomo and representatives of black Irish, Hispanic, Italian, Jewish, Korean and homosexual groups.

A contingent of youths from a program housed in the cathedral's basement briefly drowned out the opening ceremony with chants of ''Stop the violence!''

During an NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund luncheon forum on integration earlier Tuesday, Dinkins invited the audience to join him at the evening rally.

''We Americans are held together by a long heritage of freedom, and we will not be divided by periodic spasms of bigorty and hatred,'' said Dinkins, sporting a blue ribbon in his lapel to symbolize the day of solidarity. ''That mosaic must be, can be and will be preserved.''

The rally followed the two verdicts in the Bensonhurst racial slaying case and a series of other racially divisive incidents in Brooklyn.

Friday night's acquittal of the accused ringleader in the Bensonhurst slaying on murder charges in the slaying of black teenager Yusuf Hawkins on Aug. 23, 1989, sparked a series of protests by blacks enraged by the verdict. The alleged triggerman in the case was convicted of murder.

''In order to save this great city we have to work together,'' said Stanley Hill, the head of District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Added Bishop Norman Quick, the president of the city's chapter of the National Council of Churches: ''We are proclaiming a day of solidarity against bigotry.''

The mayor and 25 community leaders on Monday announced plans for the rally as part of a campaign to emphasize the need for ethnic, racial and religious groups to join in combatting racial tensions.

(MAY 22) UPI - The killing of seven Arab workers near Tel Aviv two days ago is still triggering violent protests in Israel and Jordan.

The suspect in Sunday's attack is a dishonorably discharged 21-year-old Israeli soldier. He's under arrest and is to undergo psychiatric examination.

Today the suspect's father told Israeli Army Radio that his family ''is shattered by the enormity of the calamity'' and asks forgiveness for what he called a ''crazy act.''

Despite that call, violence flared for a third day in the occupied territories. It even spilled over into Jordan, where riot police using tear gas and live ammunition killed one of seven-thousand protesters in a refugee camp.

In Arab East Jerusalem, police sprayed tear gas and used clubs to break up a demonstration by several hundred Palestinians in front of the U-S Consulate.

Among the mourners were three Israeli Arab members of Parliament.

Also today, military and Palestinian sources report the killing of a 20-year-old Palestinian who allegedly set off a road-side bomb near a military patrol.

And, an Israeli army spokesman says a 22-year-old Palestinian from the Gaza Strip died today in an Israeli hospital from wounds suffered yesterday in what the Palestinians say was a clash with soldiers.

In Washington, D-C, a State Department spokeswoman reacted to the bloodshed, saying- ''The situation is crying out for a peace process to give these people some hope.''

And the U-N Relief and Works Agency issued a statement deploring what it calls the ''excessive use of force'' by Israeli soldiers in trying to end the protests.

(MAY 22) UPI - The abortion issue might be the decisive one as Idaho voters go to the polls in a primary that sets the stage for gubernatorial, Senate and congressional races in the fall.

Governor Cecil Andrus is running UNopposed on the Democratic side. Political observers say Andrus... a heavy favorite for an UNprecedented fourth term... might be politically vulnerable after his March veto of a bill that would have given Idaho the nation's most restrictive abortion law.

Observers say the Republican primary battle appears to be fixed between two of three hopefuls who are anti-abortion candidates... state Senator Rachel Gilbert and former state Senator Roger Fairchild.

Idaho officials predict between 30 and 35 percent of an estimated 527-thousand voters will cast ballots. For the first time since 1972, both Senate and congressional seats are at stake in the Idaho primary.

Congressman Larry Craig faces Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones for the G-O-P nomination for a Senate seat vacated by retiring Senator Jim McClure.

The Republican nominee will be favored to win in the fall. NO Idaho Democrat has been elected to the Senate since the late Frank Church in 1974.

(MAY 22) UPI - Some 350-thousand mourners beat their breasts and cried for revenge today in Srinigar, India, in a funeral procession for the assassinated chief Moslem religious leader of Kashmir.

Today's procession was peaceful, in contrast to yesterday's police response to an impromptu funeral march.

Police say at least 50 people died when security forces fired on thousands of Moslems who seized the Islamic priest's body from a hospital and carried it through the streets.

A senior police official said at least 300 other people are being treated in hospitals for gunshot wounds and injuries caused by baton blows.

Police took NO chances at today's funeral, deploying thousands of combat-ready troops across the tense summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state. The predominantly Moslem Kashmir area has been convulsed since mid-January by an uprising against Indian rule.

A survey on smoking says that ''cold turkey'' is the most effective way to extinguish the habit.

Scientists at the University of Wisconsin looked at a nationwide government survey that questioned more than 13-thousand people in 1986.

The poll found that smokers who quit on their own were twice as successful as those who sought help from a stop-smoking program.

The researchers also found that people who do stop smoking generally are better educated and older than those who fail in their effort to stop... but they found that a person's sex or race did NOT impact the success rate. NEITHER, they say, did the number of cigarettes a person smoked each day.

Among those who had smoked in the decade prior to the survey... 48 percent of those who tried to quit on their own succeeded in quitting. That figure is twice the 24 percent who quit after seeking help such as counseling, hypnosis or acupuncture.

Most of those 48 percent who quit on their own did it ''cold turkey.'' The remainder gradually cut down on the number of cigarettes each day... or switched to low-tar or low-nicotine brands... or substituted other tobacco products.

BURBANK, Calif. (MAY 23) UPI - Walt Disney Co. said Tuesday it is looking for what it calls an ''unsung hero'' for its campaign to promote the Disney World and Disneyland theme parks.

The company said it plans to select a college student who has overcome adversity to graduate as part of its ''What's Next'' campaign. Already under consideration for the promotion are a 24-year-old quadriplegic and a 70-year-old retired pilot.

Since starting the promotion three years ago, Disney has used mostly sports stars who yell, ''I'm going to Disney World'' or ''I'm going to Disneyland'' after winning a big game. The ads have featured such stars as Magic Johnson, Joe Montana, Orel Hershiser and Frank Viola.

Disney said it has asked colleges and universities to submit candidates. The deadline for entries is Friday.

WASHINGTON (MAY 22) UPI - Burma's upcoming elections, criticized as a mockery of democracy by a human rights group, likely will not be ''free or fair,'' a State Department official warned Tuesday.

''Opposition leaders have been placed under house arrest'' or sentenced to hard labor, and freedom of speech and assembly have been curtailed, the Washington-based International Human Rights Law Group said in a report issued Monday.

Candidates for office in the May 27 elections have been allowed only 10 minutes of television time and their statements must pass military censors the report stated. Assemblies of more than five persons without permits are banned.

Half a million people have been uprooted from anti-government districts of the capital, Rangoon - recently renamed Yangon, and moved to empty fields far from their jobs and shops.

The hardships created not only make it hard for them to vote but also have led to ''deaths from hunger and disease - some of the new settlements are like concentration camps,'' said the U.S. official.

''It is unlikely the elections will be free or fair. ... All the signs are bad,'' the State Department official told United Press International. ''The military hasn't even said what the election will choose (an assembly or a constitution-writing body) and when they would turn over power to civilians.

''We have let the Burmese know of our concerns through their embassy here in Washington several times. We let them know we're not ignorant of the facts. We urged them to take steps to rectify the situation, but there is no evidence it has happened. Now we'll have to wait and see who wins the elections,'' the official said.

In addition to calling for international election monitors, the Law Group also urged the lifting of martial law before the voting, the release of political prisoners and the end to arbitrary arrest and detention, torture forced relocation and forced service as porters for the military.

''It appears the Burmese government is interested in new trade and investment from Japan, Korea and Singapore,'' Janelle M. Diller, legal director of the Law Group, said in an interview with UPI. ''The election may prove the hook on which Japan would go forward.'' Most Western nations have suspended aid and discouraged trade with Burma since its crackdown on students and other dissidents in 1988.

The State Department official said however the Bush administration opposes a ban on all Burmese imports to the United States, currently under consideration by Congress, because: ''Such a ban would violate international trade agreements and damage nations such as Thailand,'' which processes much Burmese teak and gems, he said.

Burma, a former British colony recently renamed Myanmar, grew prosperous following its independence in 1947, exporting 2 million tons of rice per year as well as crude oil, jade, rubies and sapphires.

But since 1962, when General Ne Win seized power from the elected government, the country deteriorated to the point that in 1987, it was granted least-developed-nation status by the United Nations.

Burmese were not allowed passports, the study of English was discouraged, foreigners were banned or tightly limited, and the military controlled all media, politics, prices - even distribution of seeds and fertilizers to farmers.

Disgruntled ethnic groups such as the Karen, Kachin, Wa, Mon and Shan mounted insurrections for autonomy. Opium production skyrocketed until Burma led the world with 2,000 tons last year.

In spring 1988, a pro-democracy movement erupted, joined by the powerful Buddhist clergy and students, in marches of up to 1 million people. But that September, the army clamped down under its new leader General Saw Maung, opening fire on civilians and leaving many dead in the streets. The government admits 500 deaths, but diplomats and other observers say from March to September up to 10,000 may have died, said Court Robinson of the U.S. Committee for Refugees.

Several thousand Burmese students fled the crackdown to the Thai border where 3,500 remain - many sick from malaria and short of supplies, said Robinson, who recently visited their camps. Burdened by a third of a million or more Indochinese refugees, Thailand has so far not granted the students refugee status.

To improve its image, Burma called for elections and allowed political parties to organize. But any criticism of the army and its ruling State Law and Order Restoration Committee has been banned. The most popular opposition leader, Aung San Suu Kyi, and former Prime Minister U Nu, are under house arrest. Thousands of their party officials are also under arrest and there have been reports some were tortured.

SANTIAGO, CHILE (MAY 22) UPI - A Chilean official Tuesday said a reparations commission in the Orlando Letelier case has been created, but he insisted that his government is not taking responsibility for the 1976 assasination of the former foreign minister in Washington.

The subsecretary of foreign relations, Edmundo Vargas, named the five members of the Bryan Commission, a group that will decide how much money in indemnity the families of murdered ex-Chilean Foreign Minister Orlando Letelier and American Ronnie Moffit will receive.

Letelier and Moffit were killed when a bomb exploded in their car in Washington, D.C., Sept. 21, 1976.

A U.S. investigation charged an American bomb expert, Michael Townley, with the act, but Townley, in a plea-bargaining agreement, said three Chilean officials in the government of then-ruling Gen. Augusto Pinochet ordered the killing.

Vargas said the government of President Patricio Aylwin, who took office March 11, is prepared to pay to indemnity ''gracefully,'' but will not take blame for the murders.

Vargas said a neutral diplomat, Andres Aguillar of Venezuela, will preside over the reparations commission, and local judge Francisco Orrego and the ex-president of Uruguay, Julio Maria Sanguinetti, will represent Chile.

U.S. District Judge William Mulligan and English diplomat Sir John Freeland will represent the United States on the commission, Vargas said.

(MAY 22) UPI - Jordan says its security forces today killed two Palestinians who had fired shots at police. But UNofficial Palestinian sources tell U-P-I that at least nine Palestinian demonstrators were killed. They deny the victims fired at police. Sources in the Amman hospital said a 14-year-old boy shot to death by police yesterday had four bullets in the chest. The Palestinian demonstrations follow Sunday's shooting deaths of seven Palestinians in Israel.

House and Senate negotiators today agreed on a long-awaited bill that includes an aid plan for Panama and Nicaragua. The bill now must go back to the full House and Senate for final passage, before it can go to President Bush for his signature. House Democrats are trying to tie the money to a cut in military aid for El Salvador. Congressional sources say they expect that difficulty will be resolved.

Three Democrats pressed for the inclusion of a broad ban on assault weapons in anti-crime legislation today in Washington. Representatives from several police organizations joined Senators Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, Paul Simon of Illinois and Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio in calling for the assault gun ban. Metzenbaum warned that the National Rifle Association ''has pulled out all the stops'' to defeat the bill.

Health organizations in Washington today said a survey shows nearly one-third of older Americans skip meals almost daily. The survey is being used in a push to get the elderly and others at risk of poor nutrition to undergo regular diet screening. The American Academy of Family Physicians, the American Dietetic Association and the National Council on Aging say people should have experts analyze their diets.

(MAY 22) UPI - House and Senate negotiators bowed to pressure from the White House today and agreed on a long-awaited supplemental spending bill. The four-point-three-BILLION-dollar measure now must go back to both chambers for final passage before it can be signed by President Bush. The bill grants 720-Million dollars in emergency aid to Panama and Nicaragua... nearly matching the request made by the president months ago.

Violence flared for a third day today in the Israeli occupied territories. Three more Palestinians were killed by army gunfire today in the West Bank and Gaza Strip in the wake of Sunday's shooting deaths of seven Palestinian laborers by a dishonorably discharged Israeli soldier. Several hundred Palestinians demonstrated in front of the U-S Consulate to protest the killings. Israeli leaders, in a rare show of unanimity, strongly condemned the killings and appealed for restraint.

Three iron workers were killed and a fourth was seriously injured today at a construction site on the campus of Ohio State University in Columbus. Authorities say the men were working at a new computer center when the top story of the structure collapsed onto the floors below. One man was pronounced dead at the scene, while the others died at hospitals.

An Episcopalian deacon shot in the leg by a church member in Melbourne Beach, Florida, yesterday says the gunman was upset over the molding used (MAY 22) UPI - The Lithuanian Parliament today refused to bend to the will of Soviet President Gorbachev. Gorbachev demands the republic suspend its declaration of independence before starting any negotiations on secession. The Parliament voted to offer to suspend laws implementing independence as soon as talks begin, but preserved the independence declaration itself. A Lithuanian spokswoman says the declaration is NON-negotiable.

Fallen Wall Street maverick Ivan Boesky today admitted publicly for the first time that he traded securities on inside information while knowing it was a crime. Testifying in a New York court, Boesky said he shared his tips with stock speculator John Mulheren, who is on trial for conspiracy and securities fraud. But Boseky said Mulheren did NOT know it was inside information NOR where it originated.

The Hearst Corporation and the Soviet Union's official newspaper are going to have a go at publishing a Soviet-American newspaper. (MAY 22) UPI - Greyhound workers today made an UNconditional offer to immediately end their three-month-old strike. The union proposal, in effect, puts in motion a back-pay clock that could cost the bus company up to 10-Million dollars a month between now and the signing of a new contract. There was NO immediate comment from Greyhound, but the offer is unlikely to settle the bitter and violence-marred labor dispute.

Hungarian Prime Minister-designate Jozsef Antall today called for his country's withdrawal from the Warsaw Pact. But Antall says his new government hopes to maintain ''good neighborly relations based on equal rights'' with all of Hungary's neighbors, including the Soviet Union. Antall is expected to be elected by Parliament tomorrow and his address to the lawmakers sets the agenda for Hungary's first NON-communist government in 43 years.

A pastor at a funeral home in Brooksville, Florida, today called for ''an eye for an eye'' in the aftermath of the death of a white teenager in a brawl between white and black youths. The Reverend Ed Gardner later denied making the statement. Police say 19-year-old Russell Coats was beaten to death Saturday with clubs and tire irons, apparently as he tried to break up the fight. Six blacks have been charged in connection with the death.

New York City residents are gathering tonight for a rally against racism. The rally comes in the wake of two verdicts in a Brooklyn racial killing, and a series of other racially divisive incidents. Leaders of New York's religious, labor and community groups joined the call for solidarity.

(MAY 22) UPI - The constitutional crisis setting the French-speaking province of Quebec against the rest of Canada worsened today. Praising the ''inalienable right'' of Quebecers to chose their own destiny, Environment Minister Lucien Bouchard resigned from the Conservative government's Cabinet. Bouchard has grown increasingly frustrated by the failure of English-speaking Canada to give final approval to a proposed amendment to the 1982 Constitution recognizing Quebec as a distinct society.

Federal regulators in Washington, D-C, today said Neil Bush... the president's son... directed the failed Silverado Savings and Loan Association when it hatched a plan to falsely inflate its worth. The Denver thrift collapsed in 1988 and was taken over by government regulators. Bush is scheduled to testify tomorrow at a House Banking Committee investigation. The Silverado failure is expected to cost taxpayers more than one-BILLION dollars.

An internal split may be shrinking the size of the Shining Path guerrilla movement in Peru. Sociologists who have studied the secretive Maoist group say an internal power struggle has led to a recent tapering off of violence. The strong turnout in elections in November and April is seen as a defeat for the rebels. The two candidates for the June runoff election offer reconciliation to combatants who give up their arms.

Investigators are looking into the possibility that excessive force was used in Sunday's killing of two inmates at a maximum-security prison in Joliet, Illinois. Officials say the inmates were stabbing members of their own gang in some type of internal power struggle when a guard fired a shotgun to stop the attack. Authorites say a tentative investigation indicates the guard fired properly in his effort to quell the melee.

(MAY 22) UPI - The bloodshed continues in the Israeli occupied territories and in neighboring Jordan...

A busy day on Capitol Hill...

And an offer in the 12-week-old Greyhound strike...

These stories... and more... next, from United Press International:

Sunday's killings of seven Palestinians workers by a so-called deranged Israeli man continues to trigger rioting in the occupied territories. Today's surge of violence resulted in the deaths of three more Palestinians.

In Arab East Jerusalem, police broke up a demonstration in front of the U-S Consulate by several hundred Palestinians protesting the slayings. The protesters included Arab members of Parliament who want the United States to pressure Israel into holding talks with the P-L-O- quote- ''instead of killing people.''

President Bush reacted to the bloodshed by again seeking to give a push to the stalled Middle East peace initiative. The president also extended his sympathies to the families of the seven Arab victims, while the father of the man held in the deaths asked the nation for forgiveness for the incident's bloody aftermath.

And in a rare show of unanimity, Israeli leaders strongly condemned the killings and appealed for restraint.

Today's violence was significantly less than Sunday and yesterday... two of the bloodiest days of the 29-month-old Palestinian uprising.

Violent protests also continued today in Jordan, where riot police used live ammunition to disperse some seven-thousand angry demonstrators in a northern refugee camp. Two Palestinians were killed in clashes with Jordanian security forces, but UNofficial sources claim at least nine people died.

(MAY 22) UPI - Striking Greyhound workers today made an UNconditional offer to return to work and end their three-month-old walkout.

If the company refuses the union's pitch, the nature of the dispute changes from a strike to a lockout and allows workers to apply for unemployment benefits.

In effect, the offer puts in motion a back-pay clock that could cost economically strapped Greyhound up to 10-Million dollars a month between now and when a new contract is signed. If the company accepts the offer, returning employees would be working under the same terms as March 2nd when the strike began. The proposal thus pressures Greyhound management and the company's creditors to return to the bargaining table.

In Dallas, Greyhound spokesman George Gravley said the company would respond to the offer this week. But he says the bus line had NO intention of allowing the striking drivers to return to work at the expense of replacement employees hired since the walkout began.

(MAY 22) UPI - Soviet President Gorbachev today repeated his demand that all three Baltic republics suspend their declarations of independence... even as Lithuania's Parliament rejected the demand again.

Gorbachev met today with the presidents of Latvia and Estonia. A spokesman for the Estonian mission in Moscow says the meeting ''did NOT bring any new results.''

This was the first known meeting between Gorbachev and the presidents of any of the three republics since their independence proclamations of the past 10 weeks.

In Vilnius, the Lithuanian Parliament considered suspending laws implementing independence as soon as negotiations with Moscow begin on secession. But parliament preserved the independence declaration itself.

Gorbachev last week rejected a similar offer.

Lithuania has repeatedly said it is willing to discuss anything except its declaration.

NATO defense ministers gathered for a two-day meeting in Belgium today launched an overhaul of strategic thinking forged during four tense decades of the Cold War.

Amid reports that ''the threat from a united Warsaw Pact NO longer exists '' the ministers began to fundamentally redraw a defense strategy for the 1990's.

NATO's Defense Planning Committee scrapped an outdated 1977 policy calling for each nation to boost defense spending by three percent annually. The alliance also agreed NATO training exercises could be substantially reduced.

Western military strategists say the Warsaw Pact's virtual collapse has made a quick Soviet land offensive nearly impossible. Short-range nuclear weapons... designed for attacks from once-hostile Soviet satellites... would now land on the newly democratic countries of Eastern Europe.

U-S Defense Secretary Cheney outlined some ''enduring elements'' of NATO strategy that should be retained. These include a continuing U-S troop presence in Europe... a united Germany within NATO... and a deterrent force with the ''appropriate mix'' of nuclear and conventional forces.

(MAY 22) UPI - New York Mayor David Dinkins called on New Yorkers to show ''tolerance, respect and unity'' to combat racial tensions.

An overflow crowd of more than five-thousand people packed into the Cathedral of St. John the Divine this evening to hear the mayor call on New Yorkers to re-dedicate themselves to ''the values of justice, opportunity and caring.''

Dinkins called the rally to promote what he has dubbed the ''gorgeous mosaic'' of the city's multi-ethnic culture. Also scheduled to speak are New York Governor Mario Cuomo and representatives of black, Irish, Hispanic, Italian, Jewish, Korean, gay and lesbian groups.

A contingent of youths from a program housed in the cathedral's basement briefly drowned out the opening ceremony with chants of ''Stop the violence.''

In Brooksville, Florida, a pastor remembering a white teen-ager killed in a weekend fight between white and black youths called for an ''eye-for-an-eye'' justice.

The Reverend Ed Gardner told 350 mourners at a funeral home- quote- ''I believe in an eye for an eye, and I hope you get justice.''

He later denied making the statement, suggesting someone else near the podium might have said it in hopes of getting attention. But several reporters present at the funeral recalled hearing Gardner make the remark.

(MAY 22) UPI - A pornographic movie producer testified today in Aspen, Colorado, that she saw rampant drug use during a visit to the home of so-called ''gonzo'' journalist Hunter S. Thompson last winter.

The testimony came at a pre-trial hearing at which Thompson was ordered to stand trial.

Thompson is charged with four felony counts of possession of illegal drugs and dynamite. Additional charges of felony cocaine possession charge and misdemeanor sexual assault were dismissed.

Producer Gail Palmer-Slater told sheriff's deputies she was fondled during a visit with Thompson at his Woody Creek home outside Aspen in February. The district attorney's office then took 11 hours to search Thompson's house. Investigators say they turned up cocaine, marijuana, Valium-type pills, L-S-D, dynamite and blasting caps.

Thompson pleaded innocent to all counts.

After the hearing, Thompson said- quote- ''If this is the American legal system, we're all in trouble.'' After leaving the courthouse he did a flip and a kick in the air.

(MAY 22) UPI - Congressional negotiators agreed today to give President Bush almost his entire request of emergency aid to Central America. They are NOT expected to go through with threats to formally link the issues- making the Salvadoran aid cut largely symbolic.

The House today overwhelmingly passed legislation outlawing discrimination against 43-Million physically and mentally disabled U-S citizens. The landmark bill must be reconciled with a somewhat different Senate-passed version before the measure is approved and sent to President Bush. RICHMOND, VA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - James River Corp. (NYSE: JR), announced Wednesday that, while fourth quarter operating results largely met management's expectations, asset write-offs related to the discontinuation of unprofitable operations and other nonrecurring charges reduced reported earnings by 44 cents per share.

These charges were partially offset by an after-tax gain of 30 cents per share from the sale of the company's Nonwovens Division during the quarter. Reflecting these items, earnings per share were 55 cents for the quarter compared to 84 cents for last year.

Last year's fourth fiscal quarter included an additional week of operations (14 weeks vs. 13 weeks), and thus reported results for the quarter are not directly comparable.

The effects of these items on earnings per share for the quarter are summarized below:

	Fourth Quarter		Pct
	F90	F89	Change
Earnings per share, as reported	55 cents	84 cents	(35)
Less nonrecurring items: Gain on sale of Nonwovens Division	(30 cents)
Asset dispositions and retirements	40 cents
Personnel and other costs	4 cents
Pro forma effect of additional week	6 cents)
	69 cents	78 cents	(12)

The company's operations reported sales of $1.5 billion and net income of $50.8 million for the quarter. Pretax charges related to asset write-downs totalled $56.9 million.

The largest of these was incurred when the company shut down a Specialty Papers mill in Fitchburg, Mass., in April, 1990; the remaining charges were related to individual specialty paper machines or other equipment permanently idled during the quarter.

Management estimates that operating losses accrued by these units during fiscal 1990 totalled over $20 million before taxes, or approximately 15 cents per share after taxes. Personnel costs were primarily for early retirement programs related to overhead reduction.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Meeting with more than 200 securities analysts in New York City Wednesday, Hewlett-Packard Company outlined plans for addressing what HP President and Chief Executive Officer John Young termed ''a fluid and challenging second half of the year with lots of promising opportunities.''

Young's remarks were delivered at the company's regularly scheduled, semiannual securities analysts meeting. HP reported full fiscal first-half results on May 16.

Young described profitable growth as one of the company's top priorities for the 1990s.

Young cited several programs HP is pursuing to fuel future growth. For example, the company is applying its existing capabilities in measurement technology, computation and networking to the medical-care and chemical-analysis markets. Young also noted that HP is broadening its industry-leading offering of personal peripherals to address the needs of customers using Apple Macintosh computers. HP recently has expanded its offering of printers, plotters and scanners made for that market.

New technologies such as digital-audio tape and optical disc drives have helped to create a secondary-storage market for PC and workstation users. In addition, the explosive growth of digital-cellular communication provides an attractive opportunity for an instrument business otherwise slowed by defense-department cutbacks.

Acknowledging an industry-wide slowdown in growth rates for computer workstations, Lewis E. Platt, HP executive vice president with responsibility for the Computer Products Sector, said the company is pushing ahead with significant new products to provide improved price/performance.

Hewlett-Packard Company is an international manufacturer of measurement and computation products and systems recognized for excellence in quality and support. The company's products and services are used in industry, business, engineering, science, medicine and education in approximately 100 countries. HP has 93,000 employees and had revenue of $11.9 billion in its 1989 fiscal year.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, CA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - The U.S. Patent Office last week awarded Genentech Inc. a patent which provides broad protection of the process for producing recombinant human gamma interferon.

This is the fourth patent issued to the company relating to gamma interferon, and is important because it protects against foreign-made recombinant gamma interferon imports into the U.S. market.

The patent covers the process from cell culture through product recovery for recombinant human gamma interferon production in bacterial and mammalian host systems. Under current U.S. trade laws, process patents of this type protect against competitors employing the process to make the product outside of the United States and market it in South San Francisco.

''The trade law wisely limits foreign competition from infringing the intellectual property rights of U.S.-based manufacturers,'' said Stephen Raines, vice president of intellectual property at Genentech. ''This most recent patent enhances the health of Genentech's gamma interferon patent position,'' he added.

Gamma interferon is a naturally occurring protein which stimulates the body's immune system. Genentech has submitted an application with the FDA to market its Actimmune (TM), recombinant gamma interferon, for the treatment of chronic granulomatous disease.

In addition, the company continues to study the safety and efficacy of the drug in treating patients with trauma-related infections and certain types of cancer.

Genentech has previously received three other patents relating to gamma interferon which cover the recombinant product's DNA, cell cultures and vectors, and expression vectors. In addition, the company has been advised by the Patent Office that a fifth patent, which will cover the expression vehicles necessary to make the product, will be issued soon.

Genentech is a leading biotechnology company focusing on the development, manufacture and marketing of pharmaceuticals produced by recombinant DNA technology.

BOISE, ID (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - TJ International Inc. (NASDAQ:TJCO) senior management provided a guardedly upbeat assessment of 1990's business prospects at the company's annual meeting Wednesday in Boise.

At the meeting Minnick noted that business is particulary strong in the West for the company's premium-quality wood windows and residential structural products, despite a generally lackluster housing environment in other parts of the United States and Canada. Continuing gains in market share bode well for the company's long-term future, Minnick commented. He spoke optimistically about prospects for significant penetration of the Japanese market in light of recent successful trade negotiations that will reduce dramatically Japanese tariffs on the company's laminated veneer lumber structural products.

At the annual meeting stockholders re-elected all nine existing TJ International directors to one-year terms including: Robert V. Hansberger Robert G. Linville Jr., Walter C. Minnick, J.L. Scott, Jerre L. Stead, Arthur L. Troutner, Harold E. Thomas, J. Robert Tullis and Steven C. Wheelwright.

In addition, TJ International chairman of the board Harold E. PHOENIX (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Pinnacle West Chairman Richard Snell told more than 1,000 shareholders at the company's annual meeting Wednesday that he has put the company on a clear path toward recovery, a direction for which he takes ultimate responsibility.

''The plan we are talking about today is my plan; if it goes astray, it's my fault,'' Snell said in his first annual meeting as Pinnacle West chairman. ''I accept all the heat which legitimately goes with it.

''In return, I ask for your clear understanding that there is a new administration here, one which is not beholden to the prior one and which will function somewhat differently and whose mistakes will be its own,'' he said. ''So, if you are going to give me heat, please make sure that it's my heat.''

In formulating direction for the company, Snell said he was keenly aware of Pinnacle West's problems including massive losses from the MeraBank issue, unrecovered expenses from Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station being off line, reduced and eliminated dividends and a market price below book value.

At the same time, he said he recognizes that high bills and job security are concerns of Arizona Public Service Co. customers and employees, respectively.

''Not only am I aware of these problems, I deeply regret the impact they have had on you my fellow shareholders. And I intend to deal with them '' he said.

In order to deal with the problems, he said those problems must be understood.

''The decision to diversify was made -- with shareholder approval -- in 1985,'' Snell said. ''With hindsight, directors and shareholders alike would have deferred that decision until cash flow from a smoothly running Palo Verde was assured.

''And, with the benefit of lessons learned during the last two years across corporate America, we might not have made that decision at all.''

He said the acquisition of MeraBank ''was clearly a diversification move.

While we did our homework preparatory to that move, it didn't prevent us from what has proven to be a move into the wrong industry at the wrong time.''

Although the company's diversification also impacted other areas of its business, he said the conclusion to diversify was strictly a business decision.

''I did not then, nor do I now, consider that decision to have been venal or motivated by ego or personal gain,'' he said. ''There were and are plenty of precedents for diversification in the utility industry and elsewhere.

''And who knows? Had a key judgement of the Pinnacle board proven out -- specifically that the Arizona economy would continue to be reasonably vibrant -- we would be enjoying a nice friendly meeting here today.''

Among the most important elements of Pinnacle West's business strategy are getting Palo Verde to run as it should and containing costs throughout the organization.

In addition, Pinnacle West management will focus on paying down debt with a view to restoring the dividend as soon as prudently possible, improving relations with the Arizona Corporation Commission, maximizing value in the company's non-utility assets and obtaining acceptable results in the forthcoming rate proceeding.

WEST HOLLYWOOD, CA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Bank of Los Angeles (NASDAQ:BKLA) Tuesday announced that Deak International Ltd. has opened a foreign-exchange service in one of the bank's regional offices -- a marketing move unique in Southern California's retail financial arena.

The new arrangement puts a full-service facility of Toronto- based Deak, one of the world's largest foreign-exchange firms, in the lobby of the bank's West Hollywood, Calif. regional office. This enables individuals and businesses to do all of their banking and foreign-currency exchanging under one roof.

The Deak operation gives Bank of Los Angeles a new line of special services, while introducing Deak to the bank's retail and commercial customers.

Such a venture is unprecedented in Southern California and rare in the rest of the United States, where banks normally don't host an independent foreign-exchange branch -- and where large banks reserve their foreign-currency services for big corporations.

The Deak branch at Bank of Los Angeles offers the public foreign currency, overseas fund transfers, precious metals and the resources of Deak's 150 other foreign-exchange branches in six countries.

For people planning foreign travel, Deak's West Hollywood branch can supply cash in more than 120 currencies and no-fee traveler's checks in several currencies. This service helps travelers avoid sudden jumps in exchange rates and other cash problems once abroad.

Bank of Los Angeles can now better serve its business customers when they need efficient, expert assistance with foreign currencies or fund transfers.

Meanwhile, Deak stands to benefit from the bank's nonstop efforts to provide unrivaled customer service.

''We like the constant emphasis Bank of Los Angeles puts on personalized service,'' said David Welch, manager of Deak's West Hollywood facility. ''That kind of dedicated attention to individuals and businesses has always been a Deak priority -- and our edge in the marketplace.''

Although the Deak operation is located in West Hollywood, its services are also available through the bank's other regional offices in Beverly Hills and Hollywood.

In West Hollywood, Bank of Los Angeles and Deak International are at 8901 Santa Monica Blvd. Their hours are Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.; Friday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m. For more information call 213/351-1400.

LOS ANGELES, CA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - November 6 has been set as the date to begin the trial of the lawsuit brought by Pacific Express vs. United Airlines.

The case is scheduled to be heard in Los Angeles court before U.S. District Judge Edward Rafeedie. Both parties had agreed that this case would follow the suits of a number of airlines who had alleged abuse by the computerized airline reservation system of United and American Airlines.

The last of these suits was settled recently with United agreeing to pay Continental Airlines in excess of $77 million just days before the case was to go to the jury.

United is charged by Pacific Express with violating federal and state antitrust regulations and unfair competition laws through a number of actions including: below cost pricing, predatory scheduling, computer reservation bias and abuse, denying of airline access, negotiating a ''feeder'' agreement in less than good faith, convincing travel agents to ticket away from Pacific Express and other actions designed to put the plaintiff out of business.

The plaintiffs are claiming damages in excess of $140 million. Since antitrust damages are tripled, this suit has a potential claim of nearly one half billion dollars.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Lawsuits for unspecified damages have been filed in the Superior Court of California against Epson America Inc. and two of its management employees for alleged invasion of privacy, under Sec. 630 of the California Penal Code, and wrongful termination brought by the plaintiff, Alana Shoars, according to Noel Shipman, attorney for Shoars.

The suits allege that a management employee of Epson eavesdropped on the private electronic mail of up to 700 Epson employees with the full knowledge and consent of Epson, and conspired with a second management employee to wrongfully terminate Shoars when she refused to cooperate with the illegal eavesdropping.

According to Shipman, Shoars was employed as an electronic mail administrator in the Information Systems department of Epson's corporate headquarters in Torrance. Part of Shoars' job function was to support the company's worldwide MCI Electronic Mail System.

The integrity of the system and the confidentiality of messages between the sender and recipient are maintained through encoding of the message during transmission and the use of passwords for access to the message. This gives the sender and recipient expectations of privacy for their mail.

According to Shipman, the suit alleges that Shoars' supervisor at Epson, Robert Hillseth, manager of HP Computer Operations and Data Communications consistently made unauthorized connections to the MCI Mail system at Epson allowing him to electronically eavesdrop on employee communications through his ''income and outgoing audit log.''

He is alleged to have read and printed thousands of confidential messages. Nearly 700 Epson employees were registered users of the system at the time of Shoars' employment.

Shoars alleges that she was fired because she discovered and refused to cooperate with Hillseth in his violation of the invasion of privacy. In addition, Hillseth and Gary La Monte allegedly filed a false police report with the Torrance Police Department to embarrass Shoars.

A second lawsuit filed by Shoars alleges that Hillseth and La Monte, employee relations manager at Epson's Torrance facility, acted as co-conspirators in the invasion of privacy and defamation of character of Shoars.

Shipman said a class action suit is under consideration against Epson.

For the year, net income increased by 78 percent while revenue jumped 121 percent -- representing 13 consecutive quarters of year-over-year advances.

Revenue more than doubled for the year to $142.2 million from $64.5 million. Net income increased to nearly $4.0 million, or 87 cents per share on approximately one million additional shares, from $2.2 million, or 62 cents per share, in the prior year.

In the fourth quarter of FY90, the company reported net income of $1.4 million, or 30 cents per share, on revenue of $52.2 million vs. $615,000, or 17 cents per share, on revenue of $19.9 million in the like quarter a year ago.

In the worldwide aviation fueling market in which IRC conducts business, the October 1989 acquisition of JCo Energy Partners Ltd. (renamed World Fuel Services Inc.) and the establishment of World Fuel Services Ltd., located in Gatwick, England, significantly expanded the company's business base outside its Miami fueling operation while simultaneously enhancing IRC's worldwide fueling capabilities at major airports in the United States and expanded IRC's existing international program.

Currently, the company can fuel its customers at more than 300 airports in the United States and at 629 airports in more than 140 other countries.

The January 1990 acquisition of the Cherokee companies, effective Oct. 1, 1989, and the formation of Cherokee Group Inc., and Cherokee Groundwater Consultants Inc. to conduct environmental consulting and remediation, strongly positioned IRC in the Florida underground storage tank (UST) marketplace while also serving to further integrate the company's contaminated soil remediation, oil re-refining and analytical laboratory environmental operations.

Cherokee is the second largest UST operation in the state of Florida providing turn-key UST, fuel dispensing, construction and environmental consulting and remediation services.

IRC is strongly positioned to provide integrated environmental services to public and private sector companies, and state and federal agencies throughout the Southeast and Mid-Atlantic regions of the United States and is positioned to replicate this integrated program.

The Company also holds a leading position in the marketing of aviation fuel to a worldwide niche market of non-major commercial operators of large aircraft.

BELLEVUE, WA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Esterline Corporation (NYSE) today reported net earnings of $3.8 million, or $.58 per share, for the first six months (ended April 30) of the company's current fiscal year.

Comparable earnings in last year's first half were also $3.8 million, or $.45 per share based on the 8.5 million shares then outstanding. (The current period earnings per share calculation is based on 6.6 million shares outstanding as a result of the repurchase of shares from a former major shareholder in September 1989.) Net earnings for the first half of 1989 were $4.2 million, or $.49 per share, including an extraordinary item of $376,000, or $.04 per share, from an operating loss carryforward tax benefit.

First half sales for the current fiscal year were $202.7 million, compared to the $142.3 million reported for the same period in fiscal 1989.

Fiscal 1990 sales and net earnings include the effects of the six former Criton Technologies' companies acquired in September 1989. Earnings also reflect an $11.6 million expense primarily for year-to-date interest on financing for the acquisition and shares repurchase, and amortization of the acquisition purchase price. Last year's first half interest expense was $1 million.

Fiscal 1990 second quarter net earnings were $2 million, or $.30 per share. In the same year-ago period, net earnings were $2.3 million, or $.27 per share on the shares then outstanding. Prior year earnings included $122,000, or $.01 per share, from the extraordinary item. Sales for the second quarter were $101.2 million compared to the pre-acquisition $70.1 million reported in the same period last year.

On a direct comparison with the immediately preceding quarter--the only prior quarter that includes results from the acquired companies for the full period--the company's net earnings rose from $.28 to $.30 per share on essentially level sales.

Wendell P. Hurlbut, Esterline's president and chief executive officer, said the quarter-to-quarter performance "...reflects continued internal operating improvements."

Commenting on the company's current performance, Hurlbut said, "...generally speaking, the acquired companies are helping to provide earnings stability while more than offsetting their associated interest expense, and the original Esterline companies are holding their own in continuing soft markets."

Esterline is a leading manufacturer of automation equipment for the production of printed circuit boards and metal fabrication, instrumentation for quality control, power measurement and process control and engineered products for the commercial aircraft, aerospace and defense industries.

COLUMBUS, OH (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Goal Systems International Inc. Wednesday reported record revenues of $22.9 million for the quarter ended Apil 30, 1990, representing 42 percent growth over the previous year, when first quarter revenues were $16.2 million.

Earnings from operations increased 54 percent to $2.3 million from $1.5 million for the prior year. After one-time merger and acquisition-related expenses of $5.2 million or 20 cents per share, Goal Systems reported a net loss for the quarter of $2.2 million or 12 cents per share compared to net earnings of $1.1 million or 6 cents per share for the same period last year. Without the one-time merger and acquisition expenses (which have all been reflected in the first quarter), net income would have been $1.5 million or 8 cents per share.

All figures for the prior year have been restated to reflect the mergers of MVS Software Inc. and Essential Software Inc., which were completed during the quarter and which have been accounted for on the pooling of interest basis.

The company showed strong revenue growth in all segments of its business. Revenue from international operations grew by 74 percent over the first quarter of fiscal 1990. The Information Technology Division reported a revenue increase of 42 percent over the first quarter last year and the Data Center Management Division showed an increase in total domestic revenue of 27 percent for the quarter.

While the assimilation and integration of the newly acquired companies is not yet complete, Wetmore commented that the process is proceeding smoothly.

Goal Systems (NASDAQ:GOAL) designs, develops and markets software grouped into two product lines. The Data Center Management Division consists of a broad range of systems software products for IBM and compatible mainframe computers which allow users to manage, automate, monitor and analyze the use, cost and performance of their data processing resources. The Information Technology Division offers performance support products including computer-based training and computer-based reference software and associated courseware and professional services. Revenue for the fiscal year ended January 31, 1990, was $86.2 million.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Over 600 copies of illegal software with a value of more than $250,000 was seized during a court ordered raid on May 8th by the Software Publishers Association on three locations of National Business Acadamy, a Los Angeles area computer training facility.

After receiving a search and seizure order from the Federal District Court in Los Angeles, federal marshals acting on behalf of Lotus Development Corporation, Microsoft Corporation and WordPerfect Corporation, raided the Van Nuys, Inglewood and Glendale locations of the National Business Academy, a for-profit adult vocational school that trains individuals in word processing and spreadsheet programs. The school was allegedly involved in the illegal use, duplication and distribution of software published by Lotus, Microsoft and WordPerfect.

The search and seizure order authorizing this raid was granted after a copyright and trademark infringement suit was filed against National Business Academy, its President Steve Nelson, and its Vice President of Operations, Jeff Gearhart. The plaintiffs in the suit charge that in excess of $2.5 million in copyrighted software may have been illegally duplicated and distributed by the defendants. National Business Academy did not oppose the entry of a preliminary injunction that was entered by order of the court on May 17th. The injunction bars the defendants from using, distributing, manufacturing or copying any illegal copies of the plaintiffs' software.

Until enjoined by the court, National Business Academy taught students computer skills utilizing illegally created copies of software program. The students were permitted to take unauthorized copies of the software for use at home. More than 4,000 students have enrolled in National Business Academy courses since 1986.

Lotus Development, Microsoft and WordPerfect, the plaintiffs in the copyright suit against National Business Academy, are all participating members of the SPA Copyright Protection Fund (''The Fund''). The Fund was organized in 1988 for the purpose of coordinating industry action against software piracy. More than 40 lawsuits have been filed in the last two years.

The Software Publishers Association is the principal trade group of the PC Software industry. Its over 640 members represent the leading publishers in the business, consumer and education markets in North America and abroad.

Individuals wishing to report copyright violations should contact the SPA anti-piracy hotline at 1-800-388-PIR8.

AUSTIN, TX (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - James L. Fariss Jr., chairman of the board of Healthcare International Inc. (ASE/PSE:HII), Wednesday announced that he will step down as chief executive officer of the company, effective immediately.

Fariss said that, because of health problems, he could no longer fulfill the physical and time demands of the office of chief executive. He will, however, continue to serve as chairman of the company's board of directors.

Fariss, as part of the management of the Brown Schools, the predecessor of Healthcare International, was responsible for the formation in 1979 of Healthcare as a subsidiary of the Brown Schools. In 1982, he led the management group that acquired the Brown Schools and Healthcare, and he has served as chairman and chief executive officer of the company since that time.

Healthcare's board named Jean P. Smith, president of the company, to succeed Fariss as chief executive officer. Smith has served as president since July 1989 and was, previous to that, senior vice president of Healthcare's Psychiatric Group. She joined the company in 1970.

Commenting on the change, Fariss said: ''Although I regret that I can no longer continue to serve as chief executive officer of the company, I am very pleased to be able to pass my duties and responsibilities as chief executive to Jean Smith. Jean is dedicated to the principles and philosophies of Healthcare International and has been an integral part of the company's growth and development over the past 20 years.

In an unrelated matter, Healthcare International announced that it was precluded by the provisions of the agreement governing its 14-3/8 percent subordinated debentures, due Dec. 15, 1995, from making the semi-annual interest payment due June 15, 1990.

Healthcare International provides a wide range of health care products and services to both local and national markets through 23 facilities in 6 states. The company's Class A common stock is listed for trading on the American and Pacific Stock Exchanges under the symbol HII.

EMERYVILLE, CA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - The value of using the new drugs of biotechnolgoy in combination with each other was underscored this week by researchers from EuroCetus, the European subsidiary of Cetus Corp. (NASDAQ:CTUS) at the meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO) in Washington.

In a poster session held Tuesday, Garrett Stoter, M.D., of the Rotterdam Cancer Institute, presented data from a collaborative study with EuroCetus that support the use of Cetus' investigational anticancer drug Proleukin interleukin-2 in combination with alpha interferon in the treatment of advanced kidney cancer.

In the study, 33 percent of the patients experienced complete responses and 25 percent of the remaining patients had stable disease while still undergoing therapy. These preliminary results suggest a high response rate for Proleukin and alpha interferon when adminstered together.

Although Proleukin was administered intravenously in the study discussed above, similar results were achieved in another study in which Proleukin was administered subcutaneously on an outpatient basis.

Subcutaneous, or under the skin, administration markedly reduces the toxicity of treatment and allows patients to give themselves injections at home, eliminating the burden of a hospital stay.

One set of patients administered Proleukin alone and a second set of patients administered Proleukin along with alpha interferon. A greater than 50 percent regression of metastatic (spreading) cancer was observed in 37 percent of patients who received the combination therapy.

These results suggest that the combination approach may be more effective than either drug alone and that subcutaneous self-administration may be a viable alternative to intravenous, in-hospital administration.

Last month Cetus and Roche announced an agreement to jointly develop and market interleukin-2 and alpha interferon in all member countries of the European Community and Switzerland, excluding Denmark and Greece.

Cetus Corp. is a leading biotechnology company primarily engaged in the development, manufacturing and marketing of pharmaceutical products to treat cancers and serious infectious diseases.

The company also is developing commercial applications of its GeneAmp polymerase chain reaction (PCR) technology. Founded in 1971, Cetus is based in Emeryville, and also operates EuroCetus in Amsterdam, Netherlands.

SYLMAR, CA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - The world's smallest single-chamber, sensor-controlled cardiac pacing device, the Sensolog III pacemaker, has received approval from the Food and Drug Administration for marketing by Pacesetter Systems Inc. of Sylmar.

The device's minimal size and weight -- it weighs less than an ounce (26 grams) and is only 6.5 mm thin -- is designed for maximum patient comfort with a size-to-longevity ratio comparable with non-rate-modulated pacemakers.

The Sensolog III pacemaker is the company's second-generation, single-chamber, rate-modulated device. It can sense the body's need for increased heart rate via a sensor that acts as an accelerometer in responding to body movement or activity.

The pacemaker is the first to feature the exclusive Autoset function, which allows physicians to safely and automatically set individualized sensor parameters and pacing rates in response to patient activity in just 60 seconds. It can pace the heart up to 170 beats per minute depending on the patient's activity.

In addition, the advanced 3 micron chip technology of the pacemaker delivers more programmable options in a smaller package. Its programming flexibility offers a wide range of programmable administrative, diagnostic and therapeutic parameters and features, including six different pacing modes and five each programmable reaction and recovery times.

It also features 25 minimum rates (30 to 150 beats per minute) and 10 maximum rates (80 to 170 beats per minute).

The Sensolog III pacemaker's advanced telemetric capability permits physicians to evaluate the effects of various programming levels and device status in each patient.

Pacesetter's unique histogram capability provides an overview of sensor-indicated rates experienced by the patient and allows physicians to assess how patients will respond to their individual physiology, providing flexibility and specificity in patient management.

Pacesetter Systems Inc. is the U.S. division of Siemens Worldwide Pacing Operations, which also includes Siemens-Elema of Solna, Sweden. Siemens Worldwide Pacing Operations is one of the two largest manufacturers of implantable cardiac devices in the world.

ALAMEDA, CA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Triton Biosciences Inc. Wednesday announced it has submitted a New Drug Submission (NDS) to the Canadian Health Protection Branch (HPB) for the approval of Fludara I.V. (fludarabine phosphate) for treatment of patients afflicted with chronic lymphocytic leukemia (CLL) and who are refractory to other therapies.

CLL is the most common form of adult leukemia. It is found primarily in the elderly. An estimated 5,400 patients suffer from refractory CLL in Canada at any time. There is no known cure for this often fatal cancer that affects white blood cells.

On Nov. 24, 1989, Triton submitted a New Drug Application (NDA) to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for Fludara I.V. for treatment of patients with refractory CLL.

Triton's Fludara I.V. NDA has been assigned a 1-A review status by the FDA. The FDA's 1-A priority review classification is the highest the agency can assign to a non-AIDS compound. About 49,000 patients are estimated to suffer from CLL in the United States at any time.

Fludara I.V. is available to Canadian physicians for patients with refractory CLL from the U.S. National Cancer Institute (NCI). Triton is supplying Fludara I.V. at no cost to the NCI.

Fludara I.V. was granted a Group C status by the FDA in November 1989. The Group C status allows physicians to use a cancer agent according to a specific protocol before it is commercially available.

Interested physicians worldwide may obtain Fludara I.V. for their refractory and relapsed CLL patients by registering them through NCI's Cancer Therapy Evaluation Program at 301/496-5725.

Located in Alameda, Triton focuses on the development and commercialization of pharmaceuticals and diagnostics for cancer, viral diseases and other serious illnesses. The company holds the exclusive rights to develop and market Fludara I.V.

Triton is the wholly owned health care subsidiary of Houston-based Shell Oil Company.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - The Dun & Bradstreet Corporation announced Wednesday that it is seeking buyers for its Donnelley Marketing division.

Donnelley Marketing Information Services, a unit of Donnelley Marketing, is not included in the sale. Donnelley Marketing is the leading direct-mail distributor of cents-off coupons through its ''Carol Wright Co-op'' mailing program, and is a major provider of consumer mailing lists and lettershop services through its Donnelley Direct unit. Carol Wright Sales, a unit of Donnelley Marketing that markets popularly priced consumer merchandise via direct mail, is included in the sale.

Donnelley Marketing Information Services (DMIS), which D&B plans to retain is a leader in applied demographics, providing analytical products that help customers define and execute their marketing strategies. In addition D&B said that it expects to have continued access to the Donnelley Marketing consumer database after the sale is completed, through lease-back provisions with the new owner.

Dun & Bradstreet said the divestiture results from its previously stated strategy of sharpening the company's focus on key markets for D&B's information services.

Dun & Bradstreet's largest consumer-marketing information businesses are Nielsen Marketing Research and Nielsen Media Research. DMIS will continue to provide demographic information and management capabilities to these businesses, as well as to DMIS customers.

The absence of operating income from Donnelley Marketing is expected to be offset by investing and redeploying the cash proceeds from the sales. Actions including restructuring to produce improvements in cost positions and to discontinue product lines will be actively considered. Dun & Bradstreet continues to expect that 1990 earnings per share will be in the range of $2.80.

Donnelley Marketing had revenue of approximately $225 million in 1989, excluding revenue from DMIS.

In recent months, Dun & Bradstreet has announced plans to sell Datastream International, Interactive Data, Neodata Services, Petroleum Information and Zytron.

The Dun & Bradstreet Corporation is the world's largest marketer of business information and related services, with worldwide operating revenue of $4.3 billion in 1989.

REDMOND, WA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Interpoint Corp. (NASDAQ:INTP) Wednesday announced earnings for the second quarter ended April 30 were $376,000, or 16 cents per share, up 81 percent from the same quarter last year on a 3 percent sales increase to $7 million.

The company noted that gross profit was almost equal, in absolute and percentage terms, to second quarter last year but that reductions in overhead expenses resulted in net profits being up significantly.

Interpoint Chief Executive Peter van Oppen said, ''We are gratified to see dramatic improvement in our profitability as the benefits of consolidating former MICRA Corp. operations into Interpoint become apparent.'' Interpoint acquired MICRA Corp. through a pooling-of- interests transaction in July 1989. Approximately $533,000 in one time charges associated with the integration of the two businesses were recorded during the first quarter ended Jan. 31, 1990.

Year-to-date earnings total $20,000, or 1 cent per share, on a 2 percent sales gain to $13.2 million. Six-month earnings, which include the integration charge of $533,000 before tax, are down from $300,000, or 13 cents per share, in the first six months of last year. Last year's six-month earnings included a $170,000 one-time benefit from the cumulative effect of a change in accounting principle.

''The company continues to expect record revenue and earnings for the year despite the one-time charge in our first quarter,'' according to van Oppen.

Total backlog as of May 1 was at an all-time quarterly high of $16.9 million.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Leonard J. Cass, president of Hospital Staffing Services Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:HSSI), Wednesday announced that the company expects to report net income of approximately $300,000, or seven cents per share, for the second quarter ending May 31.

Commenting further, Cass said, ''Our second quarter results will be impacted by several factors, the most important of which relates to our recent nurse bonus travel programs to Hawaii and the United Kingdom. These travel programs, which are designed to promote nurse retention within our contract traveling nurse program, also produced a short-term negative effect.

''To wit, nurses who participated in these travel programs were not available for assignment during considerable periods of time within the second quarter. However, as a precondition for their participation, these same nurses agreed to accept assignments, totaling 1000 hours per nurse, during the third quarter, which is traditionally our slowest period.

''As such, this travel program was also instituted in an effort to reduce the effects of seasonality on our business.

''Further, this short-term loss of revenues was compounded by start-up expenses incurred as a result of the company's recent expansion into the United Kingdom, coupled with the expenditures associated with the nurse bonus travel programs.

''Most importantly, however, our business remains strong, as evidenced by the fact that we presently have more nurses on assignment than we did last year at this time. As such, we expect an improvement in our results during the second half of the fiscal year.

''We also expect that our newly acquired home nursing division will begin to make a positive contribution to our results during the course of the fourth quarter,'' Cass concluded.

CHARLOTTE, NC (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - The Cato Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:CACOA) Wednesday reported a profit of $1,088,000, or 7 cents per share, for its first quarter of fiscal year 1990, compared to a profit of $1,030,000 (7 cents per share) in the prior year.

First quarter 1990 included a store closing charge of $673,000 related to closure of 11 $6 & $8 Fashions stores which will occur in second quarter 1990 and a charge of $432,000 for severance payments to officers no longer active with the company.

First quarter 1989 results included a charge of $1,161,000 related to relocation of the company's New York buying office to Charlotte, a move which was completed in September 1989.

For the three months ended May 5, 1990, total revenues were $59,229,000, compared with $64,814,000 in the prior year. Cato Division comparable store sales declined 7.5 percent over the prior year's first quarter. Finance charge income declined by $1,049,000, primarily due to conversions of installment credit to revolving credit, related interest grace periods, customers not converted to the new program, and lower customer accounts receivable balances.

Wayland H. Cato Jr., chairman, remarked: ''First quarter sales were unfavorably affected by a late Easter, slow consumer spending for apparel, a highly unsatisfactory sportswear offering, and a significant reduction from the company's historical level of promotional activity.

The company's financial relations, cash flow and balance sheet remain strong. During 1990 poor performing stores will continue to be reviewed against strict sales and profitability benchmarks and appropriate actions taken. The company is continuing to evaluate additional opportunities to further reduce operating costs.

The Cato Corp. is a women's apparel speciality retailer, currently operating 557 stores in 25 states under the names ''Cato/Cato Plus'' and ''$6 & $8 Fashions.''

Net income before taxes for the nine months ended April 30, 1990, was $774,000, or 29 cents per share of common stock, compared to $189,000, or 7 cents per share, for the same period in 1989. Massey noted that the current nine month earnings marked a significant increase as a result of a third quarter fiscal 1990 accounting treatment of an employee separation agreement entered into in fiscal 1989.

Revenues for the nine months ended April 30, 1990, were $1,731,000 compared to $1,850,000 a year ago.

Massey reported pretax earnings of $337,000, or 13 cents per share, on revenues of $509,000 for the third quarter ended April 30, 1990. This compares to the net loss reported for the quarter ended April 30, 1989, of $212,000, or 8 cents per share, on revenues of $652,000.

FAHC, recently named by Inc. magazine as one of the nation's 100 fastest growing small public companies, continues to report a strong cash flow position with no long-term debt and total assets of $2.4 million.

HOUSTON (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Synercom Technology Inc. (NASDAQ:SYNR) Wednesday reported a net loss of $655,000, or 11 cents per share, on revenues of $2,821,000 for the company's second quarter ended April 30.

In the second quarter of the prior year, the company reported net income of $469,000, or 7 cents per share, on revenues of $4,585,000. Results for the six months ended April 30, 1990, reflect a net loss of $1,141,000 or 19 cents per share on revenues of $5,779,000.

The comparable period in fiscal 1989 reflected net income of $1,157,000, or 18 cents per share, on revenues of $8,834,000. Included in net income for the quarter and six months ended April 30, 1989, is an extraordinary credit from tax loss carryforwards which had the effect of increasing net income by $154,000 and $381,000, respectively.

Total revenues for the quarter and six months ending April 30, 1990, decreased 38.5 percent and 34.6 percent respectively, as compared to the quarter and six months ended April 30, 1989.

Synercom directs its marketing efforts toward major electric, gas and water utilities, governmental entities and telecommunications companies, such as Pacific Bell, and through a contract with Digital Equipment, U.K., British Gas.

The adverse effect upon the company's revenues and profitability in the second quarter and first half of fiscal 1990 compared to the same periods of the prior year is primarily due to a reduction in aggregate revenues resulting from unpredictable delays in the build-out of the systems for Digital Equipment, U.K., and Pacific Bell.

Revenues under agreements entered into with each of Digital Equipment, U.K., and Pacific Bell were approximately $1,141,000 and $286,000, respectively, for the first half of fiscal 1990 compared to $2,323,000 and $1,943,000, respectively, for the same period in fiscal 1989.

Under these agreements there are no obligations to order any minimal level of software and the amount and timing of orders are subject to customer discretion. The company does not expect to license substantial amounts of additional software products to Pacific Bell until it has successfully completed the conversion of outside plant records to a digital data base in the first implementation district, which is not expected to occur in fiscal 1990.

PASADENA, CA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - David Banks, chairman and chief executive officer of Beverly Enterprises Inc. (NYSE:BEV), praised the federal Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) for issuing Wednesday to the public, government survey findings on care and conditions in the nation's 16,000 nursing homes.

''Few decisions can be more difficult or emotional than placing someone you love in a nursing home,'' Banks said. ''For those who must decide where to place a family member in need of long-term care, the HCFA report pulls back the veil of complexity that often surrounds evaluations of nursing homes.''

This is the second time HCFA has published nursing home survey results (the first HCFA report on nursing homes came out in November 1988). The report highlights what should be taken into consideration in evaluating a nursing home.

Banks continued: ''In making more clear to the average person the way the long-term care system operates, the HCFA report can do much to help a family thinking about putting a relative in a nursing home. As health care providers, it is our responsibility to help ensure that people use the report correctly in reaching some very important decisions on their families' care.''

''Obviously, the most important step in selecting a nursing home is to visit the facility,'' Banks said. ''Ask questions, walk around, talk to residents and their families, and see the care being given. Don't make any decisions until you're satisfied with what you've found.''

Beverly's mission is to be the provider of choice in the communities where it operates by delivering high-quality health care services that meet the unique needs of each of those communities.

ATLANTA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T (NYSE:T) Wednesday announced a program that enables Georgia customers to purchase a cordless telephone and an answering machine at discounts based on the customers' monthly AT&T long distance charges.

Called ''AT&T Quality Connections,'' the program allows customers to pay for the products in 12 monthly installments on their long distance bills with no finance charge.

New and current subscribers to the Reach Out America optional calling plan may earn discounts of up to 50 percent.

The discounts run up to 25 percent for callers who are not Reach Out America subscribers.

''This plan makes AT&T an even better value for our customers,'' according to Jim Shannon, manager of the AT&T Quality Connections Program. ''The beauty of this plan is that it gives consumers one-stop shopping convenience, an installment plan and price savings,'' Shannon said.

The two products offered through the Quality Connections Program are the AT&T 5320 Cordless Phone, priced at $199.92 and the AT&T 1521 Answering System, priced at $159.96.

Monthly payments of the answering system, for example, which are $13.33 (plus shipping and handling), will be reduced by 10 percent of each month's AT&T long distance charges, with a maximum discount of 25 percent, or $3.33 per month. The maximum discount is 50 percent for customers who subscribe to Reach Out America, a plan that offers opportunities to save on AT&T Long Distance.

All AT&T Long Distance customers who are billed by Southern Bell are eligible for the Quality Connections Program.

To participate, customers can call 800/242-1003 between 9 a.m. and 9:30 p.m. (Eastern time) and weekends, between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m., or write to: AT&T Quality Connections Program, P.O. Box 189, Totowa, NJ 07511-9978.

AT&T will deliver the product directly to the customers' homes at a charge of $7.90 per product, where it can be trialed for free for 30 days.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Sierra Ventures, a $100 million venture capital firm located in Menlo Park, Calif. announced Wednesday that it had established the first Soviet-American biotech start-up by signing a set of agreements with the Institute of Protein Research, a leading Soviet biotechnology research institute which is part of the USSR Academy of Sciences, and with RiboGene Inc., a California-based biotech company previously known as TransGene Inc.

The Institute of Protein Research licenced to RiboGene new technology for producing proteins in return for a 15 percent ownership position in RiboGene and other considerations.

The parties also formed a joint firm in which RiboGene's American shareholders have a 51 percent stake and the Soviets have a 49 percent stake, to license jointly owned technology for use by third parties. RiboGene and the Institute of Protein Research will collaborate in developing and commercializing this new technology.

"This deal pioneers a new approach by which U.S. venture capital firms can commercialize and invest in promising new Soviet technologies," said Vincent H. Tobkin, general partner of Sierra Ventures. "Sierra, which has extensive experience with new approaches to starting companies, will invest up to $2 million in RiboGene and the joint firm.

"To the best of our knowledge, this is the first ever venture capital transaction with the Soviets in which U.S. venture capitalists are backing combined Soviet - U.S. technology to build a Western company," said John Basek, president of Clintondale Group and a director of RiboGene, who was the principal negotiator between the U.S. and Soviet parties.

RiboGene will commercialize new technology to produce proteins - including hormones, enzymes and many other products of biotechnology companies - without using living cells. Currently, genetic engineers produce proteins by inserting genes into bacterial or mammalian cells, which serve as living factories.

"It is really difficult to find the one protein you want out of hundreds or thousands of other proteins in cells," said K-P Wong, a RiboGene founder, who is the science dean and a professor of chemistry at California State University. "Our technology could become an alternative for genetic engineering."

RiboGene intends to develop an automatized protein synthesizer which will quickly translate genes into virtually pure protein products. Later, the joint firm plans to license this technology to third parties for use in manufacturing proteins.

ATLANTA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - ''Because we have persevered in our work, the energy future of this growing region is now secure for years to come.

''And I say this at the very time when other regions of the country face the prospect of serious shortages in their supply of electric energy,'' Southern Company President Edward L. Addison said Wednesday.

Addressing the company's 44th annual meeting of stockholders, Addison noted, ''We have been engaged in one of the most ambitious construction programs in the history of this industry. In the past five years alone, we've brought 11 new generating units into service. As a result, we're ready to face the '90s - with a modern energy supply network that we built at 1980s prices.''

The Southern Company (NYSE:SO) is the parent firm of five electric utilities: Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power, Mississippi Power, and Savannah Electric. The Southern Company's common stock is one of the 20 most widely held corporate stocks in America. This year's annual meeting of stockholders was held in Panama City Beach, Fla.

The Southern Company's earnings for the 12 months ending April 30, 1990, totaled $758 million or $2.40 per share - down $143 million or 47 cents per share from the comparable period last year. Addison attributed the decline to a less than satisfactory rate decision in Georgia, higher costs for producing and delivering electricity, and mild winter temperatures that slowed the growth of energy sales.

''Our earnings performance has not been as strong as we'd like,'' he said, ''but we remain financially sound. And, as stockholders, you've continued to benefit from your investment in The Southern Company. During the past five calendar years, our total return to stockholders - including price appreciation and dividends - has averaged 18 percent annually.''

Discussing the outlook for the future, Addison noted that several financial and regulatory issues are yet to be clarified - particularly with regard to the company's investment in the Vogtle nuclear plant near Augusta, Ga.

BOCA RATON, FL (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Bio-Monitor Inc. has entered into a definitive agreement to proceed with its acquisition and development of additional franchise locations of Medical Depot Superstores.

In a news release Wednesday, Bio-Monitor announced its purchase of eight Superstore locations, payment of deposits on 31 other Medical Depot Superstore locations, and first right of refusal for an additional 47 additional franchise locations.

The company's Superstore franchise locations were purchased from Medical Depot at the rate of $50,000 per location.

The agreement requires payment by Bio-Monitor of a total of $602,000 payable: 1) $86,000 in cash; 2) $66,000 in an interest bearing note due on or before Dec. 30; and 3) 350,000 restricted shares of Bio-Monitor's authorized by previously unissued Common Stock, valued for purposes of the transaction at $1.25 per share.

The cash component of the purchase price was achieved through Medical Depot's credit of earlier deposits paid by Bio-Monitor.

Bio-Monitor recently announced its prior acquisition of a controlling interest in its first operating Medical Depot Superstore located in Margate, Fla.

The company recognizes that meaningful development and operation of its

The Medical Depot Superstore is a retail and wholesale department store dealing in durable medical equipment and related medical supplies and services.

Bio-Monitor has decided to enter the business of operating Medical Depot Superstores for the combined purpose of beginning revenue producing activities and to augment its efforts with its ''CT System,'' a diagnostic system designed to identify patients with early stage breast cancer or persons with a high risk of developing breast cancer.

The company also announced that Ralph Leopold has been elected as the new president of the company and that the former president James Whidden will remain with the company as the chairman of the board and a director. NILES, IL (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Midwesco Filter Resources Inc. Wednesday announced higher sales and reduced earnings for the first quarter ended April 30.

Net sales grew five percent to $5,741,000 from $5,483,000 in the prior year's comparable quarter. The gross profit remained virtually unchanged at $1,334,000 compared to $1,347,000 in the previous year's three months.

Income from operations declined 11 percent to $550,000 from $619,000 in the year ago comparison.

Chairman David Unger noted that new order bookings were up more than sales including very strong bookings for its newly-emphasized parts business. He said the company believes order strength should continue through the balance of the year and that the company could benefit from a current pick up in the higher margin metals portion of its business.

Because MFRI operated as a division of Midwesco Inc. until its incorporation prior to its initial public offering in December 1989, the company is reporting pretax earnings, net income and net income per share on two bases, pro-forma and historical. The pro-forma results reflect the issuance of 860,000 shares of common stock in the company's initial public offering and also the application of a portion of the proceeds to repay debt, as though these events had taken place at the beginning of the periods covered.

The historical results reflect average shares outstanding, debt in existence before the offering but now retired, and net operating loss carryforwards no longer available.

On the pro-forma basis, net income decreased six percent to $361,000, or 13 cents a share, from $384,000, or 14 cents a share, in the prior year's quarter, based upon 2,810,000 shares outstanding in both periods.

On the historical basis, net income declined 28 percent to $361,000, or 13 cents a share, compared to $502,000, or 26 cents a share, in the 1989 quarter.

There were only 1,950,000 shares outstanding in the year-ago period compared to the 2,810,000 shares in the recent quarter thereby accounting for the 50 percent reduction on the quarter-to-quarter comparison.

With locations in Niles, and Winchester, Va., MFRI is a vertically integrated manufacturer and marketer of filter bags, including its proprietary Seamless Tube filter bag, as well as related parts, accessories and services.

The company's products and services are used primarily by operators of utility and industrial coal-fired boilers, incinerators and cogeneration plants and by producers of metals, cement, chemicals and other industrial products.

PHOENIX (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - SmokEnders, the world's largest stop smoking program, announced Wednesday that its new president and chief executive officer, James A. De Sanctis, has relocated the company's world headquarters to Phoenix from Newport Beach, Calif.

De Sanctis, 47, led an investor group in the purchase of SmokEnders in March from Comprehensive Care, a publicly owned health care conglomerate. As president and CEO he heads an organization that has more than 600,000 graduates worldwide and a corporate sponsor list that reads like the Who's Who in business, including General Motors, Federal Express, the Chicago Cubs and Laura Ashley.

De Sanctis indicated that SmokEnders expects strong employment growth in its Phoenix headquarters in line with substantial domestic and international expansion plans. The initial core headquarters group will number approximately 20, including seminar support personnel.

The new SmokEnders CEO characterized the move of his company and his family to Phoenix as ''a dream come true.'' De Sanctis noted that ''I fell in love with the city when I came here in the early 1980's to evaluate Mary Moppet's daycare centers and have wanted to live and work here ever since.''

Prior to becoming CEO of SmokEnders, he was Chief Operating Officer of Connecticut-based Senior Service Corp., a NASDAQ specialty health care company. MINNEAPOLIS (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Dayton Hudson Corp. expects to deliver consistent earnings growth over the long term, Kenneth A. Macke, chairman and chief executive officer, told shareholders at the annual meeting Wednesday.

''We will continue to pursue our earnings goals aggressively,'' said Macke. ''Dayton Hudson will be one of this country's major retail companies for many years to come. Our balance sheet is solid and our organization is strong.''

''Our companies are structured to achieve sustained growth from improved productivity at existing stores, from the maturity of stores recently opened and from investment in new stores, distribution centers and systems '' continued Macke.

Macke noted that he expects all three operating companies -- Target, Mervyn's and the Dayton Hudson Department Store Company -- to contribute to the corporation's consistent growth. ''The prescription for our future can be summarized in four basic strategies: anticipating customers' changing needs, managing for the long term, delivering consistent performance and being a responsible corporate citizen.''

Stephen E. Watson, president of Dayton Hudson, said, ''Target hit on all cylinders in 1989 with stronger sales, better expense control and improved gross margin. As the leading upscale discounter in the nation, Target is a growth enterprise and knows how to make the best of its opportunities.''

''Mervyn's our moderate-priced department store company, is continuing to refine the strategies it began implementing with such great success three years ago,'' said Watson. ''Customers are definitely responding to Mervyn's efforts and we believe Mervyn's is a long-term growth vehicle.''

''Our department store division continues to make superior customer service a top priority. Customer service improvements and superb fashion merchandising are giving these stores a competitive edge,'' said Watson. ''The Marshall Field acquisition will add another nationally recognized, high-quality name to our existing franchises. Marshall Field's has the same commitment to fashion leadership, broad assortments of quality merchandise and superior customer service.''

As previously reported, first-quarter fully diluted earnings per share before accounting changes were up 37 percent to 70 cents per share. Net earnings before accounting changes were up 45 percent to $58 million. Total revenues increased 13 percent and comparable-store revenues increased 7 percent during the first quarter ended May 5, 1990.

MILIPITAS, CA (MAY 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Tengen Inc., the wholly-owned subsidiary of Atari Games Corp., Wednesday announced that revenues for its 1989 fiscal year total more than $41 million.

The $41 million figure represents a gain of more than 5 percent over last year's total of $39 million. Tengen's fiscal year ends March 31.

Tengen chief operating officer, Dan Van Elderen, attributes the company's growth to committed retailers and a quality product line.

''We are very proud of the company's performance in light of the continued pressure being applied by Nintendo against our retailers,'' said Van Elderen.

Tengen products are distributed through more than 4,000 retail outlets nationwide, including some of the industry's leading retail chains.

Tengen is the first company to market independently manufactured Nintendo-compatible software and currently has 14 titles available on the Nintendo Entertainment System (NES). Virtually all Tengen products are NES-compatible versions of hit arcade titles such as ''Gauntlet,'' ''Shinobi,'' ''Afterburner,'' and ''Pac-Man.''

According to Ted Hoff, Tengen senior vice president, sales and marketing, Tengen plans to capitalize on its independence by releasing top titles on all available video game formats and personal computer hardware systems. Tengen, unlike the 50-plus companies which license their products to Nintendo, is unhampered by Nintendo's restrictive licensing agreements, and is the only major software publisher that is able to bring its hit arcade titles to all home video game and personal computer formats.

''Tengen's goal is to become the leading entertainment software publisher in the industry,'' said Hoff.

While Tengen will continue to expand its NES-compatible product line, it will also expand the number of titles available for the more technically advanced 16-bit systems such as Sega Genesis and NEC TurboGrafx.

New Tengen titles shipping this spring and summer include ''R.B.I. Baseball 2,'' ''Ms. Pac-Man,'' ''Fantasy Zone,'' and ''Klax,'' the challenging puzzle game, currently a major arcade hit.

Tengen is the wholly-owned subsidiary of Atari Games Corp. and is headquartered at 1623 Buckeye Drive, P.O. Box 360782, Milipitas, Calif., 95035-0782, 408/473-9400. Atari Games is a privately held company, is not affiliated with Atari Corp. and should be referred to as Atari Games.

GUERNSEY, CHANNEL ISLANDS (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Insituform Group

Limited (''IGL'') (NASDAQ National Market System: IGLSF (shares) and IGLWF (warrants)), Wednesday announced that it has acquired most of the worldwide distribution rights to Rolldown, a patented, trenchless pipeline rehabilitation technology for gas conduits and watermains from Subterra, Ltd., a British company.

Under the terms of the agreement, IGL has obtained the right to exploit the Rolldown process throughout the world with the exception, at present, of The Federal Republic of Germany, Switzerland, Austria, the United Kingdom and the United States. IGL has a six month option to add the U.S. to its Rolldown distribution territory.

In consideration for these worldwide distribution rights, including the exercise of the U.S. option, IGL has agreed to pay Subterra 1.4 million (approx. $2.35 million) scheduled over a six year period to May 1996.

In the last three years, Rolldown has successfully rehabilitated about 200 km of gas and potable water pipe with diameters ranging from 3 to 18 inches. In the Rolldown process, a polyethylene (''PE'') pipe is passed through pairs of rollers, which reduces the diameter by increasing the wall thickness rather than increasing the length, Therefore not putting the pipe under tension stress.

The rolled down pipe is then pulled through the existing pre-cleaned pipe. Additional lengths are butt fusion welded as necessary and welding beads are cleanly cut off internally and externally. The Rolldown pipe retains its smaller diameter until pressure triggers the molecular memory and the pipe returns to size. As the original diameter is chosen slightly larger than the existing pipe, a close fit is obtained as the pipe returns to normal. Rolldown installation is economical and over 1.3 km has been installed in a single insertion and up to 3 km is possible. Rolldown is similar to continuous sliplining in installation but a major feature and advantage it offers is the ability of the rolled down pipe to hold its reduced form for extended periods.

According to IGL's Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer, Michael A. Chapman, ''Rolldown is a natural extension of our product portfolio of trenchless pipeline reconstruction and rehabilitation technologies which now includes manhole and micro-tunnelling capabilities through our Permaform and Neptune subsidiaries. Importantly, polyethylene is widely accepted and used for gas and potable water pipelines, and thus with Rolldown, we are in a better position than ever to compete effectively in those very large markets. Our plan is to penetrate those markets through existing distribution channels as well as through additional licensing and joint venture relationships.''

Insituform Group Limited, through its wholly-owned subsidiaries, owns the worldwide rights to a system of pipeline and conduit rehabilitation known as the InsituformR Process, of which more than 3,700 km have been installed in over 40 countries. By eliminating the need for disruptive excavation, the Insituform Process provides a cost-effective solution to the problem of deteriorating pipe systems. A flexible non-woven fiber tube (InsitutubeR), impregnated with a liquid resin, is inverted by water pressure through the damaged pipe and is forced firmly against the inside of the pipe. The resin is then cured, either by hot water or high frequency light, creating a durable new structural pipe within the old.

BURLINGTON, MA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Xylogics Inc. (NASDAQ:XLGX) Wednesday announced that revenues for its second quarter ended April 28, 1990, were $8,471,000 compared to $8,379,000 in the same quarter of 1989.

Net income was $260,000 or 10 cents per share as compared to $510,000 or 19 cents per share in the second quarter of 1989.

Bruce J. Bergman, chairman and chief executive officer, noted that revenues increased slightly over the year ago levels on the strength of a more than threefold increase in shipments of communications products which includes the Annex II terminal server product line and communications controllers.

He further noted that the continuing decline in shipments of data storage controllers to Sun Microsystems Inc., which until the most recent quarter had been the company's largest customer, was offset by growth in the rest of Xylogics' customer base. Bergman attributed the earnings decrease to the combined effects of a decline in overall gross margin rate due to changes in product mix and higher expense levels.

Headquartered in Burlington, Mass., Xylogics Inc. is a leading supplier of data storage controllers, communications controllers, and terminal servers. Xylogics' products are sold to OEMs, systems integrators, resellers, and distributors worldwide for computer systems based on leading industry standard architectures.

The Company stated that, as anticipated, revenues remained level during the second quarter of fiscal 1990, as compared to the corresponding period of 1989. Net income, however, increased primarily due to lower charges for the non-cash expenses of depletion and amortization.

Revenues and income for the six months ended March 31, 1990, were up markedly as compared to the similar period of 1989, primarily as a result of the completion of the Company's 1989 Pipeline Income Program in the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

The Company further stated that its interest in 26 wells, now being completed on behalf of its 1989 Development Drilling Program, should favorably impact the results of the remaining quarters of fiscal 1990.

Furthermore, the Company stated that on May 17, 1990, it acquired certain assets of Langasco Energy Corp. and several of its affiliated companies (''Langasco'') for $2.1 million in cash. Those assets, located in Columbiana County, Ohio, include interests in and operations of approximately 190 oil and gas wells, 50 miles of gas gathering pipeline system, and other oil and gas equipment. Resource America Inc. now operates and/or owns interests in approximately 1,100 oil and gas wells, and owns and/or operates 300 miles of gas gathering pipeline.

Upon the acquisition of these assets, the Company termianted its February 1990 option to purchase the balance of Langasco's oil and gas assets.

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Sharper Image Corp. Wednesday reported its results for the first quarter ended April 30.

For the first quarter, The Sharper Image had total revenues of $34.7 million, a decrease of 1.1 percent from the revenues of $35.1 million in the first quarter last year. In the first quarter of 1990, the company reported a loss of $1.4 milion, or 17 cents per share, compared to a loss of $1.2 million, or 14 cents per share, in the same period of 1989.

''Our results for the first quarter reflect the slightly softer sales volume in what continues to be a sluggish national retailing environment '' said Richard Thalheimer, president and chief executive officer of the company.

''At the same time, our operating costs were somewhat higher this quarter, with the planned increased advertising expenses due to the larger circulation of our catalogs, and the additional operating costs of four new stores, compared to the first quarter of 1989.''

Thalheimer added that the revenues from a marketing incentive program with the Chevrolet truck division of General Motors partially offset the lower sales and higher operating expenses.

During the first quarter of 1990, The Sharper Image opened two additional stores, in West Hartford, Conn., and Portland, Ore., both new markets for The Sharper Image.

The company's Japanese licensee opened its sixth store. In addition, the company signed a licensing agreement with its Argentine licensee, ATON S.A., which opened its first store in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

The Sharper Image is a specialty retailer of a unique selection of innovative and high quality products that are marketed through its colorful, monthly catalogs and expanding retail network which now totals 68 stores nationwide, and eight internationally through its foreign licensees.

The company offers a wide variety of products, including consumer electronics, communications, health and fitness, recreational and novelty items. Its common stock is traded on the NASDAQ under the symbol SHRP.

AKRON, OH (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - American Business Computers Corp. (NASDAQ: ABCC) has received an official Notice of Allowance for a patent on an automatic cup fill device.

This device provides an accurate low-cost method for sensing the liquid level in a cup as it is being filled. In soft drink dispensing, this is extremely valuable because it allows a cup to be filled to an exact level regardless of the amount of ice that is used. In vending, it would shut the system off if a cup wasn't available, since it can also ''see'' the cup along with the ice and liquid level.

Joe Shannon, Chief Executive Officer, stated: ''This patent is another clear example of ABC's leadership position in soft drink dispensing technology and this technology is market-ready and was enthusiastically received during its debut this week at the NRA Restaurant, Hotel-Motel Show in Chicago.''

SAULT SAINT MARIE, MI (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Newberry Bancorp Inc. (NASDAQ:NEWBA) ("the company") announced its unaudited results from operations for the three months ended March 31.

	Newberry Bancorp Three Months Ended March 31
	1990	1989
Net interest income	$313,199	$205,747
Provision for loan losses	22,500	22,500
Total other income	41,485	27,370
Total other expense	327,267	218,919
Income before income tax	4,917	14,198
Income tax	-318	0
Net income	5,235	14,198

Avg. shares outstanding	11,074,054	10,999,293

The company's ESOP bought $378,431 shares of the company's class A common stock for $.5625 per share on March 23, 1990. Total outstanding shares at March 31, 1990, was 11,672,140.

The company's net interest income rose from the year ago period because of an improved net interest margin and an increase in earning assets and deposits.

Other income advanced as a result of a sharp increase in securities gains. While the provision for losses was unchanged, loan charge-offs were only $188 in the 1990 period vs. $4,797 in the 1989 period. The sharp increase in other expense was mainly due to $62,671 in non-recurring holding company expense related to the merger of Fortune 44 Company and Newberry Bancorp Inc. at the close of business on Dec. 31, 1989.

The company also announced that it has been awarded a significant banking relationship with a large corporation headquartered in the Eastern Upper Peninsula of Michigan. The account is expected to increase the total assets of the company's Newberry State Bank subsidiary by approximately $2-3 million. The account is expected to be phased-in over a three-month period starting June 1990.

The company owns 100 percent of the Newberry State Bank, a Michigan FDIC-insured community bank located in the eastern upper peninsula of Michigan (in the city of Newberry). At March 31, 1990, the company had unaudited consolidated assets of $41,134,917.

ADA, OK (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Pre-Paid Legal Services Inc. (ASE:PPD), an Oklahoma corporation which merchandises, in 34 states, a contract enabling individuals to prepay the cost of certain legal services, Wednesday reported financial results for the three months ended March 31, 1990.

The company reported a net loss of $526,000, or 5 cents per share, for the first three months of 1990 compared to a net loss of $183,000, or 2 cents per share, for the comparable period in 1989. Total revenues for the quarter ended March 31, 1990, were $6.7 million, a decrease of 28 percent from revenues of $9.3 million registered a year earlier.

Harland C. Stonecipher, president and chief executive officer, stated that the loss resulted from a number of factors including declines in new contract writings, decreases in interest income and losses attributable to the company's former print operation.

Stonecipher added he was very pleased with the early results of the company's new referral service product called ''Justice 900,'' which is based on a 1-900 telephone number. Since the program was first announced on April 2, 1990, associations and organizations with memberships of over 500,000 have contracted with Pre-Paid for the revolutionary new approach to the delivery of legal services.

Stonecipher said Justice 900 is revolutionizing the delivery of legal services in America by guaranteeing affordable access to competent lawyers nationwide. It is the culmination of over 18 years experience in the legal expense plan industry, and knowing what the consumer wants in a legal service plan.

Unlike other legal service plans, Justice 900 is based on the ''value-added'' concept which allows the consumer to pay for service only when the service is needed.

ATLANTA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Turner Network Television (TNT) will launch a special Latin American and Caribbean feed in January, marking the first international expansion of an entertainment network by Turner Broadcasting System Inc. (TBS).

The network will be marketed by Turner Program Services through all available distribution outlets in Latin America and the Caribbean, via Pan Am Sat I.

The scrambled feed will be programmed in three eight-hour blocks per day, with each block containing basically the same programming, but reformatted to suit the particular daypart. The new network primarily will be a movie service, presenting films from the Turner Entertainment Co. (TEC) Library of great MGM, RKO and pre-1950 Warner Bros. films, as well as other licensed film packages.

In addition, the service will program theatrical cartoons and documentaries.

The feed will be a separate network, with its own staff based in Atlanta and reporting to TNT Executive Vice President Scott Sassa. Initially, the service will be available with an English-language soundtrack with Spanish subtitles. As technology is perfected, the network will add other soundtracks, with the ultimate goal of offering Spanish and Portuguese versions.

''The success of TNT in the U.S. and the TEC film library in international markets proves that the world loves great movies,'' said Gerry Hogan, president of Turner Entertainment Networks. ''With this new subsidiary, we'll be bringing viewers in Latin America and the Caribbean the same outstanding programming blend U.S. audiences have come to value so much.''

''The Turner Entertainment Co. Library has had tremendous success in Latin American syndication,'' commented Jack Petrik, chairman of Turner Program Services. ''We're very excited to be offering this new entertainment package to cable systems, DBS operators and hotels. The network will operate as a companion service to CNN in our marketing efforts.''

''This is an exciting opportunity to work with our international neighbors '' said Sassa. ''We feel the popularity of movies is universal and view this as the first step toward establishing a worldwide entertainment network.''

NASHVILLE, TN (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - Thomas Nelson Publishers (NASDAQ/NMS:TNEL) Wednesday announced that revenues for the year ended March 31, 1990, increased 21 percent to $59,351,002 from fiscal 1989 revenues of $49,106,495.

Net income for fiscal 1990 was $3,319,883, or 60 cents per share, an increase of 29 percent over fiscal 1989 net income from operations of $2,581,697, or 46 cents per share. A change in accounting principle in fiscal 1989 to adopt the Financial Accounting Standards Board's policy on income taxes added $218,000, or 4 cents per share, to net income last year.

As a result, the net income comparison for the year was $3,319,883, or 60 cents per share, up from $2,799,697, or 50 cents per share.

For the fourth quarter ended March 31, 1990, net revenues increased 33 percent to $14,619,701 from revenues of $11,013,654 in the year-earlier period. Net income for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 was $734,524, or 13 cents per share, up 53 percent over net income of $481,646, or 9 cents per share, earned in the fourth quarter last year.

Commenting on the results, Sam Moore, President of Thomas Nelson Publishers, said: ''Fiscal 1990 was one of the best years in the Company's history. All of our operating divisions contributed to the improved results. Thomas Nelson retained its position as the leading Bible publisher in the world focusing on offering one of the broadest Bible lines in the industry.

''Our Trade Book publishing division produced the largest increase in sales. No single book accounted for the improvement. Instead, we had a number of strong books, including Love is a Choice by the Doctors of the

Minirth-Meir Clinic; Believe in the God Who Believes in You by Dr. Robert H. Schuller; How to Handle Adversity by Dr. Charles Stanley; and Father Does Know Best by Laurin Chapin. In total, the Book Division published about 75 new titles in fiscal 1990.''

Moore also indicated that the company's new Gifts Division had an excellent year, along with the Varsity Co., Thomas Nelson's college student program, which sells Nelson's Bibles and books door-to-door.

Moore added, ''The outlook for fiscal 1991 is excellent. Our highly successful study Bible, The Open Bible, will be updated with a number of new features, and published in three major translations. Among the new books scheduled for introduction in 1991 are: The Shroud and the Controversy by Ken Stevenson and Gary Habermas; Business By The Book by Larry Burkett; and Love Hunger and Love is a Choice by the Doctors of the Minirth-Meir Clinic.''

BLUE BELL, PA (MAY 23) BUSINESS WIRE - SITA, the Airline and Telecommunications and Information Processing organization, has awarded Unisys a multi-million dollar contract for 2200/632 and 1100/92 mainframe systems.

The 2200/632 will be installed in SITA's Atlanta-based Data Processing

Center, where it will run AIRFARE, which is SITA's fare quotation system. The Unisys 1100/92 will also be installed at this Center for SITA's message switching application.

As a result of this order, SITA will now be able to upgrade the processing capacity of a currently installed 1100/92 system to an 1100/94 in its offsite Disaster Recovery Center (DRC), 20 miles from Atlanta. The DRC provides vital, comprehensive disaster recovery backup service to users of large Unisys mainframes.

"SITA offers a unique disaster recovery service to Unisys customers who have large 1100 and 2200 systems," said Del Bloss, president, Unisys Airlines and Travel Systems Division. "Not only do they provide the backup mainframes, but they also have the critical communications network facilities needed to restore online real time transaction processing."

"Unisys mainframes at the DRC give SITA the capacity to provide offsite back up for its own essential services," stated L.W. Olson, Director of SITA Atlanta Marketing, "and offer a cost-effective 'hot' backup service to users of large Unisys mainframe systems in the event of a catastrophe at the client's main data processing site."

SITA, a 20-year Unisys customer, offers its member airlines a variety of critical passenger services, including the USAS-based Gabriel Reservations System; the Unisys Departure Control System for passenger check-in, seat assignment, aircraft loading, and flight data control; the SITA/Air France-developed AIRFARE system for fare quotation, and other passenger-related services. Other SITA information services provided from London UK relate to air cargo and flight operations.

The 23,500-square-foot Disaster Recovery Center will provide over 36 gigabyte of cache and non-cache mass storage. Communications facilities will include full integration into the SITA network, dial-up capabilities, dedicated connections, and T-1 circuits. SITA uses Timeplex's LINK/2 integrated connectivity systems in its international T-1 network. SITA operates a global network in over 180 countries, based largely on Unisys Distributed Communications Processors, to over 380 member companies.

#90143c0051 05/23/1990 ~Comtex
WASHINGTON (MAY 23) COMTEX - A government report released today shows only a handful of U.S. insurers are presently active in the European Community but the growing prospect of a single European market in 1992 indicates there may be increased interest by American firms.

The General Accounting Office issued the study on EC 1992 changes and the impact on U.S. financial institutions at a congressional hearing held here examining the efforts of the domestic insurance industry to enter foreign markets.

The report stated that limited penetration of EC insurance markets by U.S. insurance companies is primarily a result of market forces and a general lack of interest on the part of U.S. companies. It cited a recent survey where 80 percent of U.S. insurance executives have little or no notion of the EC's market potential.

The report said other reasons given for the low U.S. penetration in Europe included the domestic orientation and conservative nature of industry in general, the current saturation of the insurance market, especially in northern Europe, and competing opportunities in the Far East.

While conceding that company philosophy, a willingness to make long-term commitments and the need to show quarterly profits all play a role in why U.S. insurers are not more internationally oriented, a U.S. Commerce Department representative noted there are many foreign barriers to U.S. insurance firms.

"In many cases, U.S. insurers seeking expansion in foreign markets encounter government imposed barriers," said Linda F. Powers.

Powers listed a number of obstacles ranging from a full denial of market access to restrictions on transactions and financial operations.

"In a number of countries, foreign exchange controls impede the repatriation of revenues earned by U.S. companies in the local markets," Powers said. "In some cases, foreign-admitted insurers may be required to pay a higher level of tax or have their taxes assessed on a different, more costly basis than domestic companies. In other cases, policyholders may be able to take tax deductions for insurance premiums paid to domestic insurers, but not to foreign insurers."

In interviews with officials of U.S. insurance companies in Europe, the GAO was told the U.S. presence may grow.

"Based on our discussions with representatives of the U.S. insurance industry in the (European) Community, at least eight U.S. companies are establishing distribution alliances with Community banks and insurance companies or opening new offices," said Allan I. Mendelowitz, the GAO's director of trade, energy and finance issues.

Mendelowitz added the most attractive markets in the EC are in the southern member states - Spain, Italy, Greece - where, historically, domestic regulation has been more restrictive and foreign insurance penetration has been low.

"As the economies of these countries (Spain, Italy, Greece) grow, demand for insurance is expected to increase," said Mendelowitz. "For example, as consumer incomes rise, the perceived need for insurance coverage to protect survivors may increase. Therefore, as more efficient foreign insurers are permitted to enter these countries, profit opportunities are anticipated."

The EC's ultimate objective is to create a single market for insurance similar to that for banking and investment services, whereby insurance companies established in any EC nation would be able to provide services freely throughout the EC.

However, the GAO noted EC progress toward the liberalization of its insurance sector lags behind that of the banking and securities markets.

"The EC is further away from agreeing on a single license for the offering of insurance services than for the other financial sectors, partly because of national tendencies toward protecting domestic insurance industries," the report said. "These delays trouble U.S. government and private sector officials because of the significant opportunities they foresee should the insurance sector be liberalized."

Powers says the current round of multilateral trade negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade known as the Uruguay Round is the best approach to secure insurance reform across a large spectrum of nations.

"The United States is pressing strongly for a services agreement that imposes obligations, and does not merely establish objectives, for governments to maintain transparent, predictable and non-restrictive rules for foreign services and foreign service providers," Powers said.

According to the GAO, the EC accounts for approximately 22 percent of the $1 trillion private insurance market in the world, making it the second largest global market after the U.S. In comparison, the U.S. market generates approximately 43 percent of the world's premiums, while Japan generates approximately 20 percent.

Six U.S. insurance companies are among the 15 largest in the world, but only 1 percent of total premium revenue for the U.S. insurance industry is derived from foreign sources. In 1985, worldwide investment by U.S. insurance companies amounted to $7.9 billion, of which 70 percent occurred in Europe.

TOKYO (MAY 23) - Daihatsu Motor Co., Ltd. said on Wednesday it was negotiating with Italy's Fiat S.p.A. to jointly manufacture small commercial vehicles in Italy.

Company officials, however, said Daihatshu, a Toyota Motor group company, had not yet reached agreement on the plan to jointly produce the vehicles.

Their remarks followed a newspaper report that Daihatsu and Fiat had reached a basic agreement to produce 40,000 units of commercial vehicles a year starting in 1991 at a plant owned by Fiat's subsidiary.

The report said Daihatsu planned to send officials to Italy next week to discuss details of the project.

TOKYO (MAY 23) - Japan's vehicle production in April increased 3.2 percent from a year earlier to 1,127,177 units, a new high for the month, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association reported Wednesday.

The association attributed the rise to brisk domestic demand estimated to have jumped 7.7 percent while exports suffered an 18 per cent decline in the month.

Car production rose 8.7 percent to 814,203 units, a record for the month, but production of trucks fell 8.7 percent to 309,539 units and bus output fell 12.1 percent to 3,435 units.

JAKARTA (MAY 23) - The United Arab Emirates (UAE) said Wednesday it was ready to accept an extension in July of the current OPEC output agreement to help boost prices, indicating it would postpone its long-standing demand for a higher quota.

"We'll be flexible and we're ready to expand the agreement for another period to give time for the market to adjust (if needed)," UAE Oil Minister Mana Saeed Otaiba told a press conference here.

The Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) agreed this month to cut 1.445 million barrels per day (BPD) from its April output in a move to boost sagging prices from 14 dollars to the group's target of 18 dollars a barrel.

The agreement is subject to review when oil ministers from the 13 member countries meet again towards the end of July. Prices currently hover between 16 and 17 dollars a barrel.

"It might take a bit of time but we have to be patient. The price of oil is moving in the right direction," said Mr. Otaiba, who was in Indonesia with visiting UAE President Sheik Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahyan.

Before the OPEC meeting in Geneva this month, the UAE had been one of the largest violators of the previous quota agreement, producing 2.1 million BPD against its allocation of 1.095. The UAE agreed to cut 200,000 BPD in Geneva.

CANBERRA (MAY 23) - The federal government barred Wednesday the ANZ Banking Group Ltd.'s proposed merger with National Mutual Life Association of Australasia Ltd., which would have created the country's largest financial institution.

Acting Prime Minister and Treasurer Paul Keating, who earlier had provisionally approved the deal, said in a statement the merger between the country's second largest bank and second biggest life insurance office was against the national interest.

The treasurer said the merger was "likely to detract more from effective and vigorous competition than is in the national interest."

"It would lead to other proposals for similar mergers among major institutions," he said.

"It is not sensible to leave the promotion of competition to market forces alone when there are pressures towards undue concentration of power," Mr. Keating said.

On April 2 the ANZ said it would pay 3.4 billion Australian dollars (2.6 billion U.S.) to buy 51 percent of National Mutual.

The deal also involved the ANZ paying 400 million dollars (306 million U.S.) for the National Mutual Royal Bank Ltd. (NMRB), which was jointly owned by National Mutual and the Royal Bank of Canada.

Mr. Keating said March 30 his approval for ANZ's purchase of NMRB was conditional on ownership reverting to National Mutual if the ANZ-National Mutual merger faltered.

He said Wednesday the Reserve (central) Bank would soon issue new rules on the capital requirements of bank investments in non-consolidated subsidiaries such as life offices.

The ANZ reported Wednesday a 23 percent fall in its half-yearly profit before abnormals to 310.3 million dollars (237 million U.S.) in the six months to March 31, blaming soaring bad and doubtful debts.

ANZ shares rose 20 cents to 4.90 dollars on the sharemarket here in reaction to the day's events.

TOKYO (MAY 23) - The backlog of ship orders for export at Japanese shipyards came to 291 vessels, totalling 11.79 million tons, at the end of April, the Japan Ship Exporters Association said on Wednesday.

The backlog is enough for Japanese shipbuilders to survive until 1993, association officials said.

The association said that in April Japanese shipbuilders received export orders for 25 vessels totalling 1.05 million tons, up 78.7 percent from the same month last year.

The April orders included 12 oil tankers, three of them very large crude carriers (VLCCs), 10 cargo ships, two bulk carriers and a container vessel.

The officials said export orders, in particular for VLCCs, are expected to continue to increase, pushing up the backlog even as high as the record 13 million tons at the end of 1983.

PRETORIA (MAY 23) - The rate of growth in South Africa's broad-based M3 money supply surged to 22.71 percent in April, according to preliminary figures released here by the Reserve (central) Bank.

But the bank's governor, Chris Stals, said the high year-on-year rise was not unexpected and was no cause for alarm.

He said it was the result of "statistical noise" and was due to an unexplained shrinkage in the money supply in April 1989.

The latest figures reflect a marked increase in the M3 growth, from 19.2 per- cent in March and 21.36 percent in February. It is well above the Reserve Bank's target range of 11 to 15 percent.

Money supply, M3, is determined by all notes and coins in circulation plus all the deposits in banks, building societies and the post office.

Comparative M3 figures in billions of rands with the dollar equivalents in brackets, using month-end exchange rates: 37.5 U.S. cents to the rand in April, 38 cents in March and 39 cents in April 1989.

HELSINKI (MAY 23) - President of Israel Chaim Herzog and his wife Aura arrived here on Wednesday for a four-day state visit, the first to Finland by an Israeli head of state.

The visit takes places at a time of controversy over the emigration of Soviet Jews has become an international political theme, and the flow of migrants through Finland to Israel is expected to be a theme at Mr. Herzog's talks with Finnish leaders.

After official welcome ceremonies and a lunch hosted by Finnish President Mauno Koivisto, the Israeli President laid a wreath on the tomb of fallen heros and the grave of Finland's war-time leader Field Marshal C.G. Mannerheim.

The official discussions between the two presidents were held later in the afternoon.

During his visit President Herzog will also meet Conservative Prime Minister Harri Holkeri and Social Democrat Speaker of Parliament Kalevi Sorsa, who is returning from a Socialist International meeting in Cairo.

Finnish Foreign Minister Pertti Paasio, who also is in Cairo, will begin an official visit there on Thursday, and is due to visit Israel, Jordan and Syria next month.

Finland has announced it is ready to serve as a transit route for Soviet Jews for humanitarian reasons, but has emphasized they must not be settled in the occupied West Bank or Gaza Strip where about 1.7 million Palestinians live.

Israel expects up to 150,000 Soviet Jewish immigrants this year, and thousands of them are due to go through Finland.

KARACHI (MAY 23) - Pakistani officials said Wednesday that they had seized over 30 tons of high-quality drugs in what they called the "world's biggest ever" hashish seizure.

Agha Sikander Ali, regional director of the Pakistan Narcotics Control Board (PNCB), said the drug, seized early Tuesday in Karachi and hidden in a fake military trailer, was destined for Europe.

PNCB agents, working on a tip from a transport wing of the army, recovered 30,640 kilograms (66,408 pounds) of hashish, arrested the driver of the trailer and confiscated a Kalashnikov assault rifle, Mr. Ali said.

The 13-meter (40-foot) trailer with a fake army registration number was shuttling between Peshawar, bordering Afghanistan, and Karachi, Mr. Ali said.

The drug was concealed in "professionally packed" medicine boxes, fully labeled with the name of the manufacturer and the sole agent. The boxes were wrapped in plastic fertilizer bags, he added.

Mr. Ali said preliminary investigations showed that the consignment was destined for Europe.

He said police were hunting for a drug baron who was believed to own the hashish, but he did not name him.

According to local Newsline magazine, 30 per cent of the world's 300 billion dollar annual narcotics trade originates or passes through Pakistan. Officials say most of it comes from Afghanistan.

RIO DE JANEIRO (MAY 23) - The Brazilian Physics Society has called for congressional supervision of the military's nuclear program, expressing concern it may have secretly developed the capacity to build a nuclear bomb.

In a 97-page report published in the local press Wednesday, the society outlined its concerns about the military's nuclear program, which has been pursued outside the control of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). The IAEA monitors Brazil's civilian nuclear power industry.

The report was signed by five members of the society -- physicists Luiz Pinguelli Rosa, Fernando Souza Barros and Odair Dias Goncalves of the Federal University of Rio de Janeiro; Carlos Roberto Appoloni of the University of Londrina; and Iuda Goldman Vel Legbam, of the University of Sao Paolo.

The document, which is to be submitted to the Brazilian congress Wednesday, contends that the military could be producing enriched uranium for nuclear devices at its Aramar Experimental Center in Ipero, in Sao Paulo state.

The report said an atomic bomb "could easily be built" at the navy-run Aramar complex and tested at the military base at Cachimbo in the Amazon jungles in the northeastern state of Para.

The Cachimbo base, whose existence was first revealed in 1986 by the newspaper Folha de Sao Paulo, covers an area of 4.5 million hectares (11.1 million acres).

At the time of the Folha article, the government said the base was run by the air force to test materials and equipment for the development of aerospace potential in the interest of national security.

The government also said then that Brazil had no plans to build nuclear arms, did not possess the necessary technological capability to do so and had no test program in those areas.

In 1987, the government said Brazilian experts working in the military's nuclear program had achieved the capacity to enrich uranium. Last year, the navy said it planned to begin production of enriched uranium on an industrial scale in 1997 at the Aramar Experimental Center.

LONDON (MAY 23) - British tobacco and insurance conglomerate BAT Industries said Wednesday its taxable profit fell 27 percent in the first quarter of this year to 231 million pounds (391 million dollars).

The group blamed the fall on the effect on insurance subsidiary Eagle Star of heavy storms in Europe in January and February.

Turnover was up six percent to 5.09 billion pounds (8.62 billion dollars) and earnings per share were down 36 percent at 7.93 pence.

The market had been expecting profit of between 240 and 270 million pounds, and BAT shares fell two pence to 270 in early trading in London.

But BAT said that because of the transient nature of Eagle Star's problems, it did not consider the first quarter result as indicative of the likely overall performance for the year.

The first quarter figures were virtually unaffected by the restructuring begun by BAT last year in response to a hostile takeover bid by the Hoylake consortium led by financier Sir James Goldsmith, which has since been abandoned.

Since the beginning of March, BAT has virtually abandoned the retail sector and its paper-making interests are to be listed separately on the stock market from June 1.

BEIJING (MAY 23) - China is considering new regulations to improve prison conditions and respect for the human rights of detainees, a senior security official was quoted Wednesday as saying.

Tao Siju, deputy minister for public security, said lawmakers were working on the text of "regulations concerning places of detention" in accordance with "humanitarian and democratic socialist" criteria.

Chinese law gives police the power to send delinquents or criminals to internment or re-education camps, without a judgment or intercession of a lawyer, for between one and three years.

In many cases, the families are not immediately informed.

The official New China News Agency (NCNA), the first to report Mr. Tao's remarks Tuesday, said without comment that under the proposed legislation persons in provisional detention would have the right to a defense and a court appeal.

But such rights are often trampled on, according to criticisms by international human rights organizations that have been corroborated in part by Chinese authorities.

NCNA reported in late April that more than 9,500 cases of "illegal detention," torture and examples of "perverting justice" were recorded in the first four months of 1990 and were being investigated.

It said the mistreatement resulted in 490 casualties, including some deaths.

But nonetheless, Tuesday's report said that "in the past 40 years, China's prisons have operated successfully and made a great contribution to the country's stability."

LONDON (MAY 23) - Britain's seasonally-adjusted trade deficit narrowed in April to 1.78 billion pounds (3.02 billion dollars), the Central Statistical Office (CSO) announced here Wednesday.

But while the April figures showed an improvement in Britain's trade performance in comparison with March's 2.1 billion-pound (3.3 billion-dollar) deficit - the country's second-worst ever - they nonetheless exceeded most forecasts and cast further doubt on the government's ability to curb consumer spending.

The narrowing of the deficit was due largely to a drop in imports of so-called erratic items such as ships and planes.

Market reaction to the April figures was mixed, with sterling gaining some ground against most major currencies but the Footsie 100-share index shedding gains made earlier in the day.

At midday (1100 GMT), the pound had risen slightly to 1.6975 dollars, compared to 1.6955 two hours earlier and had also climbed to 2.8253 Deutsche marks, against 2.8207.

But shortly before 1:00 p.m., share gains were wiped out with the Footsie down 0.3 points on Tuesday's close at 2,311.

Earlier, the Footsie had been up 20 points.

The Treasury however said that British exports were "performing well" and noted that excluding oil and erratic items, exports in April rose 11 percent in comparison with April 1989.

In contrast, April imports excluding oil and erratics rose only three per-cent compared over the same month last year.

THABONG, South Africa (MAY 23) - Dozens of still-smoking barricades, burnt-out vehicles and looted shops bore testimony Tuesday in this central South African black township to riots Sunday and Monday that left 11 dead.

The rioting was said to have been sparked by police firing on demonstrators who had met to call off a boycott of white businesses in the ultra-conservative town of Welkom, called on May 7 in protest at attacks on blacks by right wingers.

The situation remained extremely tense as some 20 journalists were taken under a heavy police escort into this township with a population of 250,000. Adolescents and children, some not even 10 years old, showered the police vehicles with stones and bottles.

Until this two-hour visit, Thabong had been cut off from the outside world since Sunday night when the police set up barriers at the two entrances to the township following running battles between police and black demonstrators,

 seven of whom were killed.

By Tuesday, another four were reported dead including a former councillor who was lynched on Monday.

On Mothusi Street, one of the township's main roads, barricades mostly made up of the contents of dustbins were set up every 10 metres (yards), some of them still burning.

Almost every crossroads was blocked by the blackened burnt-out frame of a vehicle.

Inhabitants of the township, sitting in their yards or strolling down the streets, eyed with a mixture of curiosity and fear the convoy of police vehicles -- a yellow bus and a yellow Casspir armoured troop transporter carrying the journalists, followed by a brown Casspir with half a dozen policemen in full combat gear carrying rifles.

An inhabitant of Thabong, 30-year-old Eric Daliwong Peyi, told AFP: "When people see a police vehicle, they get angry. They must leave the people alone."

He said it was the police that had provoked the crisis by opening fire Sunday for no valid reason on a group of demonstrators. The police version was that the demonstrators, brandishing African National Congress banners, had attacked them with petrol bombs.

When the convoy got underway again a few stones and a bottle were hurled at the second Casspir. The culprits quickly ran away.

Down the road, the municipal Holokile Beer Garden was partly burnt out, with thousands of bottles destroyed. It was being guarded by two "green beans" as the local black policemen are known.

Just behind it, local people showed the visiting journalists holes in a corrugated iron shanty, apparently caused by buck-shot. A woman said police had opened fire on Monday: there were varying accounts of the number of injured.

But not everybody was complaining about the police: one young man aged about 20 who would not give his name complained about the misdeeds that "they" had committed.

He was referring to the "comrades," young radical militants of the ANC.

His father, a municipal councillor, had fled Thabong because he feared his life was threatened. His shop-cum-restaurant was looted on Sunday and torched on Monday.

"They must stop the things they are doing," the son said, adding: "Their aim is to try to bomb those who are councillors."

PRETORIA (MAY 23) - South Africa's official year-on-year inflation rate fell to 14.6 percent in April from 14.9 percent in March, the Central Statistical Services said here Wednesday.

South African Chamber of Business economist Keith Lockwood said the figures marked the first major downturn since last July, when the rate was 15.5 per- cent, and predicted a decline to 13 to 13.5 percent by December, possibly bottoming out at 10 percent in mid-1991.

But he said the fact that the lowest income groups were hardest hit, with inflation running at 15.5 percent for them, was a worrying factor, especially as their food prices rose 18 percent in April over April 1989.

"That is the chief area of concern, particularly in the current socio-political environment.

"It could help to fuel unrest and it will probably contribute to higher wage demands.

"Company profits are coming under pressure because of the slowing down in the economy, and we could see some sort of labour disputes.

"We've had some indication from our membership in general that they are a little worried about what sort of pay demands there are going to be."

The country's two largest black trade unions, the National Union of Mineworkers and the National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa, are currently locked in annual pay bargaining.

TOKYO (MAY 23) - Switzerland's central bank governor on Wednesday urged Japanese borrowers to return to the Swiss capital market to reverse the recent dearth of new offerings caused by the collapse of share prices in Japan.

"The downtrend in share prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange since February has practically caused Japanese securities offerings to dry up," Swiss National Bank chairman Markus Lusser said.

"This has made Switzerland acutely aware of the danger of unilateral dependence."

Mr. Lusser, speaking at a meeting of the Federation of Bankers Associations of Japan, said that the Japanese share of Swiss capital exports had risen from about a third in recent years to about half in 1989.

Although borrowers from other countries had filled the gap caused by the recent withdrawal of the Japanese, "it is, of course, to be hoped that Japanese borrowers will return in due course," he said.

"The competitiveness of a financial centre rests on a broad-based attractiveness for participants from various countries."

PARIS (MAY 23) - A group of French members of parliament has urged President Francois Mitterrand to discuss with his Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev the issue of unpaid, old debts contracted by Russia.

The group, comprising 84 deputies of all political groups excluding the Communist party on Wednesday urged Mr. Mitterrand to raise the issue with the Soviet president when the two meet on Friday.

The vice president for the national group in defence of the holders of the Russian securities, Francois Bayle, said that in France there would now be between 250,000 and 300,000 holders of small amounts of securities issued before the Russian Revolution.

He estimated the sum necessary to compensate these people at "2.1 billion francs (about 370 million dollars)."

Conservative opposition MP Jean-Pierre Delalande said: "The French have not forgoten this affair which is anchored in the collective consciousness, and not only among elderly people." He said that "The Soviet Union has never contested the reality of its debt."

The creation of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (BERD) "gives new vigour to the debate", he said.

In order to benefit from loans from the new bank, "the Soviet Union should begin to pay its old debts".

He added: "He who pays his debts becomes wealthier."

Britain reached a debt agreement with the Soviet union in 1989 and Switzerland in March 1990, and they have begun to compensate holders of Rusian loan securities, Mr. Bayle said.

PORT-AU-PRINCE (MAY 23) - Haiti's provisional president, Ertha Pascal-Trouillot, left Wednesday for a four-day visit to the United States at the invitation of U.S. President George Bush.

Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot is to hold talks with Mr. Bush Thursday at the White House.

Friday, she will address the Washington-based Organization of American States before departing for U.N. headquarters in New York, where she is to meet with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

In a nationally televised message here Tuesday, Mrs. Trouillot said she considered Mr. Bush's invitation "an encouragement to persevere in my efforts to build a more humane Haitian nation."

Mrs. Trouillot will be accompanied by Major General Gerard Lacrete, her army chief of staff, presidential adviser Ernst Mallebranche, industrialist Andre Apaid, Foreign Minister Kesler Clermont, and several other cabinet officers.

The Haitian delegation also is to meet with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, officials of the International Monetary Fund, Inter-American Development Bank, U.S. Agency for International Development, and representatives of the Haitian exile community in Washington, New York, and Miami, Florida.

COLOGNE, WEST GERMANY (MAY 23) - West German auto maker Volkswagen and U.S. concern Ford are holding talks on joint production of a limousine in Europe, a Ford-Europe spokesman said here Wedneaday.

The talks concern various models and possible production sites, including Spain and Portugal, the spokesman said.

The new car would be able to carry up to seven people, and a decision was expected in the next few months.

The Madrid daily El Pais had said Wednesday that the two companies were planning to build a joint plant in Portugal or Spain to produce up to 300,000 cars a year, at an investment cost of 4.2 billion Deutsche marks

The two companies have been associated for several years under the Autolatina name in Brazil and Argentina.

LONDON (MAY 23) - British police were searching Wednesday for a possible IRA arms cache in London after the discovery of two loaded rifles in north London and the arrest of an Irish suspect.

Scotland Yard said it had received nearly 300 phone calls from the public after publishing a photograph of a suspected terrorist who was arrested early Tuesday in a car containing two Kalashnikovs.

The suspect has not been identified by Scotland Yard. But the father of Kevin O'Donnell in Coalisland County Tyrone, Northern Ireland said Wednesday that the suspect was his son aged 19.

Jim O'Donnell said 12 policemen of the Royal Ulster Constabulary had gone to his home and searched it on Wednesday.

The young man was being questioned by Scotland Yard detectives at a police station in central London. Police are anxious to know the address of Mr. O'Donnell in mainland Britain.

British police said at least two Irish Republican Army (IRA) units have been operating in Britain for several months with the logistic support of people sympathetic to the IRA cause.

The arrest comes less than a week after two IRA bomb attacks at army offices in London which killed one person and injured several.

The company attributed the fall partly due to a steep increase in fuel prices and higher interest payments.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) - The Soviet government's economic reforms to introduce a controlled market economy are a turning point as important in the country's history as the Russian Revolution, President Mikhail Gorbachev said Wednesday.

A market economy was "necessary, but all measures will be taken to ensure social guarantees," TASS news agency quoted him as telling a group of Soviet MP's.

The transition to a market economy "is a major turning point, equal to the October Revolution" of 1917 that brought the Bolsheviks to power, he added.

In response to MP's concern over the possible privatisation of state-owned enterprises Mr. Gorbachev said "no such thing is proposed in the reforms."

But there would a development of company leasing, shreholding and cooperatives.

"Collective leasing, that is the formula which will ensure both independence and a large degree of initiative for workers," Mr. Gorbachev said.

"I do not wish to dramatise, but it would be stupid to say that the sky is cloudless and that would not correspond to the situation," he added.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) - Full ruble convertibility will be achieved by the year 2000, First Deputy Premier Yuri Maslyukov told a news conference here Wednesday.

"Partial convertibility will emerge in 1993," notably for foreign firms which reinvest profits in the Soviet Union, the official, who heads Gosplan, the state planning body, said.

Presenting the broad outline of reforms designed to introduce a market economy in the Soviet Union, deputy premier Leonid Abalkin, responsible for economic reform, said for his part that "there will probably be a lower ruble rate, though there is no final decision on that".

There was a need however "to bring the rate into direct relation with prices," he added.

The ruble is currently fixed at an artificially high rate.

While the commercial rate might eventually be changed, the tourism rate (currently 10 percent of the commercial rate of 1.60 dollars to the ruble) will remain the same, he said.

Mr. Maslyukov said for his part that a state bank, working on the lines of the U.S. federal reserve bank, would probably be set up, with control taken away from the council of ministers.

LIBREVILLE (MAY 23) - The secretary-general of the Gabonese Progress Party (PGP), Joseph Redjembe, was found dead of unknown causes at a hotel here overnight, several sources said Wednesday.

Mr. Redjembe, a businessman of about 50, was co-leader with lawyer Agondjo Okawe of the moderate PGP, which headed the opposition at a national conference in April after which President Omar Bongo pledged to bring in a multi-party system.

A source close to Mr. Redjembe said he was driven to a meeting at the Dowe hotel late Tuesday. When he did not come out after several hours, his chauffeur went to look for him and found his dead body, which bore no trace of blows.

PARIS (MAY 23) - French Agriculture Minister Henri Nallet said here Wednesday that no cases of "Mad Cow Disease" have been diagnosed in France.

Responding to a question in the National Assembly, Mr. Nallet said however that the situation across the Channel was "worrying enough that we have already taken a certain number of measures, without providing excessive publicity."

He recalled that Mad Cow Disease, or bovine spongiform encephalopathy, had first appeared among cattle herds in Britain in 1985 and had "slowly spread to where it has now reached Ireland."

Mr. Nallet said that "15,000 cows have already been slaughtered" in Britain.

Beef consumption in Britain has dropped because of fears that the fatal brain disease, for which there is no cure, could spread to humans.

DUSSELDORF, WEST GERMANY (MAY 23) - European and Japanese negotiators made some progress here Wednesday in talks aimed at defining worldwide standards for high-definition television, considered the television of the future.

The European and Japanese experts to the International Radio Consultative Committee (CCIR) talks unanimously adopted five "recommendations" establishing guidelines for studios for high-definition TV.

They did not, however, discuss the thorny questions of high-definition TV broadcasting and reception, over which the two sides have been at loggerheads.

Mark Krivocheyev of the Soviet Union, who heads the CCIR panel, described the agreement as "historic."

He recalled that the last general CCIR meeting four years ago in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, was marked by fierce disagreement between Japan, which has been involved in developing high-definition TV for more than 20 years, and Europe.

At the Dubrovnik meeting, Japan attempted to push through its standards as the international norm.

European representatives demanded at the time that a decision be delayed to allow them to come up with a system that would not, as the Japanese system does, rule out the use of existing European-developed technology.

The main recommendation adopted Wednesday defines 23 of the 34 parameters needed for the establishment of a common norm for future television studios.

This allowed for agreement on other issues such as color and image formats.

The outstanding 11 issues concern questions such as the number of images to be broadcast per second and the the number of lines on the screen.

Bernard Pauchon, an executive with the French television channel TDF who is attending the talks, welcomed Wednesday's agreement.

"We managed to agree on something and that's important," he said.

But he noted that "we are still far from reaching agreement on fundamental questions."

The U.N-affiliated CCIR groups telecommunications and broadcasting authorities and private firms from 166 countries.

The CCIR meeting here is to continue to June 1.

MONROVIA (MAY 23) - The Liberian government confirmed Wednesday that rebels had captured the key iron ore port of Buchanan, when Deputy Information Minister Moses Washington said government troops were moving to retake it.

Mr. Washington told a press conference that government troops were concerned to minimize loss of life in their offensive against Buchanan, 90 miles (144 kilometres) east of the capital.

It was the first official comment on renewed fighting. The rebels, led by former senior government official Charles Taylor, first launched an incursion into northeast Liberia last December in a bid to overthrow President Samuel Doe.

Meanwhile, a previously unknown group calling itself the Anti-Rebel Committee in Defense of Multipartism in Liberia has planned to hold a mass demonstration here Friday in support of Mr. Doe.

The committee has called on all "patriotic" citizens to join the parade, which would be the first in support of the government since the fighting between rebels and troops erupted nearly five months ago.

In a related development, Mr. Doe on Wednesday ordered the defense and justice ministers to set up a joint security team to arrest those responsible for a recent wave of killings in the country.

An official statement condemned the murder of 10 persons on Monday and Wednesday as "senseless and wicked act which should not be condoned." Nine victims were found beheaded, while the 10th was castrated.

The statement also said the government would not encourage what it called "sectional killings," an apparent reference to rumors that the murders were directed at Gio and Mano tribesmen from northeastern Nimba County where the rebel operations were launched on December 24.

"This is not a civil war nor a tribal conflict," the statement said of the present rebel activities in Nimba, Bong and Grand Bassa counties.

MONROVIA (MAY 23) - Liberian President Samuel Doe Wednesday ordered the defence and justice ministers to set up a joint security team to seek out all responsible for a recent wave killings.

A statement from Doe's office condemned the brutal killings in Monrovia Monday and Tuesday of ten persons as ''senseless and wicked acts''.

He said the government would not put up with ''sectional killings'' - a remark taken as a reaction to rumours that the murders were directed at Gios and Manoes from north-eastern Nimba county where a incursion began last December.

Police earlier said the beheaded bodies of ten men were found in three surburbs of Monrovia. Press reports said one of the bodies was identified as that of a sergeant in the Liberian Army.

In January three persons, among them two engineers, were found murdered in a similar manner in Monrovia.

PARIS (MAY 23) - Chad is to repatriate 10 Libyan lorry drivers captured in "the Chad-Sudan" region earlier this month in a "goodwill gesture," the Chadian ambassador said in a statement here Wednesday.

Libya has accused Chadian troops of attacking a civilian lorry convoy well inside Sudanese territory, but Chad said the trucks were taking arms and supplies to the shadowy Islamic Legion.

Describing the repatriation of what he called the "prisoners of war" as a "goodwill gesture" aimed at peace and dialogue, Ambassador Allam-Mi Ahmad said they were Wednesday given into the hands of "a friendly country" that would get them home.

He did not name the country, but Iraq, Algeria, Egypt and Tunisia have all offered to help.

Libya on May 12 accused Chad of seizing the convoy in an incident that last week blocked talks on the settlement of a long-standing dispute over the Aouzou Strip, territory claimed by Tripoli in northernmost Chad.

The Ndjamena government charges that Tripoli is trying to rebuild Libyan-led Islamic Legion forces in Sudan's Darfur Province, which the Chadian military early this month claimed to have virtually wiped out.

Chadian rebels led by former army chief Idriss Deby have said that they were behind the fighting and denied that they sustained heavy casualties.

The Chadian ambassador here stated that the decision to return the lorry drivers should not be seen as a sign of "weakness" following recent threats from Libya.

NEW DELHI (MAY 23) - India's two major communist parties demanded the recall of Kashmir Governor Jagmohan on Wednesday, holding him responsible for the police massacre of Moslem mourners in the troubled state on Monday.

The Communist Party of India (CPI) and the Communist Party of India (Marxist), both of which back the government, made the demand in parliament during a discussion on the worsening situation in Jammu and Kashmir, where Moslem militants are waging a violent secessionist campaign.

They were supported by the miniscule Forward Bloc, a leftist party, and Chandra Shekhar, a political heavyweight from the Janata Dal (People's Party), the core constituent of the National Front coalition government.

Security forces opened fire on mourners staging a funeral procession in Srinagar on Monday for a Moslem religious leader, Miwaiz Maulvi Farooq, who was assassinated earlier in the day.

The mirwaiz (high priest) was shot dead Monday at his home by unknown gunmen. The government has said the killers were Moslem militants.

The police shooting left 47 people dead according to news reports. The Kashmir government, however, maintains only 27 were killed while doctors in Srinagar put the death toll at 80 with more than 300 injured.

CPI MP Inderjit Gupta charged in parliament that the security forces in Kashmir were acting like an "occupation army."

Forward Bloc's Chitta Basu said Governor Jagmohan had further alienated the people of the state from the "national mainstream" and called upon New Delhi to end his tenure. Similar views were expressed by CPI (M) MP's.

The CPI and CPI (M), along with the Hindu-nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), extend crucial support to the National Front, which does not have a majority on its own in parliament.

Only the BJP actively backs Mr. Jagmohan, a Hindu who has held several top official assignments and is reputed to be a tough administrator. He took charge of Kashmir on January 18.

GENEVA (MAY 23) - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and his West German counterpart Hans-Dietrich Genscher emerged from a meeting here Wednesday saying they had held constructive talks on German unification and military alliance issues.

The two foreign ministers met for five and a half hours at the Soviet mission for the hastily called talks which included luncheon.

Genscher told reporters afterward the meeting had been ''fruitful'' and that progress had been made on a range of issues.

Shevardnadze denied U.S. reports that the Soviet Union had made an accord at the Vienna conventional forces talks conditional on agreement at the current Two-plus-Four German unification talks on an upper limit for armed forces for a unified Germany.

Those talks involve the four wartime Allies and the two postwar German states. Genscher and Shevardnadze discussed the status of the Four-plus-Two talks, plus other international security issues.

Shevardnadze said there was a chance of moving the Vienna talks forward more quickly toward compromise. He added, ''We haven't got much more time.''

Genscher said both sides were interested in achieving substantial results in Vienna and wanted to intensify the Helsinki Process.

The Bonn minister announced that West German and Soviet experts would soon meet to continue the exchange of views between the two governments.

Genscher said there were also prospects for a further meeting between him and Shevardnadze.

After the Geneva meeting, Genscher flew to Paris, where he was to meet later Wednesday with French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas. From there he goes to Washington for talks Friday with Secretary of State James Baker, before going on to London for a meeting Monday with British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd

PARIS (MAY 23) - A court in Nanterre, outside Paris, on Wednesday sentenced French far-right leader Jean-Marie Le Pen to forfeit a symbolic franc for dismissing the Nazi gas chambers as "a detail" of history.

The National Front leader was told to pay one franc (0.18 U.S. dollars) to each of 16 human rights groups that took him to court, but judges also ordered that the text of their verdict be published in 10 French national and local newspapers.

The court ruled that Mr. Le Pen had made a "shocking" statement "of a nature to call into question, banalize, or at the very least render less specifically dramatic the persecutions and suffering inflicted on deportees and more particularly on Jews and gypsies by the Nazis."

"The freedom of speech is limited by certain essential values and a respect for the rights of others," the court added in its judgement, noting that Mr. Le Pen was guilty of "prejudice" against the plaintiffs.

The verdict from the court in the university town west of Paris came more than two-and-a-half years after Mr. Le Pen first made the offensive remark in a radio programme on September 13, 1987.

Last February, he repeated the same statement concerning the gas chambers.

Leaders of the Jewish community on Wednesday hailed the verdict as a victory for democracy. It also came two weeks after the desecration of Jewish graves in the southern French town of Carpentras, near Avignon, which sparked national outrage and massive demonstrations against anti-Semitism.

Chief Joseph Sitruk said "it was about time a court had the courage to condemn this kind of statement, now that all the shields against the racist and anti-semitic wave in France have been lifted."

"Any means is good for sweeping aside the National Front," was Mr. Le Pen's reaction to the decision. He denounced what he called "a general offensive" against his party and spoke of a "drift towards totalitarianism" on the part of the authorities.

Those who won the case against him included organizations representing former deportees, anti-racist movements and gypsy associations.

LIBREVILLE (MAY 23) - Demonstrators set fire to several buildings in the Gabonese capital and in Port Gentil on Wednesday after the sudden death of opposition leader Joseph Redjembe was announced.

In Libreville, several hundred people went on the rampage, burning down a hotel and a cinema. In Mr. Redjebme's native Port Gentil, south of the capital, official buildings were reportedly targetted, including the French consulate.

Mr. Redjembe was driven to a meeting at the Dowe hotel here late Tuesday, a relative said Wednesday. After several hours' waiting, his chauffeur went to look for him and found his dead body, which bore no trace of blows.

Mr. Redjembe, a businessman of about 50, was co-leader with lawyer Agondjo Okawe of the moderate PGP, which headed the opposition at a national conference in April after which President Omar Bongo pledged to bring in a multi-party system.

Police said an investigation has been ordered by the state prosecutor and confirmed that there was no sign of violence. The state prosecutor, reached by telephone later Wednesday, said autopsy results would be released as soon as possible.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) - The turnout in local and parliament elections in the Soviet republic of Armenia last Sunday was low, forcing postponement in about a third of the constituencies, press reports said Wednesday.

"Secret" elections were held in the troubled Nagorny-Karabakh region where the predominant Christian Armenian population is pressing for administration by Armenia rather than Moslem Azerbaijan.

Krasnaya Zvesda, the Soviet army newspaper, said the "secret" poll, held in entrance halls and apartments after an official ban by Azeri authorities, was to give Nagorny-Karabakh voters the possibility to elect deputies to the Armenian parliament.

Four people were arrested Saturday carrying ballot boxes and the airport at Stepanakert, Nagorny-Karabakh's main city, was closed Saturday and Sunday.

Armenians considered the vote a "referendum that again confirmed (the republic's) right to autonomy", the paper added.

The election was invalidated in 56 out of 85 Armenian constituencies after less than half of the voters showed up at polling stations, according to the Communist Youth daily Komsomolskaya Pravda.

The nationalist Armenian National Movement swept the elections in the main city of Yerevan, in Kirovakan and rural areas but the Communists maintained their seats in Leninakan and other constituencies, the paper said.

Vladimir Movsisian, the republic's Communist Party chief, and Communist Youth leader Granush Akopian were re-elected in the first round, as were Telman Gdlian and Nikolai Ivanov, two examining magistrates, who made themselves a name in probing wrongdoings by Soviet officials.

KATHMANDU (MAY 23) - Nepalese Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai will visit India June 8-10, Radio Nepal and Nepal television announced Wednesday, quoting the foreign ministry.

The visit will be the first foreign trip by Bhattarai, who took over as prime minister a month ago after widespread political unrest led to the collapse of the previous administration.

Nepal-India relations have been under a cloud since March 1989 when India terminated trade and transit treaties with Nepal, a move which led to shortages of raw materials and other products imported from India.

Bhattarai, who was invited by Indian Prime Minister V. P. Singh, has asked the Indian government to reintroduce the treaties.

Observers said the outcome of the visit is impoprtant for the stability of Bhattarai's interim government, which faces elections within the next 12 months.

BONN (MAY 23) - East German Foreign Minister Makus Meckel reiterated here Wednesday his opposition to parallel elections in East and West Germany as early as December or January for an all-German parliament.

The East German Social Democrat, in a speech at a political foundation, the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung, called it ''redundant'' of Bonn's Christian Democratic-headed government to press for a firm election date.

Setting an election date would only put the German unification process under a deadline, he said. West German Christian Democrats have mentioned December 2 or January 13 as possible all-Germany election dates.

The East German foreign minister also said he doubted that the current timetable for foreign policy talks in the Two-plus-Four negotitiations could be adhered to. The timetable calls for foreign policy issues to be agreed upon by the four wartime Allies and the two postwar German states by autumn.

He said he saw no need for haste because the recently signed state treaty would produce a degree of unification by itself. He said the process of turning East Germany into a truly federal state prior to accession under terms of the West German constitution was bound to be far more time consuming than anyone currently expects.

BONN (MAY 23) - Restrictions on high techonology transfers to the East Bloc will no longer apply to East Germany after German economic and monetary union comes into force in July, West German Finance Minister Helmut Haussmann said here Wednesday.

He said that members of the Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Export Controls (COCOM), which oversees Western exports of sophisticated equipment to the Soviet bloc, had agreed to end export controls to East Germany on all but a "small number of products of highly sensitive technology".

The move would not lead to an unchecked flood of high technology to third countries, Mr. Haussmann said.

But East Germany would not become a COCOM member and would be able to continue exports of its own high technology without hindrance.

The minister also called for fewer products, particularly in the fields of telecommunications and machine tools, to be on COCOM's restricted list to aid Soviet integration into the world economy.

The list should concern only sensitive strategic and military technology, he said.

East German government spokesman had Wednesday called for Western countries to lift the ban quickly. "Everyone will understand that liberalisation is absolutely necessary in the short term," he said.

In exchange, East Germany was prepared to "tighten its controls" to ensure that any technology acquired from the West "is used exclusively for civilian purposes."

SAN FRANCISCO, CA (MAY 23) - Opera singers want to serenade him, but Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians want him to hear something else.

A school wants to stage a play for his benefit, but Armenians want to stage a show of a different kind; and businessmen want to bend his ear about possible business projects, while Jews have been pondering about protesting Soviet anti-Semitism.

Gorby fever has hit San Francisco, fad capital of the United States.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is due here June 3-4, after his superpower summit with George Bush in Washington and a six-hour stopover in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

The Soviet leader's visit here coincides with the already planned June 4-14 "Soviet Silicon Summit" in nearby Santa Clara with leading U.S. and Soviet businessmen scheduled to discuss improving U.S.-Soviet trade relations.

A sponsor of the Santa Clara meeting, Mark Muchnik, said he was hoping to persuade the Soviet president to be the guest speaker at a June 4 lunch.

If he succeeds, Mr. Muchnik believes he could get 2,000 businessmen to the lunch.

Joe Sidas is hoping to get about the same amount of people together -- but to protest the Soviet blockade of Lithuania. Mr. Sidas heads the Baltic Alliance, a group bringing together nearly 5,000 Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians who now live in the San Francisco Bay region.

Riho Martinson, who fled his native Estonia 46 years ago, is now vice mayor of Foster City. Mr. Martinson said he hoped sufficient demonstrators would show up to persuade Mr. Gorbachev that "there are immense benefits both to the Soviet Union and the independent Baltic states from granting them independence."

At Stanford University, which expects to host some of the Gorbachev visit although no final itinerary has yet been fixed, an official said, "We've heard from a group of opera singers who want to sing an aria to Gorbachev."

But local Armenians want to sing to a different tune. Local Armenian community organizations, which count about 20,000 members, say they intend to protest the continued Soviet military rule and alleged human rights violations in the Soviet Union's Nagorno-Karabagh province.

BAGHDAD (MAY 23) - The United States has urged Arab leaders scheduled to meet here next week to respect the right of Jews to settle in Israel, according to a memorandum published Wednesday.

The U.S. administration voiced hope that a special Arab summit set to start May 28 would not oppose the right of Soviet Jews to emigrate, press reports said here, citing a memorandum received by the Arab League.

It said Jews had a "legitimate" right to seek a new life in Israel proper and stressed that their ambitions should not be confused with those of Jewish settlers moving into the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The statement, which an Arab source said was delivered to League Secretary General Chedli Klibi by the U.S. charge d'affaires in Tunis, reaffirmed U.S. opposition to the creation of settlements in the Arab territories, occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The summit has been called for by the Palestine Liberation Organisation amid concern in the Arab world with massive Jewish emigration to Israel.

The parley will also deal with what Baghdad has said was a Western campaign against it in the aftermath of alleged arms shipments to Iraq and after President Saddam Hussein threatened to set half of Israel ablaze with chemical weapons in retaliation for any Israeli attack against his country.

Washington voiced its concern over the Iraqi remark and the country's possible use of chemical weapons.

A spokesman for the U.S. State Department in Washington said that messages of this kind were normally sent to Arab leaders ahead of summit. He did not elaborate.

JERUSALEM (MAY 23) - Thousands of Israelis celebrated the 1967 capture of Arab east Jerusalem under heavy security Wednesday as Palestinians hoisted black flags to mourn the killing Sunday of eight Palestinians by a lone Israeli gunman.

Some 3,000 police and army troops patrolled the streets as thousands of Israelis converged on the Western (Wailing) Wall to commemorate, in accordance with the Hebrew calendar, the seizure in June 1967 of Arab east Jerusalem. The Arab quarter had been administered by Jordan until Israel conquered it on June 7 during the Six-Day War.

Most Palestinians stayed off the streets, but some came out of their houses in the Arab quarters of the Old City to drape their doors with black flags and attach shreds of black fabric to their cars.

Two members of a right-wing Israeli extremist group, The Faithful of the Temple Mount, were attacked by stone-throwing Palestinians as they entered an Islamic holy site in the Old City escorted by 20 Israeli policemen.

The 50-member movement advocates the building of a temple near the mosques, which occupy the same site as the Western Wall, the last vestige of Solomon's temple and a place of great religious significance for Judaism.

Outraged by this "intrusion," a group of Arabs standing 200 meters (yards) away flung stones at the Jews.

"We were greeted by cries of Allah Akhbar (God is Great) and by stones thrown by Arabs near the mosques," said Dan Wittenberg, one of the two men. "Instead of firing on the Arabs, the police drove us away by force."

At the Gate of Flowers, Israeli troops fired tear gas grenades and rubber bullets to intimidate Palestinian youngsters who had earlier hurled stones at them.

Outside the headquarters of the Red Cross, Palestinian nationalist leader

Faysal Husseini, flanked by other Arab figures, observed a hunger strike to protest Sunday's killings in Rishon le Zion, near Tel Aviv.

Photos of the dead were plastered on the facade.

BOGOTA (MAY 23) - The new president who will emerge from next Sunday's election will need to act quickly to revive an economy that has been reeling from the effects of escalating attacks by powerful drug traffickers and leftist insurgents, experts said here.

Despite widespread public discontent over the state of the economy, the four leading candidates in Sunday's polls have been focusing on the spiraling violence and have not spelled out their economic programs.

Cesar Gaviria, 43, of the ruling Liberal Party, Alvaro Gomez Hurtado, 71, of the National Salvation Movement, Rodrigo Lloreda, 48, of the Conservative Social Party, and Antonio Navarro, 41, of the guerrilla group-turned-political party M-19, made vague references to the need to spur production in every sector.

The economy grew at a rate of three percent last year, substantially down from 4.2 percent in 1988 and five percent in 1987, experts noted.

Unemployment has jumped to close to 10 percent, and per capita income is still at a low 1,739 dollars per year.

Coffee, Colombia's main export, suffered a major blow last June with the collapse of the World Coffee Agreement. Although coffee exports went sharply up, crashing prices in the world markets lobbed off 200 million dollars in yearly income.

Falling crude prices have also contributed to a slump in the country's oil exports.

Government figures indicate that foreign investment, since the beginning of the year, has fallen 55.9 percent, while farm and cattle production have dropped.

Economists attribute these setbacks to the insecurity created by attacks by the leftist guerrilla groups, which has led many farmers and cattle ranchers to leave violence-hit areas.

Cattle ranchers in the northeastern province of Cordoba, for example, have recently threatened to auction off all their land if the government did not better protect them more from armed subversive groups.

The bloody war the government has been waging since August against the country's powerful drug cartels has also taken its toll on the economy.

Merchants and store owners in Bogota, Medellin, Cali and Cartagena have complained of slumping business in the wake of a spate of car-bombings and armed attacks allegedly ordered by the drug lords.

Nine car bombs exploded in the last few weeks in the four cities, leaving 122 dead and 500 injured.

Although the government has not released any figure on the cost of the combined military and police offensive against the drug traffickers, outgoing President Virgilio Barco recently admitted that he had to take funds out of needed social programs.

Three presidential candidates have been killed since August.

Mr. Barco however painted a brighter picture of the economy earlier this month, describing his policies as being on the right track and defending his decision in March to lift import tariffs on some basic consumer goods and food products.

Traditional exports such as coal and ferronickel have been growing at a healthy rate of 17 per cent or more in recent months, according to government statistics.

Foreign reserves in October of last year were put at 3.9 billion dollars, nearly the same amount the country paid for imports in one year.

BEIJING, May 23 (AFP) - Police have launched a dragnet for more than one million illegal residents in the Chinese capital to assure "social order" ahead of the Asian Games, the Beijing Daily said Wednesday.

Police and military checkpoints have reappeared on Beijing's streets at night in connection with the security upgrade, which observers noted also comes in the run-up to the anniversary of the June 4 massacre.

The paper, which is close to the ultra-conservative city government, said the hunt for an estimated 1.1 million illegal city residents began late Tuesday night.

Police detained hundreds of people living in Beijing without authorization during a four-hour door-to-door search, which focused on the city's northern neighborhoods, the paper said.

"Only a small number of the hundreds of residents checked held valid residence permits. They must regularize their situation or go back to their native provinces," the paper said.

Several illegal residents, some caught while sleeping, tried to flee but were apprehended, it said.

The purpose of the operation was to assure "social order" and "security" in the capital in the run-up to the Asian Games, scheduled here from September 22 to October 7.

But observers said the deployment of police and soldiers was closely linked to the approach of the first anniversary of the bloody June 4 crackdown by the army on pro-democracy protestors in Tiananman square.

Officials fear demonstrations marking the occasion.

Along with the searches, "the relevant departements are actively preparing adequate measures to strengthen administrative control over people who arrive from outside Beijing," the daily said.

Zhang Baifa, Beijing's deputy mayor, said last week that non-Beijing residents lacking official permission would not be allowed into the capital during the games and would be turned away, in an effort not to worsen traffic in the city.

One million Chinese usually visit Beijing each day.

The government has also announced a beefed-up security presence during the games in order to handle any incident, including demonstrations or attacks.

The nighttime security checkpoints, a common sight during the martial-law period in Beijing from May 20, 1989 to January 11, 1990, had been reduced in number in recent weeks.

They reappeared over the weekend, which marked the first anniversary of the imposition of martial law.

TEHERAN (MAY 23) - Iran's minister of economy and finance, Mohsen Nourbakhsh, Wednesday criticised Malaysia for failing to import the amount of Iranian goods stipulated in an agreement signed last year.

The letter of understanding forsees that each side exchanges goods worth 200 million dollars per year, Nourbakhsh was quoted by the Iranian News Agency (Irna) as saying.

Iran imported Malaysian goods worth 37 million dollars during the past year, while the volume of the latter's purchases from Iran was ''nearly zero'', he charged.

''A logical balance in Iran-Malaysia trade exchanges'' was necessary, he said at the openning session of the joint economic commission in Teheran.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Datuk Abu Hassan Omar aknowleged that there were ''some problems'' in trade relations and blamed a lack of ''adequate information'' in both states about their export potential, thus hindering the realisation of the 1989 accord, Irna reported.

Current talks, which focussed on Malaysia's possible purchase of Iranian crude oil in the future, could lead to a balance in trade relations, Omar said.

The two countries are to sign a second letter of understanding at the end of the current Teheran talks. The agency did not say when the committee's meetings would end.

ABIDJAN (MAY 23) - The Ivory Coast government Wednesday announced that unpopular planned cuts in civil service salaries "have been cancelled", a month after "suspending" the reductions.

The government added that it had on May 10 concluded negotiations with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and World Bank and that the "programme of stabilization and econmic recovery" will be financed by a cut in public expenditures and a crackdown on fraud.

But in a statement issued after a cabinet meeting, the government also made a "formal appeal" for "patience", saying that some demands made in recent weeks by demonstrators could not be met because of their "financial impact".

Austerity measures announced earlier this year, including the salary cuts and a "solidarity tax" on private sector income, were "suspended" in April after sparking months of violent demonstrations and strikes.

Further details of the government's new measures were not given, but the statement said they will be presented soon to the parliament so they can be implemented by June 1.

The Ivory Coast, long considered black Africa's economic success story, has been hard hit in recent years by low world market prices for its main cash crops of cocoa and coffee.

Delegations of army conscripts, former soldiers, police and firemen have met President Felix Houphouet-Boigny in the past two weeks to press grievances over job security, pay and working conditions.

BUCHAREST (MAY 23) - A return to communism would be "political suicide", Ion Iliescu said Wednesday after winning a landslide victory in Romania's presidential election.

The former senior communist party official told a press conference that there was no danger of a return to communism.

The uprising which finished off the Ceausescu dictatorship last December was "the most abrupt and revolutionary", he added.

Mr. Iliescu won an estimated 86 percent of Sunday's vote, a figure unheard of in the West, and was asked if this could prove an obstacle. "Obstacle or not it's a reality," he answered.

Opposition parties, in the last stages of the election campaign, were "detached from the reality of the country, did not know to make themselves understood and their violent language distanced voters," Mr. Iliescu said.

On opposition allegations of electoral fraud, he said foreign observers had not reported any cheating.

BEIJING (MAY 23) - Authorities in China's far-west Xinjiang region have rewarded 120 people for helping to quell Moslem riots last month, a Xinjiang newspaper received here Wednesday said.

Officials said the April 22 riots in Baren, south of Kashgar, between Moslem separatists and security forces left 22 people dead.

The 120 people were last Thursday given certificates, banners and various gifts during a meeting in Kashgar for their "outstanding courage" in helping to put down the riots, the May 15 edition of the Xinjiang Daily said.

The paper printed a picture of a soldier killed in the riots, which officially left six members of the Chinese security forces dead.

The region's communist party secretary, Song Hanliang, said in a speech at the meeting that the overall situation in Xinjiang was "excellent," but he warned of "persisting factors of instability."

The riots were blamed on Moslems trying to create a "Republic of Eastern Turkestan."

Some 60 percent of the 14.3 million people of Xinjiang are Moslems, the majority of them Uygurs of Turkic descent.

AMMAN (MAY 23) - Palestinian refugees opened fire at security forces outside a camp north of here on Wednesday, as hundreds of youths stoned the policemen injuring two of them, correspondents said.

The violence came hours after some 1,000 marchers set off from Hittin, 15 kilometers (nine miles) north of Amman, and headed for Ruseifa to protest Sunday's killing in Israel of eight Palestinians by a lone Israeli gunman.

Security forces, backed by anti-riot vehicles, had prevented them from approaching the village. Demonstrators, believed to be Moslem fundamentalists, Tuesday ransacked there three breweries, bars and restaurants serving alcohol.

After their failed bid to march on Ruseifa, refugees from Hittin demonstrated inside the compound, opened fire on security forces ringing the camp to prevent unrest and pelted them with stones, correspondents said.

The security forces, without orders to return fire, retaliated with tear gas grenades.

MP's from the Moslem Brotherhood meanwhile called for an end to the demonstrations that have shaken Jordan since Monday to protest anti-Arab violence in Israel, leaving a trail of blood and destruction.

In a statement the MP's expressed "regret that certain sick minds are trying to deform the healthy image of the country ... and to undermine its unity by provoking dissension."

The Brotherhood deputies accused the United States of being the "number one enemy of Arabs and Moslems" and urged Arabs to boycott U.S. goods and to close American bank accounts.

They urged Arab leaders meeting at a summit in Iraq next week to adopt a military-political-economic plan "to confront" Israel and to support Palestinian uprising.

Labor unions and pro-Palestinian groups earlier urged further protests.

Officials said two were killed and 25 wounded in demonstrations Monday and Tuesday here as well as in refugee camps near Amman and in the northern town of Ibrid. Independent sources have said 50 people were hurt in the confrontations between demonstrators and security forces.

CARACAS (MAY 23) - Rising world demand for crude oil this decade will outstrip OPEC's (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Counrties) production capacity, forcing its members to seek international financing to tap their unused reserves, Venezuela's Energy and Mine Minister said.

Celestino Armas said that, barring a world economic recession, demand for oil was expected to rise to 55 million barrels of crude a day (bpd) by 1995, and to 60 million bpd by the turn of the century.

Such demand would require OPEC's 13 members to increase production by one million bpd a year to 28 million bpd by 1995, and to 33 million bpd by the year 2000.

"OPEC could reach its production ceiling as soon as 1991 or 1992," Mr. Armas said on closing a conferece here on the future of the oil industry.

Rising world demand poses an "urgent challenge" to OPEC countries in seeking new untapped crude resources, requiring a massive investment of between 60 billion to 120 billion dollars over the present decade, he added.

He called for a concerted international effort to finance the venture, since OPEC countries, he stressed, lack sufficient funds of their own.

In Venezuela's case, Mr. Armas added, increased oil production must go hand in hand with a "better and more rational exploitation of our heavy and extra heavy crude."

Experts put Venezuela's oil reserves at one trillion barrels, of which only one fifth is deemed extractable with current methods.

Venezuela was planning to increase its present production level of 2.75 million bpd to 3.25 million bpd by 1993, and to 3.5 million bpd by 1995, with increasing proportions of heavier crude.

Mr. Armas said his government was developing a long-term national strategy to meet these production quotas and to harmonize rising foreign demand with the needed investment in new refineries to process the heavier crude.

BUDAPEST (MAY 23) - Hungary's first coalition government in 43 years was sworn in on Wednesday after parliament voted to accept the administration's program and elected Jozsef Antall prime minister.

The vote was 218 to 126 with eight abstentions.

In presenting his government's program to parliament on Tuesday, Antall rejected shock therapy to revive his country's ailing economy.

Instead, he promised to create a market economy, expand social services, help businesses and reduce inflation, currently standing at 30 percent.

The government supported the program, but the opposition and banking circles criticised it as nothing more than a list of wishes that lacked any concept.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) - The Kremlin is prepared to hold a referendum on its planned reforms towards a regulated market economy and should step down if the vote goes against it, Soviet government officials said here Wednesday.

The government is "ready to hold an all-union referendum and start the reform only with the support of the public," First Deputy Prime Minister Leonid Abalkin, the architect of the reform programme, told a news conference.

Soviet officials also outlined the price of the planned reforms, with unemployment rising to possibly "tens of millions," a falling standard of living, and steep price rises.

The surprise announcement was apparently prompted by fears of social upheaval unless a consensus was reached over the proposed reforms, which were announced at the beginning of the year but have been repeatedly reconsidered and postponed.

"The reform would have been simpler if it had been done two or three years ago. But if we wait longer, we will have to pay an even greater price," Mr. Abalkin said.

He said unemployment could run to "tens of millions," although First Deputy Prime Minister Yuri Maslyukov told the news conference that the number of jobless was likely to increase "three or fourfold," adding that the current unemployment level was two million.

He said the reforms would see the Soviet standard of living fall by five to six per cent in the next two years, but after that "people will notice that the situation is improving."

Asked what the government would do if the referendum failed to go through,

Mr. Maslyukov, head of the Gosplan central planning agency, replied, "In my opinion, the government should resign."

The news conference came a day after the presidential council, chaired by President Mikhail Gorbachev, agreed the essentials of an economic reform programme to introduce a "controlled market economy".

The program, described Wednesday by Mr. Gorbachev as "a turning point equal to the October revolution" that brought the Bolsheviks to power in 1917, is to be outlined in parliament by Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov at a special debate on Thursday and Friday. The date of the referendum will also be discussed then.

They also urged the international community and human rights groups to "denounce Israeli crimes and work for an end to occupation."

NEW DELHI (MAY 23) - Agents of India's Central Bureau of Investigation raided the home Wednesday of a former Indian Airlines manager in connection with India's controversial 1986 purchase of a fleet of A-320 Airbus planes.

The Press Trust of India (PTI) said the agents staged simultaneous surprise raid on the home of Raghunath Prasad, the former managing director of Indian Airlines, and on the business premises of his two sons and an unnamed Delhi businessman.

The new Indian government ordered a probe into the 1.8 billion dollar deal made by the government of then prime minister Rajiv Gandhi after an A-320 crashed in the city of Bangalore on February 14, killing 90 people in one of India's worst civil aviation disasters.

Mr. Prasad was one of several people, including a former Indian civil aviation secretary, ordered investigated by the government of Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh in March in connection with the purchase of 31 Airbus A-320's. PTI said that one of Mr. Prasad's sons dealt in aircraft engines and spare parts.

The preliminary enquiry report implicated several top officials of the French-based European consortium, Airbus Industrie, without naming them.

PTI gave no information on the results of the raids, other than to say that they marked the opening of "phase two" of the investigation, the first being the filing of a first information report, the necessary first step in any prosecution of a legal case in India.

Indian Airlines' fleet of 14 Airbus A-320's remains grounded after the February crash, pending the completion of an official investigation.

The others ordered on option have yet to be delivered.

Indian press reports, which observers say were instrumental in the government ordering the probe, had alleged that Mr. Gandhi when prime minister had hastily cancelled an almost concluded deal with Boeing in favor of Airbus.

The reports implied that established government purchase procedures had been brushed aside.

NEW DELHI (MAY 23) - The Swedish government on Wednesday handed over to India secret documents related to a 1.3 billion dollar gun deal that allegedly involved bribes to politicians in former premier Rajiv Gandhi's government.

Swedish Ambassador to India Per Kettis handed over the secret portions of the Swedish National Audit Bureau (NAB) report widely believed to contain names and bank accounts of Indians who received payoffs to clinch the 1986 contract with the Bofors firms.

"I hope the Indian government will not reveal it," Mr. Kettis told reporters who contacted him by telephone.

The report was given to officials of the external affairs ministry.

The main part of the NAB report was made public in 1987 amid a political storm that accused several key defence ministry officials and politicians in the former Gandhi administration of receiving 60 million dollars in bribes.

Indian politicians said the unpublished report could reveal secrets regarding the kickbacks and launched a campaign for its release, though Stockholm until now had refused to hand it over to India.

New Delhi earlier this month asked Switzerland to seal six secret bank accounts on grounds that their owners had perpetrated a crime in India by receiving bribes in the 155mm howitzer deal with the Swedish firm.

The owners of the banks accounts are widely believed to be Indians.

LUSAKA (MAY 23) - Angry students at the University of Zambia firebombed the dormitory room of the head of the campus branch of the ruling United National Independence Party, sources said Wednesday.

Unip youth League Chairman Lackson Simukonda escaped injury in the incident Tuesday night.

''The chairman ran away from his room a few minutes before his room was attacked. He is at large,'' said a student who requested anonymity.

Simukonda is reported to have told the press during a student protest last Monday at the Zairean embassy that students supported Unip. But students who stage a demonstration following local press reports that 150 students at Lubumbashi University in Zaire were massacred denounced the sole Zambian party.

AMMAN (MAY 23) - A young man was killed and four other people wounded Wednesday in clashes between demonstrators and security forces in a Palestinian refugee camp north of here, police said, on the third day of violence to rock Jordan this week.

Mohammad al-Radawin, 22, was hit by a bullet fired from a Soviet-made Kalashnikov rifle, said a police spokesman inside the Hittin compound, 15 kilometers (nine miles) north of here.

The officer stressed that no such weapon was used by the Jordanian security forces.

Mr. Radwin died on his way to hospital.

Nagiha Abu Laban, a 45-year-old resident of a nearby hill, was hurt by a stray bullet while three police officers were also wounded, including one who was attacked a dagger-wielding demonstrator.

Shortly after the bloodshed witnesses said that a government official arrived at Hittin along with 11 MPs for talks with camp residents, correspondents said.

The arrival of Suleiman Arar, the president of the chamber of deputies, was soon followed by a tapering of hostilities, they added.

Demonstrators at the camp had earlier opened fire at security forces stationed outside the compound as hundreds of youths pelted them with stones prompting police to retaliate with tear gas grenades, correspondents said.

Violent demonstrations broke out in Amman, the northern town of Ibrid and refugee camps near the Jordanian capital Monday to protest the killings in Israel Sunday of eight Palestinian workers by a lone Israeli gunman.

Officials have said that two people were killed and 25 others wounded Monday and Tuesday in confrontations between security forces and demonstrators while independent sources put the number of injured at 50.

BEIJING (MAY 23) - An official Chinese report said Wednesday that 1,362 foreign tourists visited Tibet from January to May, nearly 26 percent more than the same period last year.

The tourists, including Americans, French, British, West Germans and Japanese, went to the remote Himalayan region as part of 164 travel groups, according to the economic daily Jingjicanku.

Martial law in the Tibetan capital Lhasa was lifted May 1, but foreigners are still required to obtain official authorization to visit the region, ostensibly because of the shortage of accomodations.

Martial law was imposed in Lhasa on March 8 last year following three days of bloody anti-Chinese riots. Since then, Tibet has been virtually closed to foreign reporters and diplomats.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) - The United States has tentatively decided to increase and upgrade its military aid to rebels battling the Soviet-backed government in Angola, despite superpower efforts to promote a political settlement to the conflict, congressional sources said Wednesday.

The sources said the State Department was proposing a 10-million dollar emergency aid package to the rebel National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) that would include for the first time anti-aircraft missiles capable of shooting down high-flying bombers and other aircraft.

Washington has been providing an estimated 50 million dollars in annual military aid to UNITA, but rebel representatives here said UNITA exhausted this year's allotment of supplies battling a government offensive against rebel strongholds in southern Angola.

The most sophisticated weapons provided by Washington to UNITA to date have been the shoulder-held Stinger anti-aircraft missile.

These have inflicted heavy losses on the government's Soviet-supplied helicopters and jet fighters, but have been ineffective against a new government strategy of high-altitude carpet bombing of insurgent-held areas, UNITA spokesman Jardo Muekalia said.

As a result, UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi asked U.S. Secretary of State James Baker at a meeting in Zaire in March to provide the rebels with Hawk missiles -- trailer-mounted weapons which can strike aircraft flying at altitudes of up to 16,000 meters (52,000 feet), the congressional sources said.

The Stinger has a maximum altitude of 3,200 meters (10,500 feet). "There's a quantum leap between what you can do with a Hawk compared to a Stinger," said one Pentagon expert.

The sources, who spoke to AFP on grounds they not be identified, said the State Department was expected to inform congressional intelligence committees next month of its final decision on the new covert aid package to UNITA.

"The State Department is arguing that the new aid is needed to make the Angolan Government serious about peace talks," said one staff member familiar with the administration's plans.

The proposal for the aid is already circulating in Congress and opposition leaders from the Democratic party have begun discussing whether to oppose or try to restrict the package, they said.

LIBREVILLE (MAY 23) - The French consul general in the southern Gabon city of Port Gentil and several other French nationals were taken hostage by anti-government protestors on Wednesday, informed sources said.

The consul general, Jean Duffau, and several French employees of an oil firm were being held by demonstrators who hoped to put pressure on France to force President Omar Bongo to step down, journalists contacted in Port Gentil said.

Demonstrators set fire to buildings in the Gabonese capital and in Port Gentil on Wednesday after the sudden death overnight of opposition leader Joseph Rendjambe (eds: correct).

In Libreville, some 600 demonstrators went on the rampage, burning down a hotel and a cinema, witnesses said.

Opposition sources, including fellow leaders of his moderate Gabonese Progress Party (PGP), alleged that Mr. Redjembe, found dead in a Libreville hotel, was assassinated.

ALBI, FRANCE (MAY 23) - Police Wednesday released a group of suspects held for questioning in connection with the desecration of a Jewish cemetery at Carpentras, southern France, two weeks ago, informed sources said.

Ten fans of "Satanic music" known as "Trash," seven of whom had profaned graves in a cemetery in the village of Lombers, in southwest France, in 1988, were detained early Wednesday.

People arrested at Albi, Cunac, Cagnac-les-mines, Toulouse and Carcassonne were in their twenties, sources added.

No official comment was available.

Police sources earlier said they were sceptical about the authenticity of claims of responsibility for the Carpentras incident which seemed to put the blame on Moslems.

The most recent, a statement from an unknown group calling itself Mohammed El Boukhima to a local newspaper, Le Dauphine Libere, ended with the words "the wise men of Islam" written in Arabic.

Several skinheads living in the Carpentras region had been held for questioning a few days after the desecration of the cemetery but were released when they produced alibis.

President Francois Mitterrand attended a massive public demonstration in Paris after the attack at Carpentras, where more than 30 graves were vandalised and the body of an elderly man dug up and impaled on a parasol.

KINSHASA, May 23 (AFP) - The governor of Zaire's Shaba province Wednesday denied "inaccurate reports of events in Lubumbashi", while a Zairean opposition party said that 150 students at the university there had been massacred by security forces overnight on May 11.

The governor, Koyagialo Ngbabe Te Gerengbo, in a detailed statement said that there had been clashes between students in favour of and against a march in solidarity with students in the capital who had been expelled for violence against members of parliament.

The number of victims was 14 wounded, "ten slightly and four seriously".

The governor said the seriously injured were rushed to hospital, where one of them died on Saturday.

In the Congolese capital, Brazzaville, however, an unrecognized Zairean opposition party, the Kongolese Workers' Party (POK), claimed Wednesday that 150 students were massacred by special intervention units formed by President Mobutu Sese Seko.

The POK also said, without citing its sources, that several other students had recently been arrested in Kinshasa and were held in the Binza and Makala jails. It added that two of them had been found dead in the grounds of Binza prison.

The POK statement, signed by its information chief, Nansi Mwanabi, followed a report in the Belgian Le Soir daily Tuesday, which quoted informed sources as saying that about 50 students had been killed.

Last weekend, Belgian Foreign Minister Mark Eyskens expressed "concern" at reports of the campus incidents and expressed "hopes" that the new Zairean government would give "priority attention" to human rights. Marshal Mobutu on April 24 announced reforms opening the way to a multiparty system.

Lubumbashi, 1,500 kilometres (930 miles) southeast of the capital, is the capital of Shaba, which tried to secede as would-be independent Katanga after independence was granted to the former Belgian Congo in 1960. Kinshasa is just across the Zaire river from Brazzaville.

The Zairean authorities have expressed "surprise and indignation" at reports of the killings.

In Brussels Wednesday, demonstrators ransacked the offices of the official Zairean AZAP news agency, saying they wanted details of the incidents in Shaba. They scattered paper and smashed furniture, throwing some of it out of the window, RTL-TVI television reported. Nobody was hurt.

MONTEVIDEO, (MAY 23) - China's President Yang Shangkun told the General Assembly here Wednesday his countrymen "live and work in peace," moments after a group of legislators walked out to protest what they termed human rights abuses in China.

The incident came hours after the local branch of Amnesty International, which monitors human rights abuses worldwide, released documents denouncing China's violation of "fundamental human rights."

Gen. Yang told the General Assembly that "one billion Chinese live and work in peace."

He paid tribute to what he called the "political opening" that has been evolving in China for the last 11 years.

"China and Latin America both belong to the Third World and have suffered similar experiences in the past and now face the common task of safeguarding peace and economic development," he said in his message.

Amnesty International charged that China continues to arbitrarily detain and incarcerate citizens without formal charges. It said the prisoners are held incommunicado, mistreated, tortured and sometimes illegally executed.

The Uruguayan legislators who staged the walkout belonged to the liberal Colorado Party, now the main opposition party, but the ruling party under the former government that restored diplomatic ties with Beijing last March.

The protest in parliament came after Amnesty International denounced the military crackdown last June in Beijing's Tiananmen Square, saying it showed "the Chinese Government's disinterest in the principles of human rights."

Deputy Luis Hierro Lopez, who helped initiate efforts to restore diplomatic ties, sent a letter to the legislature saying that he reserved the right to leave the chamber to "protest the recent trampling of human rights" in China.

Gen. Yang came to Uruguay from Brazil, part of an unprecedented tour of Latin America by a Chinese head of state. The trip, begun in Mexico, was to include Argentina and Chile.

China is Uruguay's fourth biggest trading partner. Uruguay is China's principal supplier of wool.

Gen. Yang on Thursday was to visit a wool exporting establishment and then go to a ranch for a barbecue and horseshow.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) - Czechoslovak Finance Minister Vaclav Klaus accused the 24 industrialized nations which have pledged to help finance economic reform in Eastern Europe with failing to properly coordinate their actions.

Mr. Klaus told a symposium here that his country was faced with a multitude of Western economic missions which frequently duplicated each other's work.

U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger also suggested that the industrialized nations may have got things wrong and suggested that instead of providing loans they should make grants to the Eastern European nations.

"Loans," he said, "would just add to the great debt burden that Eastern Europe already has."

But Michel Camdessus, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, said he doubted that the industrialized countries had sufficient funds available to take up Mr. Eagleburger's suggestion.

And World Bank President Barber Conable added: "I hope Mr. Eagleburger will take the lead."

BEIJING (MAY 24) - Chinese artists and writers were told Wednesday to oppose harmful Western thinking, which was blamed for last year's pro-democracy movement.

The communist party People's Daily said "it is imperative to unequivocally struggle against bourgeois liberalization" in a commentary printed on the 48th anniversary of talks on the role of art given by Mao Zedong.

If the definition of the catchphrase for unwanted Western ideas, given by party General Secretary Jiang Zemin on Tuesday, is followed, intellectuals must act entirely for the socialist cause.

Mr. Jiang, speaking to Chinese musicians, said that bourgeois liberalization meant everything that socialism and the party were against.

The paper said that Mao's talks, which demanded that artists and writers first and foremost serve the people, "are still the guiding principle for us."

It said that except for "a handful of people," most artists and writers were still loyal to the party and "loved socialism."

"The party and the government have always trusted writers and artists," and they will forgive those who had "temporarily been involved in wrong trends" during last year's "political disturbance."

"They should be distinguished from that handful of people who stubbornly persist in the stand of bourgeois liberalization.

"It is also necessary to enthusiastically help those who cannot quickly correct their wrong political concepts and patiently wait for them to do so."

The China Daily said Tuesday that the government had decided to give favorable treatment to intellectuals who had made "outstanding contributions" towards the modernization of the country.

Some 2,700 people had been chosen during the last six years, it added, saying that as reward they were given higher salaries, better housing, special medical care and cheaper transportation.

Since the communists came to power in 1949, intellectuals have been the target of numerous political campaigns during which they were persecuted, imprisoned and sometimes killed.

LIBREVILLE (MAY 24) - The Gabonese government called out the army and imposed a nationwide curfew late Wednesday following a day of anti-government rioting and the seizure of the French consul general in the southern city of Port Gentil.

Minister of Territorial Administration Antoine Mboumbou Miyakou appeared on state television to announce that a nationwide curfew had been imposed as of 8:30 p.m. (1930 GMT). The curfew is to run until 6:00 a.m. (0500 GMT) Thursday.

He also said the army had been called out to help maintain law and order following rioting sparked off by the death of opposition leader Joseph Rendjambe, who was found dead at a hotel here overnight.

French sources said the consul general, Jean Duffau, and two or three French employees of the oil company Elf Gabon had been seized by relatives of Mr. Rendjambe, a native of Port Gentil.

Journalists contacted in Port Gentil said the relatives of Mr. Rendjambe had taken the action to put pressure on France to force Gabonese President Omar Bongo to step down.

The announcement of Mr. Rendjambe's death sparked off riots in the Gabonese capital as some 600 demonstrators went on the rampage, burning down a hotel and a cinema.

Demonstrators later distributed pamphlets here alleging that Mr. Bongo was behind the death of Mr. Rendjambe and calling for a strike. The tracts called on "workers, students and Gabonese officials" not to go to work on Thursday.

They charged that Mr. Rendjambe "was odiously assassinated by Bongo for having defended the interests of the Gabonese people."

Demonstrators set fire to official buildings in Port Gentil, the economic capital accessible only by sea and air. Diplomats said that the presidential residence and French consulate were among the buildings torched.

Sources here were unable to say where the French diplomat seized in Port Gentil was being held. But a French source said his abductors had allowed him to telephone the authorities and that he was in good health.

Some opposition sources, including fellow leaders of his moderate Gabonese Progress Party (PGP), alleged that Mr. Rendjambe was assassinated.

MEXICO CITY (MAY 23) EFE - Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari has accepted a Senate proposal to seek a free trade agreement with the United States in a bid to attract foreign investment to the heavily-indebted nation.

The Senate report Tuesday urged Salinas to pursue the agreement on the grounds that other countries would then invest in Mexico, +in order to gain access to the U.S. market+.

Salinas said that he supported, +free trading with Canada and the United States, but not a common market like the one in Europe today, which would be incompatible with our sovereignty+.

Trade agreement talks started a year ago by Mexico City and Washington could go on for another year before a deal is struck, observers said.

About 70 per cent of Mexico's trade is with the United States, and 15 per cent with the European Community, while the remaining American countries and the Middle East account for only five per cent each.

SANTO DOMINGO (MAY 23) - Dominican presidential candidates have agreed to a recount in last week's elections following allegations of fraud by leftist candidate Juan Bosch.

Bosch's Dominican Liberation party (PLD) agreed Tuesday to the recount proposed by former U.S. President Jimmy Carter who observed last Wednesday's presidential elections in which incumbent President Joaquin Balaguer is believed to have won.

Bosch claims that Balaguer's ruling Social Christian Reformist Party (PRSC) spent dlrs 2 million in buying some 300,000 ballot papers.

The PLD has said it will accept the outcome of the recount, which the the Central Electoral Council (JCE) is expected to begin early Wednesday.

According to results issued Monday by the JCE, Balaguer was leading Bosch by 667.039 votes to 645,069 with returns from only 18 polling stations still to come in.

Bosch, who was tipped by opinion polls to win the presidential race, was the only candidate to dispute the election results.

Brasilia (MAY 23) EFE - Brazil's creditors are willing to exchange holdings of the country's massive foreign debt for shares in state companies to be sold off in a privatization scheme due to come into effect next month, the daily O Estado de Sao Paulo said Wednesday.

The paper said Britain's Midland Bank was planning to create, along with other lending organizations, a fund of dlrs 1.5 billion in debt titles which could be exchanged for shares in Brazilian companies.

The bank's president in Brazil, Nicholas Reade, told the paper that Japan's Bank of Tokyo and the U.S. +Chase Manhattan Bank+ had said they were willing to participate in the project.

+We are still in the phase of preparing the documents and the agreements,+ said Reade, adding that these three banks would provide 30 per cent of the titles in the fund and that the remainder would be put up by other lending organizations.

Brazil is the largest debtor in the developing world, owing a crippling dlrs 116 billion.

Under an economic recovery scheme drawn up by center-right President Fernando Collor de Mello, a string of state-owned companies are to be offered up on sale. Foreign companies will be allowed to purchase up to 40 per cent of the firms' capital.

Midland Bank spokeswoman in London, Carol Frazer, told the daily that the British bank was following the privatization scheme carefully and was +very interested+ in taking part.

The first six companies to be privatized under the scheme, due to start June 15, will be four iron and steel corporations, a huge petrochemical company and a railway supplies firm.

In a related event, local press reported Wednesday that the government made dlrs 13 million over the weekend from a sale of over 4,000 official vehicles.

The sale was part of Collor de Mello's massive austerity plan implemented in a bid to pull the country's crippled economy to its feet.-EFE

Madrid (MAY 23) EFE - Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez Wednesday promised to support from within the European Community Greece's efforts to revive its weakened economy, after a meeting with his Greek counterpart Constantine Mitsotakis.

"I don't want to be a spokesman for the commission but I can say that we will support reforms and austerity efforts so that Greece can have the same opportunities as the rest of the community countries," Gonzalez said.

Officials said Mitsotakis outlined to Gonzalez economic reforms

MEXICO CITY (MAY 23) EFE - The Mexican government is to prohibit the hunting and selling of sea turtles starting next week, officials said Wednesday, marking a victory for ecology campaigners who have been warning that the species could be wiped out.

The ban on the hunting and selling of the turtles, whose meat and eggs are prized in some countries as a delicacy, will go into effect May 28.

Licenses have been granted in the past to fishing companies on Mexico's Pacific coast, allowing up to 23,000 marine turtles to be captured over the last few years.

However, following an intensive 12-month campaign by international ecology movements and the so-called "100 Group", made of up of Latin American writers and media personalities, fishing authorities in Mexico agreed to put an end to the licenses.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari's government received more than 70,000 letters calling for a ban on turtle fishing, while U.S. authorities threatened to stop importing Mexican seafood unless the hunting ended.

Japan is the world's largest consumer of turtle products and was where most of Mexico's turtle exports were sent.

CARACAS (MAY 23) EFE - Dozens of Venezuelan students Wednesday burned tires and attacked private businesses in protest against expected fuel and transport price rises, 15 months after similar price hikes sparked riots in which hundreds of people were killed.

President Carlos Andres Perez has recently said fuel and transport prices will soon be increased though no date has yet been set.

Price rises implemented in February last year as part of an International Monetary Fund-approved austerity package triggered riots throughout the country.

Some 300 people were killed when troops moved in to crush the protests, according to official figures.

Trade unions and opposition parties have warned that new increases may lead to a fresh outbreak of violence.

University students were set to march through the streets of the capital later Wednesday.

BOGOTA (MAY 23) EFE - Leftist Colombian guerrillas Wednesday blew up a section of the country's main oil pipeline in their latest attack on the facility, Army spokesmen said.

They blamed the blast on the National Liberation Army (ELN), which has dynamited the Cano Limon-Covenas pipeline some 118 times since 1986.

The latest attack destroyed a section of pipeline between Samore and Cubara in the region of Arauca near Colombia's border with Venezuela, 400 km northeast of Bogota.

The state-owned ECOPETROL company confirmed that it was forced to suspend the pumping of crude oil in the country's main oilfields at Cravo Norte because of the damage.

The last ELN attack on the pipeline was on May 12. The explosion resulted in 14,200 barrels of crude oil spilling into the 40,000-hectare Zapatosa Swamp, the most important natural lagoon in Colombia and one of the biggest in Latin America, forcing the authorities to declare a state of "ecological emergency."

The ELN, led by a Spanish ex-priest, targets the Cano Limon-Covenas pipeline to prevent what it sees as the theft and exploitation of Colombian resources by multinational companies.

The 4-year-old campaign has cost Colombia over dlrs 321 million in lost export earnings, economists have estimated.

The ELN is the only major Colombian guerilla group to turn down the offer of peace talks with the government of President Virgilio Barco.

SANTO DOMINGO (MAY 23) EFE - Three supporters of rival Dominican election hopefuls Joaquin Balaguer and Juan Bosch were killed Wednesday in separate incidents during victory celebrations held by both candidates' parties, police said.

Two activists belonging to Bosch's leftist Dominican Liberation Party (PLD) were shot dead in the northern town of Nagua.

Police said two members of incumbent President Balaguer's Social Christian Reformist Party (PRSC) had been arrested in connection with the crime.

Earlier, a PRSC activist in another northern town, Moca, was stabbed to death by suspected PLD supporters.

The murders follow an agreement reached between the two candidates for a recount of last week's ballot following allegations of fraud by Bosch.

Bosch agreed Tuesday to the recount proposed by former U.S. President Jimmy Carter who observed last Wednesday's presidential elections that Balaguer is believed to have won.

Bosch claims that the PRSC spent dlrs 2 million in buying some 300,000 ballot papers.

Meanwhile the radio and television network Rahintel called on the Central Electoral Council (JCE) to carry out the recount as soon as possible.

"The country hopes that the recount and the verification of the electoral data is completed as quickly as possible so we can end the process with out further worries and uncertainties," the network broadcast.

The PLD has said it will accept the outcome of the recount, which the JCE was to begin Wednesday.

According to results issued Monday by the JCE, Balaguer was leading Bosch by 667,039 votes to 645,069 with returns from only 18 polling stations still to come in.

Bosch, who was tipped by opinion polls to win the presidential race, was the only candidate to dispute the election results.

BRASILIA (MAY 23) EFE - Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello Wednesday claimed his severe economic policies were proving to be successful, and had not met with the "catastrophic" consequences which many critics had predicted.

Speaking to journalists 68 days after he assumed office March 15, Brazil's youngest-ever president said the "success of the plan was palpable."

"Inflation has been reduced from 90 per cent to 3.29 per cent," while the initial goal was to cut the rate to 10 per cent in the first 100 days of office, Collor de Mello, 40, said.

His economic advisers in mid-April spoke of reducing inflation to zero per cent.

The president's most drastic anti-inflationary tactic was to freeze some dlrs 85 billion in personal and company bank accounts.

Collor de Mello said Brazil's federal reserves had been restored to a level of around dlrs seven billion.

Collor de Mello has also pledged to slash public spending, raise taxes and sell off state firms in his drive to get Brazil's massive but beleagured economy on its feet.

AGUA PRIETA, mexico (MAY 23) EFE - Mexican police said Wednesday they had seized 14 tonnes of marijuana and more than a tonne of cocaine from a disposable nappy warehouse near the U.S. border.

The seizure followed a shootout with two people who were guarding the warehouse in Agua Prieta, in the northwestern province of Sonora, in which there were no casualties.

The two guards fled in a van, police said.

The drugs were found in an underground cavern at the warehouse, which was hidden by a concrete covering that could be lifted by a hydraulic device, the police said.

Investigations leading to the haul sprang from the discovery last Friday of a tunnel linking Agua Prieta with Douglas, Arizona, that had been built for drug-smuggling.

GUATEMALA CITY (MAY 23) EFE - Leftist rebels killed eight soldiers and wounded four others when they ambushed a convoy in the northeast of the country, Guatemalan news media reported Wednesday.

There was no official confirmation of the attack which the reports said took place Monday in Huehuetenango provice, 267 km northeast of the capital.

In the nearby province of Quiche, the rebels dynamited several power pylons. The reports made no mention of guerrilla casualties in either case.

A rebel negotiating team is set to meet next week in Madrid with representatives of Guatemalan political parties to seek a political solution to the 30-year-old insurgency in which over 100,000 people have died.

MADRID (MAY 24) EFE - Fidel Castro has a sure-fire idea for encouraging more tourists to visit Cuba: let the lush Caribbean island serve as backdrop for the amorous adventures of Emmanuelle, the uninhibited heroine of a famous soft-core erotic film of the 1970s.

In this week's issue, the Spanish magazine Interviu said the Cuban leader made the comments to journalists at the inauguration of a new hotel at the Varadero beach resort, built and managed as a joint venture between the Cuban government and Spain's "Sol-Melia" hotel chain.

Castro said his partners had told him that Spanish state television last month broadcast the original 1978 Emmanuelle film, which was filmed at exotic locations in Thailand.

"I was told that after the picture was shown, bookings by Spaniards for holidays in Thailand shot up by 200 percent. Just imagine if that picture had been had been shot in Cuba, we'd have all of Spain here," Castro remarked.

MONTEVIDEO (MAY 23) EFE - Uruguayan workers Thursday were set to stage a general strike to protest the economic policies of the 3-month-old administration of President Alberto Lacalle.

The strike is the first general walkout convened since Lacalle took office March 1, and was called by the pro-communist Inter- Syndicate National Workers Convention (PIT-CNT).

Union leaders said the stoppage was called to demand +dignified salaries and pensions and more employment, and in defense of state firms+ threatened with privatization.

Workers are calling for a 30 per cent wage hike to keep pace with inflation over the last four months. The government has offered a raise of 15 per cent.

The PIT-CNT is also demanding general improvements in education, housing and health services, spokesmen said.

The 24-hour strike follows two partial stoppages called by the union, the largest in Uruguay, since Lacalle took office.

Lacalle, of the center-right Nacional or Blanco party, has raised sales and income taxes substantially in a bid to curb Uruguay's burgeoning fiscal deficit.

UNITED NATIONS (MAY 24) EFE - The United Nations Security Council called on Nicaraguan Contra rebels Wednesday to get on with the currently-stalled demobilization process and step up the weapons hand-over that marks the first step of their return to civilian life.

The council's resolution also encourages Nicaraguan President Violeta Chamorro to "persevere" with her government's efforts to implement the May 4 accord marking a formal end to the country's 9-year-old civil war.

Security Council President Klaus Tornudd of Finland declined to specify what exactly is meant when the Council urges Chamorro to take "necessary measures" to see that the demobilization accord is carried out.

In what was seen as an oblique reference to the United States, "other parties" to the conflict were urged to use their influence to guarantee that the rebels meet the accord's June 10 deadline for the demobilization of the entire rebel force.

After the leftist Sandinista government which the Contras had been fighting to overthrow handed over power to Chamorro in April, the rebels agreed to surrender their weapons and accept an amnesty.

Under that pact, the Contras began handing over their weapons to a UN peacekkeping force on schedule May 8 but the arms surrender was abruptly called off last Friday when the rebels demanded additional guarantees from the government.

The rebels have charged their ex-combattants were being beaten and harassed, but UN officials in Managua said the believe the postponement is a tactic aimed at pressuring the government to give the rebels dlrs 47 million of a still-undelivered U.S. aid package.

On Wednesday, talks between government and Contra negotiators aimed at getting the demobilization back on the rails were postponed for a second straight day because rebel commanders were having difficulty in getting to Managua.

A day earlier, UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar said that by suspending the demobilization the Contras had raised serious doubts as to their good faith.

Less than 10 per cent of the 15,640 rebels assembled in five cease-fire zones havehanded in their weapons to date, making the chances of their meeting the June 10 deadline look extremely remote, he said.

UNITED NATIONS (MAY 23) XINHUA - THE ARAB COUNTRIES WILL URGE THE UNITED NATIONS TO SEND AN OBSERVER MISSION TO THE ISRAELI OCCUPIED TERRITORIES AT FRIDAY'S U.N. SECURITY COUNCIL DEBATE IN GENEVA ON THE RECENT ISRAELI KILLING OF PALESTINIANS.

"WE NOW FEEL THAT WE CAN MOVE TO THE SUBSTANCE ISSUE THAT THE SECURITY COUNCIL MEETING ON FRIDAY SHOULD FOCUS AND THAT IS A U.N. MECHANISM TO OBSERVE AND MONITOR THE SITUATION IN THE OCCUPIED TERRITORIES," CLOVIS MAKSOUD, PERMANENT OBSERVER OF THE ARAB LEAGUE TO THE UNITED NATIONS, TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE HERE THIS AFTERNOON.

MAKSOUD, WHO IS LEAVING HERE FOR GENEVA TOMORROW, SAID SUCH A U.N. MECHANISM SHOULD BE "CONSTITUTING A PROTECTIVE MEASURE FOR THE PALESTINIAN POPULATION AND REINFORCING THE MANDATE PRESCRIBED BY THE U.N. CHARTER TO THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS TO SEE TO IT THAT THE GENEVA CONVENTION IS COMPLIED WITH BY THE OCCUPYING AUTHORITIES."

"THAT WILL BE OUR INPUT INTO THE DELIBERATIONS IN THE SECURITY COUNCIL," HE SAID, ADDING THAT A DRAFT RESOLUTION CONTAINING SUCH ELEMENTS IS BEING WORKED OUT BY THE ARAB COUNTRIES AND NON-ALIGNED COUNTRIES AND WILL BE SUBMITTED TO THE COUNCIL'S COMING MEETING.

THE SECURITY COUNCIL, AFTER ONE-DAY INTENSIVE CONSULTATIONS THAT LASTED UNTIL MIDNIGHT YESTERDAY, DECIDED TO HAVE A ONE-DAY MEETING IN GENEVA FRIDAY IN ORDER TO ENABLE LEADER OF THE PALESTINE LIBERATION ORGANIZATION YASSER ARAFAT TO ADDRESS THE MEETING.

MAKSOUD SAID THE ARAB COUNTRIES WILL PUSH FOR THE U.N. PRESENCE IN THE OCCUPIED WEST BANK AND GAZA STRIP SO AS TO SEE THAT THE GENEVA CONVENTION, WHICH CALLS FOR THE OCCUPYING POWER'S PROTECTION FOR CIVILIANS AT TIME OF WAR, "TO BE COMPLIED WITH IN ALL FORMS."

HE SAID THE U.N. PRESENCE HAS TO BE SUFFICIENT ENOUGH TO PROTECT THE PALESTINIAN POPULATION IN THE OCCUPIED TERRITORIES AND AT THE SAME TIME TO DETER ISRAEL'S MILITARY ACTIVITIES AGAINST AND SUPPRESSION OF THE PALESTINIANS.

ASKED WHAT THE ARAB STATES WILL SUGGEST FOR THE FORMAT OF THE U.N. PRESENCE, MAKSOUD SAID, "WHAT WE ARE ASKING FOR IS AN OBSERVER MISSION."

HOWEVER, HE REFUSED TO ELABORATE FURTHER, SAYING THAT "DETAILS OF THE U.N. MECHANISM HAVE TO BE WORKED OUT BY THE SECURITY COUNCIL."

THE ARAB DIPLOMAT EXPRESSED THE HOPE THAT THIS TIME THE UNITED STATES, THE LONG-TIME SUPPORTER OF ISRAEL, WILL "REJOIN THE INTERNATIONAL CONSENSUS ON THE ISSUE" OF SENDING U.N. OBSERVERS TO THE OCCUPIED TERRITORIES.

THE NEW YORK TIMES TODAY REPORTED THAT THE U.N. DECIDED TO HAVE THE SECURITY COUNCIL MEETING IN GENEVA TO AVOID WASHINGTON'S POLITICAL HAZARDS OF ALLOWING OR BARRING ARAFAT TO ENTER THE UNITED STATES TO ADDRESS THE COUNCIL.

IN RETURN, THE UNITED STATES AGREED NOT TO BLOCK A SECURITY COUNCIL RESOLUTION TO SEND A U.N. OBSERVER TEAM TO THE WEST BANK AND GAZA STRIP, THE REPORT SAID.

TOKYO (MAY 23) KYODO - THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY (MITI) IS CONSIDERING LOWERING THE 1991 TARGET FOR ITS STOCKPILE OF SO-CALLED "RARE METALS," SUCH AS NICKEL AND COBALT, AMID INCREASING POLITICAL STABILITY IN PRODUCER COUNTRIES AND RISING INTEREST RATES, A MITI SOURCE SAID WEDNESDAY.

THE RECENT POLITICAL DEVELOPMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA AND EAST EUROPEAN COUNTRIES, PRINCIPAL PRODUCERS OF THE METALS, HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT THE STABILITY NECESSARY FOR SECURING REGULAR SUPPLIES OF THE METALS.

IN ADDITION, SURGING DOMESTIC INTEREST RATES ARE INCREASING THE FINANCIAL BURDEN ON THE GOVERNMENT IN STORING THEM, THE SOURCE SAID.

THESE TWO FACTORS HAVE CAUSED MITI TO RECONSIDER THE CURRENT GOAL OF STOCKPILING AT LEAST 60 DAYS' SUPPLY OF THESE METALS BY THE END OF 1991, HE SAID.

THE FINAL DECISION WILL BE MADE AS EARLY AS THE SUMMER AFTER SEEKING ADVICE FROM THE MINING INDUSTRY COUNCIL, THE SOURCE SAID.

FREQUENT WILD FLUCTUATIONS IN PRICES OF THESE METALS, DUE TO THE FACT THAT MOST PRODUCING COUNTRIES ARE POLITICALLY UNSTABLE OR ECONOMICALLY UNRELIABLE, USED TO PLAGUE PRODUCERS OF STAINLESS STEEL, BATTERIES, HIGH-STRENGTH ALLOYS, AND OTHER CHEMICAL MAKERS.

THAT LED MITI TO DECIDE IN 1983 ON A 60-DAY SUPPLY STOCKPILE TARGET FOR SEVEN SUCH METALS -- NICKEL, COBALT, MANGANESE, MOLYBDENUM, VANADIUM, CHROMIUM, AND TUNGSTEN.

THE GOVERNMENT IS EXPECTED TO STOCK 70 PERCENT OF THE TOTAL, WHILE THE PRIVATE SECTOR IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE REMAINING 30 PERCENT.

TOKYO (MAY 23) KYODO - A TOTAL OF 54 KOREAN RESIDENTS IN JAPAN DECLARED ON WEDNESDAY THEY WOULD REFUSE TO BE FINGERPRINTED WHEN RENEWING THEIR REGISTRATION CARDS UNDER JAPAN'S ALIEN REGISTRATION LAW TO PROTEST THE IMPENDING VISIT OF SOUTH KOREAN PRESIDENT ROH TAE WOO.

THE PROTESTERS FROM TOKYO AND NEIGHBORING AREAS MADE THE DECLARATION IN A MEETING AIMED AT PROTESTING AGAINST ROH'S VISIT TO JAPAN BEGINNING THURSDAY.

THEY SAID IN THE DECLARATION THAT ROH'S VISIT AND A RECENT ACCORD BETWEEN JAPAN AND SOUTH KOREA HAVE NO RELEVANCE IN THE STRUGGLE OF KOREAN

RESIDENTS IN JAPAN TO HAVE THE ALIEN REGISTRATION LAW AND ITS FINGERPRINTING REQUIREMENT SCRAPPED.

JAPANESE FOREIGN MINISTER TARO NAKAYAMA AND HIS SOUTH KOREAN COUNTERPART CHOI HO JOONG AGREED AT A MEETING IN SEOUL ON APRIL 30 TO ELIMINATE THE CONTROVERSIAL FINGERPRINTING REQUIREMENT FOR LEGALLY DEFINED THIRD-GENERATION KOREAN RESIDENTS AND GRANT THEM THE AUTOMATIC RIGHT OF PERMANENT RESIDENCE IN JAPAN.

THE DECLARATION SAID ROH IS NOT QUALIFIED TO HAVE NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE JAPANESE GOVERNMENT TO IMPROVE THE RIGHTS OF KOREAN RESIDENTS IN JAPAN AS SOUTH KOREA ALSO MAINTAINS A SIMILAR FINGERPRINTING SYSTEM. UNDER THE REVISED LAW ENACTED IN SEPTEMBER 1988, FIGERPRINTING IS REQUIRED ONLY ONCE WHEN SOUTH KOREAN RESIDENTS IN JAPAN ARE 16 YEARS OLD. THEY MUST RENEW THEIR REGISTRATION IDENTITY CARD EVERY FIVE YEARS.

MEANWHILE, ABOUT 150 JAPANESE AND SOUTH KOREAN RESIDENTS HELD A MEETING TO DISCUSS JAPAN'S AMENDED IMMIGRATION AND REFUGEE LAW TO BE EFFECTIVE FROM JUNE 1.

THE MEETING, ORGANIZED BY ABOUT 20 SCHOLARS AND LAWYERS, PROTESTED THE AMENDMENT OF THE IMMIGRATION LAW WHICH THE ORGANIZERS SAID WILL PRODUCE JOB DISCRIMINATION AGAINST SOUTH KOREAN RESIDENTS IN JAPAN.

THE LAW PROVIDES FOR STIFFER PENALTIES AGAINST UNSKILLED FOREIGN WORKERS AND THEIR EMPLOYERS.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (MAY 23) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT reports that April durable goods fell 4.1% which was a steeper decline than most analysts had expected. Economists expected today's announcement to show that durable goods orders declined by between 2% and 2.5% for the month of April, and felt the decline would not be large enough to be significant.

The Nikkei adds 238 points. ... Gold drops $12.85. ... A bill allowing the seven BELL regionals to design, manufacture and sell home telephones was approved by a Senate panel.

CHRYSLER CORP. announces that it will keep three military electronics subsidiaries that it put up for sale in December. ... PINNACLE WEST rejected PACIFICORP's $1.82 billion takeover offer as well as SALT RIVER PROJECT's $500 million bid for certain assets.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN and TREASURY SECRETARY NICHOLAS BRADY are scheduled to testify today before the Senate Banking Committee hearing on the RESOLUTION TRUST CORP. ... TIMOTHY RYAN, Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, holds his first press conference today at 2 p.m. EDT.

FROM THE BULLS:

"The market could have gotten slam-dunked," says ALFRED GOLDMAN of A.G. EDWARDS INC., "But it didn't. It seems the sell-off brought in more buyers." Goldman feels that cash still on the sidelines could propel this rally into the 2900 to 2950 range. He points out that, "the majority of investors missed this rally because the first two weeks of advance were very sneaky." ("Investor's Daily", 5/23)

"This is an incredible run we're on," says RALPH BLOCH, senior vice president and chief market analyst at RAYMOND, JAMES & ASSOCIATES. He explains yesterday's mid-day decline "was nothing more than some profit taking exacerbated by sell programs. I don't think it changes the direction of the market. A lot of institutions haven't spent money [yet]. We could run up another 100 points before it concludes." (UPI, 5/22)

JAMES AWAD of BMI CAPITAL MANAGEMENT says program trading was responsible for much of the market's movement yesterday. "I think you had your first attempt at some serious profit taking, but today was really distorted by program trading. It came in and moved the market both ways."

Awad is bullish on this rally, saying it should move the average stock 30% to 40% higher before it concludes. "You've had a very important change in the complexion and tone of market. You're getting a tremendous expansion in the breadth of the market which is very healthy and tells me this market is for real." (CNBC's "Business View", 5/22)

FROM THE BEARS:

"You've got a great number of analysts and investors turning bullish because the momentum of the market is up," says DAVID BOSTIAN, JR., chief investment strategist for JESUP & LAMONT.

"But what I found most significant was that bonds were up strongly while the actual behavior of stocks was nowhere near as strong, which leads me to believe that the markets are in the process of discounting the increasing prospect of recession." He adds, "We're probably much closer to the beginning of a downward correction." (NYT, 5/23)

"There has been quite an unexpected strong move in the Dow Jones Industrial Average, but we continue to be quite cautious about the rest of the year," says STEVEN LEUTHOLD, chairman of the LEUTHOLD GROUP in Minneapolis.

"So we have 35% of our assets in stocks, and the rest in fixed-income investments. That's pretty conservative for us." In explaining his bearishness, Mr. Leuthold says, "We do a valuation appraisal of the market and look at 145 factors in five categories. Two categories now are negative - economic and fundamental conditions -, one is positive - sentiment - and two are neutral - technical and supply/demand conditions." ("USA Today", 5/23)

STOCK MARKET:

TRUDE LATIMER, a vice president at JOSEPHTHAL & CO., was impressed with the market's performance yesterday. "The market has shown amazing resilience. It has resisted any kind of selling pressure." She thinks many investors are betting that short-term interest rates will remain stable, and that the next move in rates will be down. (Reuters, 5/22)

"There's still a lot of uncertainty" in the market, says JEFFREY LINDSEY, market strategist at STRATEGIC PORTFOLIO MANAGEMENT. "The run-up in the market is not overly enthusiastic." ("USA Today", 5/23)

Program trading will increase in overseas markets as portfolio managers globalize their stock holdings, says PETER GRENNAN, director of stock index futures at SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. Because institutions buy and sell such large blocks, "they almost have to use stock index futures to facilitate the buying and selling ... and this encourages the use of index arbitrage and program trading." (CNN's "Business Day", 5/23)

"The programmers are back, " says JIM ANDREWS, first vice-president in charge of institutional trading at JANNEY MONTGOMERY SCOTT. "There are a lot of profits out there from the last two or three weeks. The euphoria just got to be too strong and caused the markets to hit the skids" in mid-day trading. However, Andrews feels that the market is still on its way up. "The sheer weight of mutual fund cash on the sidelines will continue this rally, " he explains. (UPI, 5/22)

"Nothing irritates a money manager more than sitting on cash in a rising market. That's excruciating pain for most of them," says RAYMOND DeVOE, market strategist at LEGG MASON WOOD WALKER, explaining why more investors seem to be taking part in the market as it ratchets higher. ("USA Today", 5/23)

STOCK TIPS:

KASLER, a builder of roads, bridges, and airports, moved to a new high yesterday and their earnings are expected to more than double this year. "On any dips to the 10 1/2 area or below I think it could be a very, very exciting purchase for investors with patience," says ANDREW ADDISON of the "Addison Report."

Short interest in PREMIER INDUSTRIAL, a distributor of electronic components, has been moving up with the stock. Addison says it would take ten days of average daily volume to cover the shorts and that should boost the stock. "Any close over 26 3/4 would launch an advance, in my opinion, up to the low 30's." (FNN's "World Business Report", 5/23)

Though wary of the stock market as a whole, STEVEN LEUTHOLD, chairman of the LEUTHOLD GROUP, is bullish on some stocks. He says that 28% of his stock assets are in the environmental stocks including WASTE MANAGEMENT, CHEMICAL WASTE MANAGEMENT, WHEELABRATOR TECHNOLOGIES, and NALCO.

He has another 15% in major electronic data processing companies. "They were in the doghouse as a group from 1983 to 1989 and now look as if they are starting to emerge as a market favorite. We ... think it's a sector to make a lot of money in." His favorite stocks in this sector include DIGITAL EQUIPMENT, IBM, HEWLETT-PACKARD and NCR. ("USA Today", 5/23)

"Waste is in. It's one of our few growth industries, " says ROBERT COLEMAN CEO of OXFORD ENERGY. "A tremendous amount of money and resources have to go into it to solve the problem," he says at an environmental conference sponsored by the American Stock Exchange. (FNN's "Business Tonight", 5/22)

SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON recommends stock in QMS INC., a Mobile, Ala.- based maker of printing systems. Their recently reported second- quarter earnings rose 154% from year-earlier levels, and this strength should continue as the company introduces new products. ("USA Today", 5/23)

Last year FIDELITY INVESTMENTS' "CAPITAL APPRECIATION" fund saw an 87% return, so when its manager, TOM SWEENEY, recommends stocks people tend to pay attention.

"I noticed that many utilities don't have enough capacity," says Sweeney. "I'm trying to look ahead and see what these utilities are going to be doing to cure the problem." He recommends two utilities: DQE and DELMARVA. He also sees a coming need for new oil tankers, and therefore likes OMI and OVERSEAS SHIPHOLDING GROUP. (FNN's "Business Tonight", 5/22)

"I'm not going to comment on the discussions that have or might have taken place" with the unions buying UAL, says SIR COLIN MARSHALL, chief executive of BRITISH AIRWAYS which was a partner in an unsuccessful effort to acquire the U.S. airline last year.

"I would never close the door to any prospects for beneficial investments ... If there is a serious approach to us, we would give it serious consideration." Unions purchasing UAL are still arranging financing. (CNN's "Business Morning", 5/23)

FEDERAL EXPRESS plunged 5 1/8 to 47 yesterday after opening an hour late. The company "had a shortfall in domestic revenue because it pushed prices up too aggressively," says MIKE WALKER of LEGG MASON WOOD WALKER in Baltimore.

Walker cut his earnings estimate for the fourth-quarter ending May 31 to 65 cents a share from 85 cents a share, but says he still believes it is an undervalued company. "FedEx is a stable, profitable business. This is no longer a cutthroat carry-it-at-any-cost market," says Walker.

DONALDSON LUFKIN & JENRETTE analyst PAUL SCHLESINGER cut his earnings estimate from $2.15 to $2 a share for fiscal 1990 and lists the stock as "unattractive." ("USA Today", 5/23)

APPLE COMPUTER INC. was up 1 7/8 to 41 3/8 on the news of MICROSOFT CORP.'s release of Windows 3.0. While the new product will make Apple's "innovation lead in the market diminished," according to GOLDMAN, SACHS & CO. analyst RICK SHERLUND, many still see the Apple line as superior.

NANCY MCSHARRY of INTERNATIONAL DATA CORP. says, "Any user that really needs high-end graphics processing is still going to go with a Macintosh right now." Analysts also believe that Microsoft will force Apple to be more competitive. ("Investor's Daily", 5/23)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (MAY 23) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

Uncertainty over the political dissent in Quebec will promote further weakness in the Canadian dollar, says JOHN HAZELTON of MANUFACTURERS HANOVER. "However ... I think possibly the 1.20 level in the Canadian dollar would be a very attractive level to come in and purchase."

Hazelton discounts speculation that the Japanese will abandon the Canadian bond market because of the push for Quebec separatism. (FNN's "World Business Report", 5/23)

FDIC chairman WILLIAM SEIDMAN says that reform in the banking insurance system is necessary. "There's no question that the taxpayer is taking too much risk, and that we have to find some ways to reduce that liability," says Seidman.

"We can do it by changing the insurance system, and I think we have to do that." One way of reducing that risk, which was offered by the outgoing chairman, is to make sure that banks have safely invested insured deposits. (FNN's "Business Tonight", 5/22)

Interest rates will ride a roller coaster over the next several months, predicts JERRY JASINOWSKI, president of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MANUFACTURERS.

"We anticipate a fall in rates in the summer, with a renewed rise emerging during the autumn and early winter." He believes the burdensome budget deficit and the foundering S & L bailout will be the two biggest factors contributing to higher rates. (Reuters, 5/22)

Volume in T-bond futures has jumped more than 21% this year at the Chicago Board of Trade. "When you have an economy that's risk- ridden, there's a genuine flight to quality," says JEFFREY PRIEST, who heads fixed-income trading for MILLER, TABAK, HIRSCH & CO. in New York. (WSJ, 5/23)

"There is a limit to how far the (bond) market can rally from here, " says DAVID D. HALE, senior economist at KEMPER FINANCIAL SERVICES INC. Uncertainty about the dollar and the budget deficit will hold the market down, according to Hale. He expects yields to remain between 8.5% and 9% through June, barring any radical news about the economy. ("Investor's Daily", 5/23)

THE ECONOMY:

"I can't get too excited over the [expected] decline" in durable goods, says STEPHEN SLIFER of SHEARSON LEHMAN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES. "We're coming off a big increase. The manufacturing sector remains about where it's been - flat to declining." (Reuters, 5/22)

Current budget talks underway could have a significant, positive impact on the economy, if they are successful, according to many economists. "A cut of $50 billion would bring down rates by a full percentage point," says LYLE GRAMLEY, chief economist for the MORTGAGE BANKERS ASSOCIATION. "I keep telling builders: Don't send letters to FEDERAL RESERVE CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN, send them to PRESIDENT BUSH." ("U.S. News & World Report", 5/28)

IRWIN KELLNER, chief economist at MANUFACTURERS HANOVER TRUST, feels that the economy is weak. "The goods side of the economy is clearly in recession. Output, construction, sales, jobs, and price numbers all point down." (Reuters, 5/22)

IN WASHINGTON:

"There's no reason to be optimistic that we'll get the deficit below 100 billion dollars before the next presidential election" in 1992, says REP. DAN ROSTENKOWSKI (D. - ILL.), who chairs the House Ways and Means Committee. He predicted last week that the Gramm-Rudman law would have to be changed to increase the $64 billion limit on the deficit for the fiscal year starting in October. (Reuters, 5/22)

House Minority Leader ROBERT MICHEL expressed support for PRESIDENT BUSH's desire to renew China's "Most Favored Nation" status. "Eventually the old guard in China is going to go, " said the Illinois Republican, "and if we want to make an approach to the moderates, or encourage the moderates, the progressives in China, I think this is the right thing to do for the long haul." (FNN's "Business Tonight", 5/22)

Prospects for miracle results from the budget talks are slim according to JAMES CAPRA of SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. "It's inconceivable that they can raise taxes by more than $15 billion or reduce the spending track by more than $15 billion, " says this veteran budget analyst. "In one year, even that would be heroic." ("Newsweek", 5/28)

In addition, the company has announced the formation of a nationwide Dealer Network to market the state-of-the-art racer.

The Triton is an advanced specialty racer, handcrafted to match the exact specifications of the rider. According to Raymond Thomson, manager, sports marketing/sales promotion, "Huffy set out to develop the most technologically- advanced bicycle in the world. Mark Allen's commitment and dedication to the bicycling sport is a direct reflection of the quality of the Triton."

Cyclists who wish to have their own custom-fitted Triton will be measured by trained specialists at one of the exclusive dealers across the United States. HIGH POINT, NC (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Culp, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: CULP) today said that it expects to report net sales of approximately $170 million for its fiscal year ended April 29, 1990. That would compare with net sales of $176.8 million in fiscal 1989.

Speaking to institutional investors in New York, Robert G. Culp, III said that audited results for fiscal 1990 would be available in late June. He remarked, "We believe Culp's performance for the full year will reflect a sound turnaround in profits from the loss of $892,000, or $0.20 per share, in fiscal 1989. We expect to report a profit for the fourth quarter, which will add to the income of $1,382,000, or $0.31 per share, already reported for the first nine months. As previously noted, sales for fiscal 1990 will be lower due to the phase-out from a year ago of certain fabric categories. The more important trend, however, is the company's return to profitability. We are gratified with the results thus far from our strategy to strengthen Culp's overall competitive position. Key factors favorably affecting fiscal 1990 were reduced operating expenses, higher inventory turnover and sharply lower interest expense."

GREAT BARRINGTON, MA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - The Lefrak Organization, the $3 billion predominantly building and construction family business, would "never" consider going public, asserts Richard LeFrak, president.

LeFrak states in an interview in the current (June) issue of Family Business, "People do it because they either need to get liquid or need capital. I like to think we've got more capital and more liquidity than most of the firms on Wall Street today."

LeFrak believes going public has a lot of drawbacks. "The pressures that are put on companies to perform, to do things the wrong way, just for short-term results, are ill-advised. I don't have to show my report to anybody but my bank, and if they're happy, then everything is okay. They don't say, 'You made a little more or a little less this year.' Or, 'How come you don't have any dividends?'"

LeFrak's father, Samuel, chairman of the company, offers this advice to family businesses on getting their children involved in the business: "Bring them in young. Get them involved by communicating. Ask their advice, draw them out, encourage them to express themselves. Have an interchange. Get that fresh point of view from them. You want them to feel proud -- to feel part of the team. If you say to them, 'What do you know -- you're only 16 years old?', you'll squash them." He adds, "When you bring them in young and get them, well, addicted -- that's a word I hate to use -- they become part of the game."

Samuel LeFrak notes in Family Business that they're preparing the sixth generation of LeFraks to enter the business started in America by his father, architect Harry LeFrak, in 1905. The business actually goes back to 1845 in France with Samuel LeFrak's great-grandfather. "My son's oldest boy starts college this year," he states in Family Business. "He'll work here this summer."

ROCHESTER, NY (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - An automated photoreceptor manufacturing plant is being build by Xerox Corporation (NYSE: XRX) at the company's Joseph C. Wilson Center for Technology in nearby Webster, N.Y., it was announced today.

Photoreceptors are key components of the xerographic process. They serve as a copier's equivalent of a camera's film, and they must be replaced periodically.

The new 50,000-square-foot facility will be similar to a highly automated Xerox plant in Oklahoma City. It will produce photoreceptors in a film-like, polyester-belt form for the company's 50 Series copiers and duplicators. Drum-type photoreceptors for earlier-model Xerox copiers will continue to be produced in an existing plant at the Wilson Center.

The new plant is being built in response to an increase in demand. Its 25-person operating staff is expected to be drawn from Xerox employees transferring from other positions in Monroe County.

Automated production equipment will account for about half of the plant's $30 million total cost. Construction of the plant building is expected to be completed in December. Manufacturing operations are expected to begin in the second quarter of 1992.

Mesch Engineering, P.C., consulting engineers, of Lockport, N.Y., designed the plant. The Oscar J. Boldt Construction Co., of Appleton, Wis., is construction manager for the project and will use Rochester- area contractors.

Key members of Mesch Engineering and Boldt Construction are working with Xerox personnel as a team family group to carry out the project, employing the Xerox Leadership Through Quality process.

Application of the Leadership Through Quality process enabled Xerox to become one of two 1989 winners of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award, bestowed annually by the U.S. Commerce Department.

For the nine months ended April 30, 1990, sales and net income were $42,669,000 and $3,443,000 (43 cents per share), respectively, while for the first nine months of fiscal 1989 sales and net income were $42,697,000 and $5,325,000 (64 cents per share), respectively.

Tom Galantowicz, Newport's president, said, "Sales for the third quarter increased slightly over the sales reported for the second quarter. However, the increase was below our expectations primarily because of continued weakness in the domestic market. International sales for this quarter were up 21 percent over the results for the corresponding quarter of 1989.

"We are convinced," Galantowicz continued, "that the actions initiated last year to reduce our dependence on the domestic laser research market were correct. We have increased our international market share and are encouraged by preliminary results of our Bio- Instruments Division.

"Income from operations," Galantowicz noted, "continues to be negatively impacted by underutilized capacity, lower margins on our sales to Japan and higher operating costs for our international affiliates."

Galantowicz concluded, "We are implementing programs to improve our cost competitiveness in this slower-growth domestic market. We expect these programs to have increasing impact on our operating results over the next several quarters."

Newport Corporation is the leading worldwide manufacturer and marketer of a comprehensive line of precision instruments, components and accessories for the laser and electro-optical market. Customers include Fortune 500 corporations, national research laboratories, government and educational institutions.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Coded Communications Corporation (Vancouver: CCE) has successfully installed and demonstrated pilot mobile data systems for International Business Machines (IBM) and Canada Building Materials (CBM).

The pilot system for IBM has been installed in Cincinnati, Ohio in vehicles owned by Consolidated Freightways. Coded received an order to equip over 90 vehicles with mobile data communications equipment. The company has successfully demonstrated operation of its equipment and after extensive field tests expects this pilot to lead to substantial orders from this important customer. CF operates more than 40,000 vehicles.

Coded has successfully installed a pilot mobile data system for Canada Building Materials (CBM) of London, Ontario, Canada. This system has been used to equip concrete ready-mix trucks and the initial order was valued at over $180,000 (U.S.) Coded expects to receive an additional order to equip 200 of CBM's vehicles.

"Customers with large-scale requirements often require pilot systems prior to proceeding with full scale implementation," says Robert L. Hillman, President and Chief Executive Officer. "Only a very few suppliers in our industry are capable of building and integrating these systems and our success on these important projects is expected to result in sizable orders in the near future."

CLAREMONT, NC (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - WSMP, Inc. (NASDAQ: WSMP) reported revenues of $61,676,000 for the year ending February 23, 1990 down 5.7 percent from $65,602,000 reported in the prior year. A net loss of $579,600 was reported for the fiscal year ended February 23, 1990 compared to a net income of $1,532,000 in the previous year. The previous year included a one-time net gain from disposals of approximately $1,050,000. Cecil R. Hash, President, of WSMP, stated that the results for fiscal 1990 were extremely disappointing. The high costs associated with launching the Company's chain-wide marketing effort as well as the continued sluggishness of Company restaurant unit sales combined to adversely affect the Company's profitability during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990. This trend is expected to reverse itself by late in fiscal 1991.

WSMP, Inc. now operates 49 restaurants in seven southeastern states, 42 of which are Western Steer Family Steakhouse units. WASHINGTON (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - The Dow Chemical Company (NYSE: DOW) today announced a new four-year "Partnership for Wetlands Conservation" with Ducks Unlimited, Inc., The Nature Conservancy and the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation to preserve and protect North America's endangered wetlands.

With Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan looking on, Dow presented the first installment of a $3 million contribution for wetlands protection and restoration to the conservation groups at a Capitol Hill news conference in Washington. Dow's donation represents the largest corporate financial donation ever to benefit the North American Waterfowl Management Plan (NAWMP), an agreement between the United States and Canada to preserve more than 5.5 million acres of critical wetland habitat. Dow's initial contribution of $1 million was presented today to the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, which has pledged to match the contribution on a one-to-one basis with congressionally appropriated funds.

"Let me emphasize how much we value our partnership with these organizations," said Frank Popoff, president and chief executive officer of The Dow Chemical Company, referring to the conservation groups. "I think that all of us here today recognize that conservation and environmental protection are challenges best met by public/private sector partnerships like the one you see assembled today."

This partnership will initially support three keystone wetlands acquisition and restoration projects of the NAWMP -- the ACE Basin in South Carolina, Peach Point in Texas and the Hillman Marsh in Ontario, Canada. Dow also has earmarked $500,000 of the $3 million contribution to protect, conserve and restore wetlands on and near its corporate properties.

Dow has a long-standing commitment to environmental protection as demonstrated by its aggressive waste reduction, product stewardship and plastics recycling programs. The company's leadership in wetlands preservation is one example of "Conservation 2000," Dow's rededication to environmental conservation and protection.

ELMHURST, IL (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Elm Financial Services, Inc., (NASDAQ: ELMF) the holding company of Elmhurst Federal Savings Bank and its subsidiaries, today reported earnings for the first quarter of the 1990 fiscal year.

For the three months ended March 31, 1990, net income was $461,707 compared to $484,128 for the same period in 1989. Since the bank converted from a mutual association to a stock savings bank on March 23, 1990, earnings per share data is not presented as it is believed such information would not be meaningful.

Charles H. Walsh, chairman, Elm Financial Services, Inc. and Elmhurst Federal Savings Bank stated, "The results of operations for the three months ended March 31, 1990 are not necessarily indicative of the results that may be expected for the year ending Dec. 31, 1990. We look forward to the results of the full investment of the capital raised in our conversion to help meet earnings expectations for the balance of the fiscal year." He added, "It is most important to note that the funds raised in the conversion boosted the bank's tangible and leverage ratio of capital to assets to 12.7 percent and our risk based ratio to 28.9 percent. The fully phased-in requirements of the Financial Institution Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989, while satisfied by the bank prior to the conversion, are now far exceeded and this capital position provides significant financial strength and flexibility."

The slight decrease in earnings for the first quarter of 1990 compared to the same period in 1989 was primarily due to an increase in interest expense which exceeded the bank's increase in interest income.

Interest expense increased as the cost of funds rose to 7.33 percent at March 31, 1990 from 7.07 percent at March 31, 1989. Interest income rose due to higher average interest earning assets, but at a lesser rate as the return on interest earnings assets declined to 9.62 percent from 9.89 percent. This decrease can be attributed to the bank's increased investment in adjustable or short term securities at March 31, 1990 versus its higher fixed-rate investment position at March 31, 1989 in accordance with the bank's current interest rate risk plan.

Elmhurst Federal Savings Bank, the operating entity of Elm Financial Services, Inc. has its executive offices in Elmhurst, Ill., and operates through eight facilities, six of which are in DuPage County, Ill. and two are in Chicago. The bank's deposits are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

NEWTOWN, PA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Solarex Corporation, the largest U.S.-owned manufacturer of photovoltaic products, has successfully begun producing thin film photovoltaic (PV) panels on its next generation, fully-automated manufacturing line.

The process transfers raw glass into a fully encapsulated energy-producing module and does not involve manual handling at any time.

The final power products from the new process will be more reliable and durable, company officials said.

"This is an important milestone for both Solarex and the PV industry," said Dr. David E. Carlson, vice president and general manager of Solarex's Thin Film Division. "While the industry has talked about how automated manufacturing processes could cut the cost of photovoltaics, fully-automated processing has not been achieved until now.

"Moreover, these improvements in processing will improve product reliability and durability, which translates into improved customer satisfaction."

This announcement parallels recent technology advances made by Solarex Thin Film Division -- and announced at the IEEE Photovoltaic Specialist Conference this week in Orlando, Fla. -- to fabricate world- record efficiency multi-junction solar modules built from advanced amorphous silicon alloys. According to Carlson, these are innovations that can be incorporated into the new process.

"This is not just a technology demonstration," continued Carlson. "The new line also represents a commitment by Solarex to its growing base of Original Equipment Manufacturing (OEM) customers. We built our line to supply our business partners with unprecedented volumes of high- quality, high-performance photovoltaic products that will consistently satisfy their requirements."

Solarex is conducting engineering qualifications on the new line, which will be fully operational this summer. The "glass-to-module" operating milestone, accomplished on March 30, 1990, was one of a series of qualification trials that is now underway at the Newtown facility.

"Solarex recognizes that if thin film PV is to be successful in the power generation market, it must be large-area, high-efficiency, stable, and low cost," Carlson concluded. "The next generation Solarex production line will make larger-area panels and utilize new, multi- junction thin film devices that will give our large-area products stabilized efficiencies in the eight to 10 percent range. We've already demonstrated that these devices can be made to work."

Solarex Corporation, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Amoco Corporation, (NYSE: AN) is the largest U.S.-owned photovoltaics manufacturer, and an international leader in the sales and marketing of solar electric power systems and components for telecommunications, village power, navigation aids, consumer products and a host of other remote power applications.

NEWTOWN, PA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Researchers at Solarex Corporation's Thin Film Division today announced a record nine percent sunlight-to-energy conversion efficiency for a large-area, triple junction amorphous silicon solar module.

The new efficiency, accompanied by significantly improved stability, represents a major breakthrough in both the technology and the manufacturing process required to produce these devices in large volumes.

The high performance Solarex module measures one square foot in area and is composed of three solar electric (photovoltaic) cells stacked on top of one another. Despite its many layers, the device has a total thickness of less than one micron. Each cell is optimized to absorb a different wavelength of the solar spectrum, providing improved light trapping and utilization.

Solarex has tested similar smaller-area devices with an initial conversion efficiency of 9.6 percent, which have retained 90 percent of their initial performance after the equivalent of one year outdoors.

Solarex stacked junction cells are fabricated at Solarex Thin Film Division research facilities in Newtown, Pa., using advanced semiconductor material processes and state-of-the-art laser patterning systems. The module's top cell, comprised of amorphous silicon carbide, has the greatest sensitivity to blue light. The middle cell, comprised of amorphous silicon, intercepts light in the green-yellow portion of the spectrum. And the bottom cell, comprising amorphous silicon- germanium alloy, captures light in the red-infrared spectrum.

The research leading to these developments was jointly funded by Solarex and the Solar Energy Research Institute (SERI). A portion of this work was also sponsored by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania under the Ben Franklin Partnership.

WILMINGTON, DE (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Du Pont (NYSE: DD) Vice Chairman Elwood P. Blanchard has received the 1990 Rene Dubos Environmental Award.

Blanchard was honored for his role in the company's decision to phase out production of fully halogenated chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) and accelerate the development of alternative products and technologies.

Du Pont, the world's largest CFC producer, in March 1988 committed to phase out its CFC production as soon as possible but no later than the turn of the century. The company's position was based on findings of the international Ozone Trends Panel, which linked CFCs to depletion of stratospheric ozone. Du Pont stressed that the phaseout should occur in concert with an orderly transition to alternative products. Through 1990, Du Pont will have spent $240 million in research and capital investment and expects to begin commercializing a family of alternatives this year.

"Action on this issue must be global to be effective," Blanchard said. "Du Pont is proud to have played a role in the development of the Montreal Protocol, the international agreement regulating CFCs that has become a model for addressing future environmental issues. Even though it will be decades before we understand the full impact of such initiatives on our environment, we continue to believe that they are appropriate."

The Rene Dubos Environmental Awards are presented annually to individuals from government, academia, industry and special interest groups who have distinguished themselves by developing significant strategies for dealing with environmental problems.

The Rene Dubos Center is an independent educational and research organization focused on the social and humanistic aspects of environmental problems.

HIGH POINT, NC (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Preferred Savings Bank, Inc. announced today that it has begun negotiations with an investor group willing to acquire and recapitalize the Institution. With the approval of State and Federal regulators, Preferred has entered into an agreement with The Meritas Group, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, a financial services consulting firm, whereby Preferred will pay Meritas to perform a due diligence review of the books and records of Preferred on behalf of the third party investor group. The agreement calls for Meritas to complete its review within thirty (30) days. At the conclusion of that thirty (30) day period, and based upon the books and records review by Meritas, the investor group may infuse a sufficient dollar amount of capital into Preferred to cause it to meet its regulatory capital requirements. Currently Preferred does not meet its regulatory apital requirements and federal regulatory authorities have indicated that the previously submitted capital plan would be rejected. Should the capital infusion be made by the third party investor group, the present equity investment held by existing shareholders would have to be eliminated although all existing shareholders on the closing date of the transaction would be given the opportunity, through the issuance of warrants, to purchase new shares of Preferred at a future date at a predetermined value. The end result of the transaction would be to cause a change in control of Preferred from the present shareholder base of approximately 1,000 shareholders to the smaller group of investors proposing to infuse the equity capital. Mr. Charles L. Huff, Jr., President of Preferred stated: "The serious interest of this new investor group is most encouraging. If we are able to consummate this transaction, we will have prevented receivership by the Resolution Trust Corporation, preserved Preferred as an institution, and the shareholders will be given ownership rights that could be very valuable. If Preferred is successful after completion of the capital infusion, these rights or warrants should increase in value and have the potential of permitting present shareholders to recoup some or all of their original investment in Preferred."

At April 30, 1990 Preferred had total assets of $247 million and operates out of offices in Burlington, High Point, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Hickory and Charlotte. STUART, FL (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Information has become as important as labor and technology to hi-tech firms. That's the result of a recent nationwide survey of hi-tech firms conducted by Zeta Marketing and Research, Inc. of Stuart, Fla. Nearly 50 percent of the firms surveyed said that gathering and analyzing information was "critical" or "very important" for company decision makers.

Assessments of competitor products were the largest use (22 percent) with information on competing companies falling close behind at 18 percent of the overall. The third greatest use is in formulating marketing strategies, with 15 percent of the respondents placing priority in that area. Information for possible mergers or acquisitions and technology licensing opportunities were accorded lower priorities for the vast majority of responding firms.

Zeta reports that one of the most prevalent trends is a change in the manner in which most companies gather and analyze information. More hi-tech firms than ever before are turning to more sophisticated information sources and systematic analysis techniques instead of using the more traditional method of reviewing publications and doing "board room" analysis. Still, reliance on the board room analysis process was reported by 45 percent of the respondents. Electronic databases are increasingly used, but still are apparent unknowns to many firms.

More often than not, consultants and analysis firms are being called in for a comprehensive situation analysis. Not surprisingly, those firms that used outside help reported higher confidence in the reporting than firms relying on internal resources and in-house analysis. Zeta Marketing and Research conducts the survey annually and conducts trend analysis as well as quantitative analysis. Results are sent back to all responding firms so they can see how their information programs compares to other firms.

KIRKLAND, WA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Costco Wholesale Corp. (NASDAQ-NMS: COST) announced today its decision to close its three west Florida warehouse locations -- in Tampa, Clearwater and Palm Harbor -- as of the close of business on Saturday, June 16. The company entered the west Florida market six years ago, and sales at all three locations have remained at unprofitable levels throughout this time. In addition to the three closings planned for June 16, the company has decided to close its Lauderhill, Fla. warehouse this summer, in conjunction with its planned opening in August of a new warehouse in Delray Beach, Fla. The new Delray Beach facility will incorporate the company's fresh foods operations.

The costs associated with the four warehouse closings are expected to be approximately $6.0 milion, and this amount will be recognized as anticipated warehouse closing costs in the company's third quarter, the 12 weeks ended May 13. On an after-tax basis, this non-recurring loss is expected to reduce third quarter and fiscal year net income before extraordinary items by approximately $3.7 million, or 10 cents per share.

Subsequent to completion of the above actions, the company's Florida operations will be comprised of nine warehouse locations -- two warehouses located in the Orlando market and seven warehouses located along the Miami-Palm Beach corridor. Companywide, Costco will end its 1990 fiscal year Sept. 2, with 62 warehouses operating in nine states and western Canada.

Expansion plans for fiscal 1991, which begins Sept. 3, include the openings of 10-12 additional warehouse locations, including the company's initial expansion into the Northeast United States. The company's first Northeast opening is planned for the Fall of 1990 -- in West Springfield, Mass. -- during the first quarter of fiscal 1991.

The company's common stock trades on the NASDAQ National Market System under the ticker symbol, "COST."

NAPERVILLE, IL (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Varlen Corp. (NASDAQ: VRLN) said today it had a decline in fiscal first quarter results as anticipated, but is expecting another strong year based on a predicted upturn in the economy in the second half of 1990.

For the three months ended April 28, 1990, Varlen had net income of $2,131,000 or 47 cents per share compared with earnings from continuing operations of $3,204,000 or 72 cents per share for the year ago period. Net income in the 1989 fiscal first quarter, which includes results from discontinued operations, was $3,627,000 or 82 cents per share.

Net sales for the 1990 fiscal first quarter were $59,741,000, a 5 percent increase over year-ago sales for the period of $56,993,000, reflecting the company's acquisition of Consolidated Metco, two product lines and the laboratory equipment businesses of HEICO Corporation.

Richard L. Wellek, president and chief executive officer, said that "although most of our markets were down, all of Varlen's continuing operations were profitable."

He said that a number of the industries served by Varlen were projected to improve during the second half of 1990, "and if this happens, Varlen should have another good year."

He said results for the 1990 first quarter were adversely affected by a sharp decline in U.S. automotive and truck production, as well as a slowdown in the rate of building and repairing railroad freight cars.

Also contributing to the first quarter earnings decline were reduced results at Varlen's laboratory equipment group of companies due to delays in government funding for research projects, a reduction in research and development expenditures by the industrial sector and the previously-anticipated negative effect of Varlen's most recent laboratory equipment products acquisition which has not yet contributed positively to income flow.

Wellek said that although the acquisition was unprofitable when acquired, Varlen has high hopes for its potential and has already taken steps to make it profitable by announcing the phase-out of production in an Oregon plant, and consolidating it in Varlen's Precision Scientific plant in Chicago.

Varlen's recently acquired Consolidated Metco subsidiary which manufacturers precision parts and components for the large-truck, trailer and business equipment markets, had improved results over a year-ago despite a slump in the industry.

Wellek noted that "Consolidated's favorable results were due to aggressive marketing programs, the addition of new customers, and the ability of two of its major large-truck customers to out-perform their markets."

Wellek said that Varlen expected to achieve real growth from its recent acquisitions and new product programs that will generate increased revenues as the year unfolds.

The Varlen chief executive said that some of the company's markets, such as the automotive industry, are showing signs of strengthening, but they are still below last year's levels.

He said Varlen had been awarded new automotive contracts which take effect during the second and third quarters.

Wellek said that Varlen also anticipates a second-half increase in light vehicle and large truck production which should benefit its subsidiary companies.

Varlen is a manufacturer of precision industrial products, primarily for the transportation and laboratory equipment markets.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Long Lake Energy Corporation (NASDAQ: LLEC) announced today the signing of a line of credit agreement with its principal shareholders. The company finalized the agreement with a group of shareholders of the company, including Antaeus Corporation and certain affiliated individuals and trusts, Odyssey Partners L.P. and Paul J. Elston, the president of the company.

The lenders have agreed to make loans to the company for an amount not to exceed approximately $3 million plus interest which is deferred during the first 12 months after the closing. The loans will bear interest at prime and will become due on May 31, 1993, subject to certain mandatory pre-payment provisions. The company will grant a five-year warrant to the lenders to purchase common stock of the company for $2.75 per share for each $2.75 of loans made to the company. The loans will be secured by a lien upon certain assets of the company.

Long Lake had previously announced that it had signed a memorandum of understanding with a major equipment supplier who will advance development fees and make additional loans to the company totalling approximately $2.6 million. Both the advance and the loans are conditional on the supplier receiving a turnkey construction and equipment contract for a 300 MW generating facility and will be made upon the occurrence of certain milestones in the award, execution and performance of such contract.

The company also announced today that Price Waterhouse, the company's independent accountants, has issued a revised opinion on the company's financial statements for 1989 removing the explanatory paragraph concerning the company's ability to continue as a going concern.

Paul J. Elston, president of the company, said, "We are extremely pleased to finalize this line of credit agreement and to receive a clean opinion from Price Waterhouse. With the financial resources now on hand, we look forward to continuing to advance our portfolio of projects and aggressively pursue new opportunities in the burgeoning market for electric generation."

GAITHERSBURG, MD (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Genex Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: GNEX) reported that for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990, total revenues were $1.1 million, approximately the same as for the comparable period of 1989.

The net loss for the period was reduced to $1.4 million, or 7 cents per share, compared to a net loss in the first quarter of 1989 of $1.9 million or 11 cents per share.

Product sales and licenses revenues increased 44 percent from the same period last year. Technology services revenues decreased 26 percent when compared to the first quarter of 1989, reflecting the completion of two major contracts that were in place during the first quarter of 1989. The improvement in loss per share is a result both of a smaller net operating loss and a larger number of shares of common stock currently outstanding.

Reed Prior, Genex's new chief executive officer said: "While our overall revenues were consistent with the first quarter of 1989, we achieved a favorable reduction of the company's expenses. It is our intent to continue to focus the company in the right direction and to drive toward profitability."

Genex Corporation is an applied biotechnology company that uses its proprietary protein engineering expertise to design, manufacture, and market specialized proteins and affinity protein products for the research diagnostic, and process separations marketplace.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - United Press International, broadening its customized information services, today announced the UPI Environmental NewsNow news and information service for news editors and corporate and government executives.

UPI Environmental NewsNow offers round-the-clock reports on regulatory and legislative initiatives and compliance issues, environmental disasters, cleanup activities, environmental project finance, liability, grassroots activity, and other matters, according to UPI Vice Chairman Joseph K. Taussig.

The package includes worldwide UPI environmental news reports, as well as information produced by such UPI allies as Business Publishers, Inc., the highly regarded Silver Spring, Md., publisher of 22 environmentally oriented newsletters; and noted environmental economics and investments author Michael Silverstein.

The Environmental NewsNow report also draws environmental coverage from Agencia EFE (Spain's leading news agency), Xinhau of the People's Republic of China, Kyodo of Japan, Invest/Net and BusinessWire.

"UPI launched Environmental NewsNow because we learned from news editors and other executives that they feel they must stay abreast of environmental news, otherwise they and those they serve will be history -- missing key stories, succumbing to political crossfire and failing to learn from others' disasters and recovery efforts," Taussig explained.

UPI's NewsNow news and information services, developed during the past year, "give subscribers unprecedented capability to capture real-time news and information movements in topic categories of greatest interest," said Taussig.

UPI also produces environmental news segments for "The Insiders with Jack Anderson," a daily Financial News Network (FNN) program, and "Environmental Minutes" reports throughout each FNN broadcast day.

UPI Environmental NewsNow is delivered to subscribers' personal computers via UPI telecommunications. The environmental coverage can be further tailored by specific topics (e.g. acid rain or hazardous waste), based on the individual subscriber's priorities, with UPI's unique computer technology screening-out unwanted stories from around the world. Choices of NewsNow packages and subtopics are easily changed, allowing a client to see only the news and information most relevant to his needs.

UPI in 1988 announced plans to expand greatly its line of customized news reports and corporate information services. UPI NewsNow includes such news and information packages as Aerospace & Defense, Energy, Automotive, Sports, International and Finance.

UPI Reporter George Lobsenz is the news agency's lead reporter on environmental affairs in Washington. Other UPI environmental material is transmitted 24 hours each day from UPI posts in more than 90 nations. UPI environmental report topics include Acid Rain, Air, Hazardous Waste, Wildlife, Water, Pesticides & Poisons, Garbage & Solid Waste and Environmental Business Reports, which include stock indices.

Business Publishers Inc., led by President Leonard Eiserer, began publishing environmental information in 1963 when, seven years before the founding of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, BPI introduced The Air/Water Pollution Report. BPI Environmental Group Editorial Director Robert Varela will direct BPI contributions to UPI.

Michael Silverstein, a specialist in environmental finance issues, is president of Environmental Economics, a consulting organization; and author of the annual Director of Environmental Investing (BPI) and The Environmental Factor, Its Impact on the Future of the World Economy and Your Investments (Longman, 1990). Silverstein has also contributed articles to The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, Chicago Tribune, The Los Angeles Times, The Christian Science Monitor and Personal Finance.

UPI, founded June 21, 1907, reports news and information to more than 3,000 UPI client operating locations, globally. UPI has nearly 200 bureaus and is represented in 90 nations. UPI is owned by Infotechnology, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: ITCH), the New York-based information and communications company that also owns 47 percent of Financial News Network, Inc.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - A new generation of economical, naturally safe nuclear power plants could help solve the world's environmental problems, but government and business leaders must become strong advocates, a Westinghouse Electric Corp. (NYSE: WX) executive said today.

"We have new designs with safety systems that use natural physical forces to operate," Richard J. Slember, vice president and general manager of Westinghouse's Energy Systems Business Unit, said. He said the new reactors are simple and cost-effective to operate. "But to realize their potential, we must play a larger role in shaping the energy policies now being debated. Not joining in the energy debate is a fast track to environmental decay and economic decline."

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Nuclear Power Assembly, Slember said that nuclear plants produce no greenhouse gases and no acid rain emissions. Nuclear wastes are small in volume, are contained, are carefully monitored and can be safely stored. They are not being dumped into our environment or taking up large areas for storage.

The Westinghouse executive told the organization that these facts have not been explained to the public thoroughly enough. "Our industry will become one of the principal symbols of the entire environmental decade. We can be cast as its hero." He called on attendees to speak up, to participate and to help shape the nation's energy future.

"I envision a future based on sound conservation practices and fueled by environmentally benign energy systems. I see a future of economic prosperity and clean air, a future energized by solar, natural gas, clean coal, hydro and nuclear power." We must work locally and nationally, as individuals and as an industry to help bring this future to fruition, Slember said.

Westinghouse Electric Corp. supplies environmentally sound power generating systems and equipment worldwide. The Westinghouse AP600, an advanced nuclear power plant design, is expected to be certified by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission as a standard nuclear plant design in 1994. The company currently is commercializing its solar photovoltaic technology.

SHELTON, CT (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Raytech Corp. (NYSE: RAY) today reported Raytech Corp.'s net income for the first quarter of 1990, which ended April 1, was $3.9 million or $.80 per share compared with net income of $1.2 million or $.20 per share for the corresponding quarter in 1989.

Excluding an extraordinary gain of $2.6 million from the early extinguishment of debt, the company's net income was $1.3 million or $.26 per share when compared with $.20 for the first quarter of 1989.

Raytech's net sales for the first quarter were $34.8 million, an increase of $4.4 million or 14 percent over the same period last year. This increase is attributable primarily to sales at Allomatic Industries, which equalled $5.2 million. Without Allomatic's sales contribution, sales decreased $.8 million or 2 percent compared to 1989's results. This is primarily a result of reduced demand within the automotive original equipment market segment.

The major factors for the increase of 30 percent in earnings per share relate to the following programs:

1. Control the dilution of Raytech stock. The company purchased 2.2 million shares in 1989, or about 40 percent of the potential outstanding common stock.

2. Reduce the corporate long-term debt. As a result of the early extinguishment of debt and subsequent elimination of five years of future interest payments, Raytech was able to effectively reduce outstanding principle and interest obligations of $13 million.

3. The Raybestos Products Co. paper-making manufacturing process is now fully operational and is performing as planned. The company realized significant improvements in Raybestos Products Co.'s performance in the first quarter of 1990, and this trend is expected to continue.

Raytech Corporation is headquartered in Shelton, with operations serving world markets for energy absorption and power transmission products, as well as fasteners and custom-engineered components.

CHICAGO (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - EdgeMark Financial Corp. today reported first quarter 1990 net income of $757,698, or $0.38 per share, compared to $849,318, or $0.43 per share, for the same quarter last year.

According to Charles A. Bruning, EdgeMark Financial Corp.'s president and chief executive officer, the results were higher than budgeted earnings for the quarter, but lower than 1989 first quarter earnings due mostly to costs associated with the opening and operation of two new EdgeMark units -- Merchandise National Bank's NBC Tower facility and EdgeMark Bank Rosemont. Those facilities contributed to an increase in first quarter operating expenses of 6.07 percent.

In addition, Bruning said earnings were also impacted by lower interest rates and yields on earning assets, which resulted in tighter margins and lower net interest income.

Net loans outstanding rose 7.41 percent to $275,355,000, from $256,357,000. Net charge offs for the quarter amounted to $143,880, leaving the reserves for loan losses at $4,886,000, or a healthy 1.74 percent of loans outstanding.

Total deposits as of March 31, 1990, were $404,762,729, up 4.84 percent from the $386,060,045 posted for the same time in 1989. Total assets for the quarter were $464,504,000, a 5.07 percent increase.

EdgeMark Financial Corp. is a $464-million asset multibank holding company that owns and operates Merchandise National Bank, Chicago; Edgewood Bank in Countryside and Woodridge; EdgeMark Bank Lombard; First National Bank of Lockport and EdgeMark Bank Rosemont.

HOUSTON (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - The Mischer Corp. (NASDAQ: MSHR) today reported income of $1,503,000 or 47 cents per share for the first quarter of 1990 compared to a loss of $2,605,000 or $1.25 per share for the first quarter of 1989. The net loss from continuing operations was $39,396,000 or $12.36 per share for the first quarter of 1990 compared to a loss of $2,702,000 or $1.30 per share for the first quarter of 1989.

Loss from continuing operations for the first quarter of 1990 included a $37,022,000 or $11.62 per share writedown on assets conveyed to its major bank creditors. In addition, The Mischer Corp. recognized a $40,899,000 or $12.84 per share extraordinary gain on the debt settlement, net of federal income taxes in the first quarter of 1990.

Revenues from continuing operations for the first quarter of 1990 decreased to $1,803,000 as compared to $3,050,000 for the same quarter of 1989. The decrease in revenues is a result of a reduction in the number of acres sold in the first quarter of 1990 plus the revenues in the first quarter of 1989 included the sale of a warehouse located in Harahan, Louisiana.

The Mischer Corporation reached a settlement on March 27, 1990 with its major bank creditors and Walter M. Mischer to settle existing debt. Total debt satisfied with the bank creditors was $85,400,000, from the conveyance of collateral and assignment of distribution rights in certain real estate ventures. The company also assigned its interest in certain property securing a loan in the amount of $3,400,000 due to Mischer in settlement of the debt. The company anticipates additional settlements on debt totaling $1,997,000 payable to other lenders subsequent to the first quarter of 1990.

WINDSOR, CO (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Ground breaking was held here today for a new printing plate manufacturing facility, reaffirming Kodak's (NYSE: EK) commitment to both Windsor and the graphic imaging business.

Plans call for the 35,000 square-foot expansion to be valued at more than 50 million dollars over the next three years. Funding for this project was included in the company's capital budget for 1989.

"Having spent to much of my career promoting Michigan, I'm delighted my book will be published by a new Michigan company," said Paula Blanchard. "To avoid exploitation and sensationalism, I specifically sought out a Michigan publisher who would bring sensitivity to my book and a thorough knowledge of my primary market, which is Michigan."

CHICAGO (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - The Chicago Board of Trade (CBOT) and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME) today announced that they have successfully completed their extensive discussions pertaining to a unified after-hours electronic trading system.

The exchanges presented a plan to Reuters Holdings PLC (NASDAQ: RTRSY) for a system utilizing the GLOBEX network and technology. The plan also includes a special role for the Aurora system for utilization by both exchanges. Implementation of the new plan will depend on the exchanges reaching an agreement with Reuters, as well as approval by the members of the CBOT and CME.

Details of the plan will not be made public at this time in order to allow for the next stage of discussions among all three parties. The exchanges proposed that the start-up date for the GLOBEX system be delayed pending the outcome of the negotiations.

The discussions between the two major U.S. futures exchanges, which had unanimous support from the futures industry, began in mid-1989 with the goal of achieving a premier combined automated trading system, reducing costs, and drawing on the strength of the combined memberships of the two institutions.

By agreement during the course of the discussions, the CME proceeded with plans to develop its GLOBEX system, and the CBOT similarly proceeded with its plans for its Aurora system. It was understood from the outset of the discussions that if an agreement were achieved embodying both exchanges' specifications, Reuters would remain as the provider of the network and key technical facilities of any combined CME/CBOT system.

It was also understood that any final agreement would not affect the agreement between the CME and the Marche a Terme International de France (MATIF), which is already a partner to the GLOBEX system. Negotiations with other futures exchanges were held in abeyance until the CME/CBOT discussions were completed.

Leo Melamed, chairman of GLOBEX and chairman of the executive committee of the CME, stated: "The agreement between the CBOT and the CME represents an historic and monumental milestone in the development of futures trade. When implemented, it will serve the best interests of our combined memberships, the Futures Commission Merchant (FCM) community, and world capital markets."

Karsten "Cash" Mahlmann, chairman of the CBOT, stated: "This historic agreement will further cement Chicago as a premier risk management center. The resulting cost efficiencies and savings will benefit both exchanges, their memberships and the market users."

Andre Villeneuve, president, Reuters America, stated: "Reuters is delighted with the prospects of a unified trading system, building upon the existing agreements with the CME and MATIF. We hope to bring the forthcoming discussions to a successful conclusion as quickly as possible."

It was agreed by the three parties that the next stage of the proceedings would begin immediately. Toward that end, two committees composed of technical and legal representatives of the respective parties were organized. All participants agreed to achieve final resolution of all issues in order that the CME and CBOT be able to commence operations by November 1990. There will be no further announcements until all discussions are completed.

AKRON, OH (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Telxon Corporation (NASDAQ/NMS: TLXN) today reported a net loss of $9.4 million, or $.71 per share, for the fourth quarter ended March 31, 1990. That compares with net income of $4.3 million, or $.33 per share, for the same quarter a year ago.

Fourth-quarter revenue totaled $35.7 million, compared with $47.8 million in the fiscal 1989 fourth quarter.

For fiscal 1990, Telxon reported a net loss of $14.4 million, or $1.09 per share, on revenue of $143.3 million. The fiscal 1990 loss compares with net income of $15.4 million, or $1.17 per share, on revenue of $159.6 million for the same period a year ago. The Fiscal 1990 loss exceeded an earlier company estimate as a result of a lower income tax benefit.

Telxon President and Chief Executive Officer Raymond D. Meyo stated that the $14.9 million pre-tax loss for the fourth quarter included a number of unusual charges taken as part of the company's efforts to reposition itself. The company had a $4.6 million loss on the sale of Information Management Group (IMG), a division of the company's Retail Automation Group. In addition, operating losses of $900,000 in the fourth quarter and $2.2 million for the year on revenue of $1.6 million for fiscal 1990 were incurred by IMG.

Some of the unusual charges include:
- $2 million in accounts receivable-related adjustments for both domestic and international operations;
- $2.2 million in miscellaneous charges; and
- $1.3 million in severance and reorganization charges. "This has been a year of challenges for the company," Meyo said. "But we have put into place a positive plan that will enable us to position the company for profitability and growth in the future.

"The improvements to our balance sheet have been significant," he said. "For example, accounts receivable as measured in days sales outstanding has been reduced from 126 days in September 1989 to approximately 94 days as of fiscal 1990 year- end. During this same time, inventory has been reduced from $43 million to $34.8 million."

Cash balances also showed improvement, increasing from $45 million in September 1989 to more than $55 million in March. Telxon estimates it will receive income tax refunds of approximately $10 million in early fiscal 1991 as a result of tax loss benefits.

Meyo reported that in anticipation of improved cash flow, the company purchased $10 million in April 1990 of its subordinated convertible debentures. As a result of the purchase, Telxon realized a pre-tax gain of $3.4 million during the first quarter. The company will report the gain as an extraordinary item, he said.

Meyo estimated that Telxon's revenue for fiscal 1991 will be in the $160 million to $165 million range, and earnings per share for the year in the $.66 to $.71 range, including the extraordinary gain.

For the fiscal 1991 first quarter, Meyo said he expects revenue of $39 million to $41 million, and earnings per share of $.22 to $.26, including the extraordinary gain. For the fiscal 1990 first quarter, revenue was $35.3 million; net income was $557,000, or $.04 per share.

Telxon PTCs gather, process and store on-site real-time data which is communicated to a host computer. These systems incorporate the company's proprietary operating and applications software, associated peripheral equipment and communications devices.

Telxon's executive and engineering offices are located in Akron, Ohio; it has a manufacturing facility in Houston; and customers are served by 41 sales and service offices worldwide.

SOUTHFIELD, MI (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Dennis J. Gormley, president and chief executive of Federal-Mogul Corporation (NYSE: FMO) was elected chairman of the board today at the company's board of directors meeting following its annual meeting.

The announcement was made by retiring Chairman Thomas F. Russell during his remarks to shareowners. Speaking at the annual meeting, Russell said that while he is stepping down as company chairman, he will continue to serve on Federal-Mogul's board. He has served as chairman for the past 14 years and as a director since 1968.

Gormley said, "Federal-Mogul is a reflection of Tom's strong and consistent leadership during his 48 years with the company. As he steps down as chairman, he leaves behind a rich legacy.

Both Russell and Gormley agreed that Federal-Mogul will become a world-class company within the next several years. Gormley said that goal would be achieved by positioning the company as global; by capitalizing on the synergy of its manufacturing and distribution operations; and by building employee commitment to continuous improvement, and the need to compress time throughout the system.

"We realize that to keep pace with the competition -- and pull ahead of the pack -- will require dramatic and innovative change throughout Federal-Mogul," Gormley said. As a result, the company has established aggressive three-year goals to:

1) Reduce inventories at current cost by $150 million;
2) Improve companywide productivity by 30 percent;
3) Reduce the cost of scrap and rework by $11 million; and
4) Double the company's return on investment to shareowners.

Gormley reviewed the company's strategy to achieve these goals and shared progress reports from throughout the organization. He concluded, "In the hard-charging organization, everybody ought to be on the edge of their seats. And that's exactly where we are at Federal-Mogul -- from the executive offices to the plant floor -- our people are on the edge of their seats.

Headquartered in Southfield, Federal-Mogul operates 37 plants, more than 70 distribution centers and four research centers throughout the world. DERRY, NH (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - HADCO Corporation (NASDAQ: HDCO) announced today that it has eliminated 1.1.1 Trichloroethane from its Derry (N.H.) facility. 1.1.1 Trichloroethane (also known as Methyl Chloroform) is rated by EPA in the lowest of its four categories of compounds for stratospheric ozone depletion potential. HADCO's 1987 emissions of 1.1.1 trichloroethane were 24 percent of the total reported in New Hampshire, and ranked 375th nationally. Although these emissions were rated as acceptable by the ambient air level guidelines of New Hampshire Air Resources Division, HADCO's commitment to being an environmentally responsible employer was the driving force behind the process change to eliminate 1.1.1 trichloroethane.

The other portion of the $1.5 million Aqueous Conversion Project which will minimize the use of the solvent methylene chloride is on schedule for a July 1990 completion. The project goal will drop methylene chloride usage and emissions to approximately 5 percent of the 1987 levels. Progress to-date has resulted in a 60 percent reduction in methylene chloride emissions. HADCO is proud of these achievements, and looks forward to the completion of this goal.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - CYTOGEN Corp. (NASDAQ: CYTO) today announced results obtained with OncoRad(R), the company's monoclonal antibody-based cancer radiotherapy agent, in two Phase I clinical safety trials.

Clinicians from two leading U.S. comprehensive cancer care centers made presentations at the American Association of Cancer Research meeting in Washington, which showed that high ratios of the cell-killing radioisotope yttrium-90 can be safely administered to cancer patients.

These clinical trials evaluated intraperitoneal (intra-abdominal) administration of OncoRad. Data presented demonstrated the product was well tolerated and remained stable in the peritoneal cavity. Furthermore, the study substantiated the ability to deliver increased radiation utilizing regional administration of radiolabeled antibodies. Most encouraging is the ratio of radioisotope which was delivered to the targeted tumors in comparison to normal tissues.

The only side effect observed was a decrease in platelet count (thrombocytopenia) in patients previously treated with extensive chemotherapy regimens. None of the usual side effects associated with chemotherapy such as nausea, vomiting and hair loss were seen.

CYTOGEN announced plans to proceed with Phase II trials designed to study the therapeutic efficacy of this product. The goal of the Phase II study is to demonstrate consistent tumor regression with a well- tolerated dose of OncoRad.

CYTOGEN Corp. is a biopharmaceutical company which has developed proprietary systems for linking drugs and diagnostic agents to monoclonal antibodies in order to optimize the function of the antibody as a delivery vehicle. With major emphasis on human cancer, current product development efforts at CYTOGEN are focused on improved cancer diagnostic imaging agents and the targeted delivery of cancer therapeutic agents directly to tumor sites.

LEXINGTON, MA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - "Raytheon's diversification strategy is in place and it's working," Thomas L. Phillips, Raytheon's (NYSE: RTN) chairman and CEO, told shareholders at the company's annual meeting here today.

As evidence of the fundamental strength of the company, Phillips cited five consecutive years of record sales, earnings and earnings per share. Earnings per share increased 99 percent in a period of five years, from $4.02 in 1984 to $8.01 in 1989, he said.

Phillips noted the significant political changes in the world, the improving relations with the Soviet Union and the increased pressures on U.S. defense spending since last year's meeting. However, he said, "we don't need to scramble now to diversify. We don't need to make forays into uncharted territory.

"We are competing in government and commercial markets that we know, with experienced management, and clearly defined goals and opportunities," Phillips said. "We have chosen a limited number of fields which would be countercyclical with defense expenditures -- and would have synergy with the skills of the company."

Continuing with management's report, Raytheon President Dennis J. Picard told the shareholders the company's commercial diversification is a strength. "It gives us tools we can use across the company. And by bringing together our government and commercial groups on a project-by-project basis, we can create new business opportunities.

"We can create synergy," he said. "We can make the company greater than the sum of its parts."

As an example he cited the combined knowledge of defense and the general aviation business that enabled Beech Aircraft to win a major Air Force training aircraft program.

Picard also explained how the "marriage" of the strengths of its Raytheon

Service Company and its United Engineers & Constructors enabled them to team together to win a major Department of Energy contract to provide engineering and management services for the Nevada Test Site and on Johnston Island in the Pacific.

Chairman Phillips said, "As we look toward a period of transition, we have a lot going for us....Our position in defense is supported by a broad array of programs -- domestic and international, electronics and non-electronics, prime and second-source."

He said the company has additional key government work in non-defense areas, such as air traffic control for the FAA, as well as other work with NASA and the Department of Energy. He noted the company's commercial segments are diversified as well.

Phillips said the company in recent years turned around in a meaningful way two of its commercial business areas -- Beech Aircraft and energy services. "The rapid profit growth of 1989 for these two segments is continuing undiminished in 1990," he said.

In addressing the military spending issue, Picard said, "We believe our defense programs are 'in synch' with evolving defense needs and with budget realities."

"We know the defense budget will continue to be under pressure and that there will be a shakeout in the defense industry," he said. "In this environment, the customer will look to companies that have high-quality, on-time and on-budget performance. And here we have a proven track record. We have a reputation that Raytheon makes it work and that we stand behind the products we build."

Picard said the company is working to build on its commercial base -- and continues to look for investment opportunities and acquisitions that strengthen its core commercial business areas.

He said Raytheon will ensure its commercial operations have the tools to take advantage of new market opportunities -- such as environmental services to meet clear air standards, nuclear waste management and site cleanup, chemical and other incineration technologies, and highway infrastructure repairs and improvements.

Picard concluded, "Raytheon Company enters the '90s with a strong foundation, with an experienced team and with the right tools. We have what it takes to continue to be a company of strength and stability in the future."

Raytheon Company, headquartered in Lexington, Mass., hadsales of $8.8 billion in 1989. The technolgy-based company is active in electronic, aviation, appliances, industry services, construction and publishing. It has more than 76,900 employees worldwide.

MIAMI (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Royce Laboratories, Inc. (NASD(AQ: RLAB), a manufacturer of prescription and over the counter generic pharmaceuticals, today announced unaudited results for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990.

The company lost $58,214 ($.01 per share) in the first quarter of 1990, as compared to a loss of $575,569 ($.09 per share) for the same period last year. Net sales for the first quarter increased from $389,303 in first quarter 1989 to $397,049 in first quarter 1990.

The substantially reduced loss in the first quarter is attributable to several factors. First, the composition of the company's sales in the first quarter 1990 included 68 percent of the higher margin prescription products and 32 percent OTC products, while first quarter 1989 sales were composed of 81 percent lower margin OTC products and 19 percent prescription products. Second, sales, general and administrative expenses decreased from $275,588 in 1989 to $257,525 in 1990. Third, there were no allocable research and development costs in the first quarter of 1990, while in the first quarter of 1989 the company reported $465,367 in research and development costs.

Without incurring any major research and development expense, the company expects to develop several non-biostudy Abbreviated New Drug Applications (ANDA) for submission to the Food and Drug Administration before year end.

Commenting on the first quarter results, Royce Chairman Richard Gross said: "The much reduced loss in this year's first quarter, compared to last year, is very satisfying. During April, the company has completed both restructuring essentially all of the company's major debt and closing a private placement. The company is now concentrating on meeting its short term and long term financing needs, developing a more comprehensive sales and marketing effort, and planning for the future."

ATLANTA, (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Contel Cellular Inc. (NASDAQ: CCXLA)

today announced that it has signed a joint venture agreement with Hungaria Telekon Kft. to design, build, and operate a national cellular telecommunications system in the Republic of Hungary.

This joint venture to be named Contel Hungaria Kft., will be owned 50 percent by Contel Cellular and 50 percent by the private Hungarian partners within Hungaria Telekom Kft. Contel Cellular will have principal management, technical, and operational responsibility within the venture and will shortly name a managing director and other key management personnel.

The new Contel Hungaria joint venture has received an operating concession from the Hungarian government for a period of 15 years with a five-year renewal option. The concession commences in May of 1990 with the extension expiring in June of 2010. The operating concession for cellular service is one of the first concessions that the Hungarian government has granted to a private company in more than 70 years.

The new Contel Hungaria cellular system will be the first national cellular system in Eastern Europe. The system will be designed to provide cellular service to at least 50,000 subscribers by 1993 and eventually will be available to all of Hungary's 10.6 million population.

The first phase of the new system will involve construction in Budapest, followed by construction in other major Hungarian cities. The initial Budapest development will provide service to approximately 3 million people. Initial system turn-on is scheduled for early 1991 with service expected nationwide by the end of 1993. Initial construction and operating costs will be approximately $35 million over the first three years.

Designed to provide voice, data, facsimile, and fixed cellular applications, the Contel Hungarian system will operate in the frequency from 890 to 898 Mhz. and from 935 to 943 Mhz.

Charles Wholstetter, chairman of Contel Corp. (NYSE: CTC), which owns 90 percent of Contel Cellular, said: "Our Hungarian venture typifies the global view Contel takes of the cellular industry, and the major role cellular telecommunications will play around the world in the future. Building a Hungarian system is a key move for Contel because the development of a nationwide cellular system for Hungary, utilizing the TACS bandwidth deployed in neighboring Austria, will provide Contel Cellular with a preeminent entry into the Central European market. We believe Hungary will assume a leadership role in attracting major western investment and that the availability of a world class mobile telecommunications capability will support that role."

Paul Kozlowski, president and CEO of Contel Cellular, and executive vice president of Contel Corp., said, "Contel Hungaria Kft. will provide telephone service to a country with tremendous demand for telecommunications service. Our cellular system will be designed to complement Hungary's existing wireline telephone network and will provide greatly improved service to a country viewed as the most receptive market for western investment within the Eastern Block."

The Contel Cellular Hungarian operation will be the company's second international venture, following Contel Cellular's earlier agreement to participate in a consortium to provide cellular service in the Mexican states of Sonora and Sinaloa.

Contel Cellular Inc., the sixth largest cellular telecommunications company in the U.S. in terms of market population, with 22.3 million domestic "POPs," is a sector of Contel Corp. Contel, a company with more than $3.0 billion in annual revenues and sales, provides a broad range of telecommunications products and services.

Dedication ceremonies for the new $3 million Data Center took place in conjunction with the company's annual stockholders meeting. Rose's also dedicated the L.H. Harvin, Jr. Learning Institute as part of the day's activities. Rose's Board of Directors participated in all of the dedication ceremonies.

The Rose's Data Center, located on Highway U.S. 1 Bypass, will maintain daily communication with all Rose's stores and will compile and compare information regarding sales, payroll, merchandise orders, promotions and administrative functions. In addition to the satellite network, the nine corporate offices in Henderson will be connected to the Data Center via fiber optic cable.

A special back room receiving system in each Rose's store is directly tied

According to Rose's Data Center Manager Jim Pizagno, the Data Center gives the corporate office decision-making power, which in turn benefits the customer.

The decision to build the new Data Center came about three years ago, Pizagno said, when the corporation began considering its long-term business plans and growth projections. At that time, Rose's conducted data processing activities from a leased building adjacent to the new Center.

The Data Center, open 24 hours daily, employs 70 Rose's associates who were brought over from the home office. It not only houses a top- rated data processing system, but also contains living quarters that can support its staff members for up to five days.

(VGI) today announced they have completed an agreement for satellite transmission service of the VISN network on SATCOM C-3, one of GE's next-generation satellites to be used to distribute cable television programming throughout the United States.

SATCOM C-3 and its companion, SATCOM C-4, are 16 watt, C-Band satellites that will be launched in 1992 to serve the cable television industry into the 21st century.

Started in 1988, VISN is a basic cable channel which includes faith and values-based programming representing all of the mainline religious groups: Protestant, Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox and Jewish. VISN is owned by the non-profit National Interfaith Cable Coalition based in New York.

VISN is totally self-supporting and has no on-air solicitations or appeals. The network has specialized programming for different age groups at specific and appropriate times during the day.

"VISN's initial success has been due in part to its comprehensive distribution system via GE's current cable satellite, SATCOM 3R. We look forward to the next-generation satellite, SATCOM C-3, with its higher power, broad reach and attractive programming neighbors; it's a major part of our growth plan," said Bill Airy, president of VGI.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Unocal (NYSE: UCL) said today that it has made appointments to scrap nearly two-thirds of the 7,000 vehicles it is seeking under SCRAP, the company's South Coast Recycled Auto Program.

As of May 22, Unocal has issued 4,506 reservations for the purchase and scrapping of model year 1970 and older automobiles currently registered in the Los Angeles basin. On average, these vehicles emit 15 to 30 times more pollutants than new automobiles.

The first vehicles are scheduled for scrapping on Friday, June 1. The company also announced that the California Community Foundation has begun receiving public donations for the SCRAP Fund, in response to Unocal's offer last week to match contributions in an effort to scrap an additional 200 vehicles.

To date, eight donations totalling $2,875 have been received. The SCRAP Fund, administered by the California Community Foundation, was established in response to a $700 contribution from Cypress Semiconductor and its chief executive officer, T.J. Rogers, who invited Unocal chairman, president and chief executive officer Richard J. Stegemeier to "buy and bury one for us too."

SCRAP Fund contributions to the California Community Foundation are tax deductible.

SCRAP is part of a three-point program that targets vehicle emissions in an effort to reduce air pollution in the Los Angeles basin.

Through the SCRAP project, Unocal is offering to pay $700 each for 7,000 Los Angeles area 1970 and older vehicles, which will be crushed and recycled. It is estimated that removing these vehicles from the road is the equivalent of removing up to 210,000 new automobiles.

The other environmental initiatives are Smog-Fighter, a program to offer free smog checks and low-emission tune-ups, if necessary, for pre-1975 automobiles, and Protech Patrol, which will circulate specially equipped vehicles on the area's freeways to aid stranded motorists and reduce vehicle emissions by helping relieve freeway congestion.

DEARBORN, MI (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - CMS Energy Corporation (NYSE: CMS) stated today that it is appealing to the courts the order issued today by the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) in connection with compliance with the MPSC's 1985 Financial Stabilization Order.

The company believes that its subsidiary, Consumers Power Company, has complied fully with the 1985 order including the specific requirement that $1.9 billion of utility debt be eliminated. Financial stabilization revenue collections were halted March 11, 1990, by Consumers Power when the requirements of the 1985 order were met.

CMS Energy believes that several important provisions of today's commission order are unlawful, particularly the attempted assertion of jurisdiction over the non-utility, non-jurisdictional assets of the company associated with the PURPA-qualified Midland Cogeneration Venture. In addition, the company believes that, even though the utility has recovered financially, and has satisfied the conditions of the 1985 Financial Stabilization Order, the MPSC is attempting to unilaterally and unlawfully impose further financial conditions on the company for the future.

The company continues to believe that its legal positions are strong, and that it will prevail in the courts.

CMS Energy Corporation is a $3 billion (sales) diversified energy company with businesses engaged in the distribution of electricity and natural gas interstate storage and transmission of natural gas, oil and gas exploration and production, independent power generation and utility services. CLEVELAND (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - At the 1990 annual meeting of Charter One Financial, Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS: COFI), holding company for The First Federal Savings Bank, shareholders today reelected four directors for three year terms each and ratified the appointment of Deloitte & Touche as independent auditors for 1990.

Reelected as directors were Otty J. Cerny, retired vice president of First Federal; Charles F. Ipavec, president of LaPorte and Ipavec Co.; Robert L. Moore, retired chairman and president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Portsmouth, Ohio; and Victor A. Ptak, a partner with and Cleveland office manager of the investment firm of J.C. Bradford & Co.

In remarks to shareholders, Charles John Koch, president and chief executive officer, noted the growth created when First Federal acquired Broadview Federal Savings Bank on May 18. As previously announced, the acquisition adds 16 offices to First Federal's Cleveland area division. It increases the bank's total state-wide network of offices to 71, its total deposit base market share by 40 percent and total assets by 56 percent.

Koch said the acquisition is a good fit. "Because the agreement with the Resolution Trust Corporation, the government agency that managed Broadview under federal conservatorship, enabled us to acquire only Broadview's strongest loans and actual deposits in place, the result is that both First Federal and Charter One will grow substantially with no dilution to shareholders' equity." He noted that the acquisition did not include the Broadview headquarters building.

Under the agreement, First Federal assumed the Broadview deposits and purchased only selected assets consisting primarily of non-delinquent residential loans, he noted. Broadview's customers may continue to use their existing checking accounts, teller machine cards and the services provided through the Cleveland area's Pick-N-Pay and Finast supermarkets.

With the acquisition complete, First Federal now ranks as Ohio's second largest thrift with total assets of more than $3 billion.

Koch concluded by saying that First Federal's favorable operating results and healthy balance sheet prior to the acquisition will enable the company to assimilate Broadview with ease and to develop the new earnings potential of the now larger First Federal Savings Bank.

Charter One Financial, Inc. is the holding company for The First Federal Savings Bank, which operates 71 offices in Ohio, covering the Greater Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown and Portsmouth markets, and in Toledo where the bank operates under the name People's Savings.

WESTLAKE, OH (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Nordson Corporation (NASDAQ: NDSN) announced today that sales for the second quarter ended April 29, 1990 were $88.6 million, a 21 percent increase over second quarter 1989 sales of $73.5 million. Earnings per share for the second quarter were $.75 compared to $.99 per share reported for second quarter 1989.

Earnings for the first half of 1990 were $1.45 per share on sales of $166.1 million. Year-to-date sales were up 17 percent over 1989. Earnings per share and sales for the first half of 1989 were $1.83 and $138.5 million respectively.

In commenting on Nordson's performance, William P. Madar, president and chief executive officer, stated, "Earnings for both the second quarter and the first half of 1990 have been affected by sales-mix issues.

Growth in shipments of adhesive application products through the first half of 1990 was significantly below the growth rate experienced in recent years. This softness was offset by strong sales gains in powder coating systems and sales of special engineered products to emerging markets. The resulting changes in the sales mix have had a negative impact on reported gross margins."

PHILADELPHIA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - "Whether you are fat or thin is primarily due to genetic influences," said Dr. Albert Stunkard, professor of psychiatry and director of the Obesity Research Group of the University of Pennsylvania.

Stunkard's latest research -- the first ever to study body weights of identical twins reared apart -- showed that two-thirds of the difference in body mass index (weight in proportion to height) can be accounted for by genetic factors. Stunkard's research findings appeared in the May 24 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The research, on Swedish twins, was carried out in collaboration with the distinguished Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, Sweden, and Pennsylvania State University. It studied 93 pairs of identical twins reared apart, 154 pairs of identical twins reared together, and 426 pairs of fraternal twins reared either apart or together. Said Stunkard, "Identical twins reared together are very, very similar in weight. But we didn't know whether the twins were similar because of similar rearing or because of similar genes. Only identical twins reared apart can give you the answer, and it is that the similarity is purely genetic."

The researchers found that the family environment in which the twins were raised did not contribute to the similarity of the twins' body mass later in life. This means that genetic factors far outweigh the importance of childhood rearing practices in determining whether a person will be fat or thin. Said Stunkard, "If one twin was overweight, his or her twin would also be overweight, regardless of the environment in which they were raised. The same thing holds true for the identical twin who was thin. His or her twin would also be thin regardless of how they were raised."

Stunkard emphasized that the lack of environmental influence was confined to the family environment in which the twins were raised. Environmental influences in adult life accounted for one-third of the body weight of these twins and these influences are important both in promoting obesity and in controlling it. Said Stunkard, "One important environmental influence is treatment, and clearly treatment can help people to lose weight, even though the genetic influences may limit the range of possible weight loss."

Twins for the study were identified through the Swedish Twin Registry, which includes nearly 25,000 pairs of the same-sex twins born in Sweden between 1886 and 1958. Co-authors of this paper are Drs. NEW YORK (MAY 23) PRNEWSWIRE - Estee Lauder, Inc., widely recognized as the largest retailer of department store cosmetics, faxed a policy statement to People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) this morning announcing a permanent end to product tests on animals.

The company had announced a moratorium on animal testing in March but called the ban permanent only after increased pressure from consumers, PETA said.

The ban on animal tests applies to all Estee Lauder companies, including Clinique Laboratories; Aramis, Inc.; and Prescriptives, Inc. The statement of assurance, received by PETA from Estee Lauder Consumer Relations Vice President Theresa Sullivan, states that in vitro assays have replaced the Draize test to ensure occular safety and human volunteers are being used for skin irritation patch testing.

"This is a major victory for animals and consumers," says Kathy Guillermo, director of PETA's Caring Consumer Campaign. "Estee Lauder's ban proves that large cosmetics manufacturers can end animal testing immediately."

Proof of Estee Lauder's animal testing was established in the fall of 1987 when an undercover investigator from PETA documented abuses at a testing laboratory in Pennsylvania. Estee Lauder had contracted to have animal tests performed which included the Lethal Dose 50 test and the Draize eye irritancy test, PETA said.

The current target of PETA's international Caring Consumer Campaign, cosponsored by the International Fund for Animal Welfare, is L'Oreal. The latest action to educate the public about L'Oreal's animal tests was a "Celebrity Fax Week" earlier this month during which rock star Howard Jones, River Phoenix and stars from "Saturday Night Live" faxed messages to L'Oreal asking the company to stop testing its products on animals.

(NASDAQ: NDCO) announced that its subsidiary, Noble Bawden Drilling (West Africa) Ltd., has entered into a three-year contract with Shell Petroleum Development Co. of Nigeria Ltd. ("Shell Nigeria") for a specially designed high-pressure posted barge in Nigeria.

The company will modify its 25,000-foot posted barge "Lewis Dugger" to meet the bid specifications requiring 15,000 psi capabilities. The unit will be utilized principally in the inland waterways in the eastern region of Nigeria which is subject to significant gas pressures. The contract for the rig is for a three- year term with an option to extend annually. This contract, together with the previously reported contracts for a shallow-water jackup rig, which is 50 percent owned, and a posted barge, brings to three the number of offshore drilling units the company will put to work for Shell Nigeria.

The company also announced that it has received a letter of intent from Shell Nigeria to enter into contract negotiations for the employment of a fourth drilling unit, the company's posted barge "Chuck Syring." The company anticipates mobilization of this unit, located in the Gulf of Mexico at present, to commence early in the fourth quarter of 1990. HUTCHINSON, KS (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - On May 21, 1990, Doskocil Companies Incorporated (NASDAQ: DOSKQ) reported a first quarter 1990 consolidated loss from continuing operations of $7.7 million, and a 27 percent drop in net sales to $87.8 million, compared to earnings of $.7 million on net sales of $120.4 million for the same period of 1989. These comparisons however, did not refer to the revenue decrease occasioned by the sale of the company's Anderson Meats subsidiary in the fourth quarter of 1989. When adjustments are made for the disposition of Anderson Meats, first quarter sales from continuing operations increased slightly to $88 million from $86 million last year.

In response to voiced concern from shareholders, brokers and analysts, Theodore A. Myers, senior vice president and chief financial officer, provided the following background insight into first quarter sales and profitability of the company. "The originally reported sales decrease had not taken into account the loss of revenues of approximately $34 million from the disposition of the Anderson Meats subsidiary. Secondly, during the first quarter of this year, operations suffered from the cash constraints that led to the March filing for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code. Subsequent to that filing, the company was involved in re-establishing its relationship with customers and suppliers. This process, while essential, nevertheless slowed down business momentum."

Myers continued, "Our bottom line was negatively impacted by a charge of $1.6 million attributable to reorganization expenses, the loss of about $1.8 million profit attributable to Anderson Meats, and escalating prices in the pork market. Despite these setbacks, we have great acceptance from our customers; our basic business is very sound, and we believe most of our difficulties are behind us."

REDMOND, WA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Eddie Bauer, a specialty retail and catalog company offering active lifestyle apparel and outdoor gear for men and women, will open a new store in the Chesterfield Towne Center mall in Richmond, Va., on Tuesday, May 29. This is the first Eddie Bauer store in the area.

"We are quite pleased to be in the Richmond area," said Rick Fersch, the company's senior vice president in charge of store development. "We believe our classic, traditional apparel -- what we call 'weekender wear' -- and our outdoor wear will be extremely pleasing to the shoppers here."

A number of local people will be employed in the store, said Fersch, with that number increasing during seasonal and holiday peak periods. Virginia Collie will be store manager.

More than 95 percent of Eddie Bauer products are private-label goods, that is, exclusively made only for Eddie Bauer. Many of the garments and accessories are designed by the company's in-house product development group, located near Seattle, and then closely monitored by the company's quality assurance team. "We believe we bring more value to the customer by offering private-label clothes and accessories," said Fersch.

The 6,000-square-foot store is one of 60 Eddie Bauer stores scheduled to open in 1990, the company's 70th year in business. For the past two years Eddie Bauer has made a substantial commitment to retail store expansion into major retail markets in the United States and Canada. EL PASO, TX (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - El Paso Refinery L.P. (the "Partnership") (NYSE: ELP) announced today that it has entered into a definitive agreement to acquire 100 percent of the outstanding common stock of TM&S Oil Co. (TM&S), a multi-branded retailer and wholesaler of fuel and lubricants in the El Paso area, in exchange for 260,000 newly-issued unregistered Cumulative Participating Preferred Units.

TM&S' operations include nine modern, high-volume retail units branded Shell or Texaco and the distribution of nationally-branded lubricants. The company will be maintained and operated as an autonomous subsidiary of the Partnership. TM&S' expertise in retail operations has made retention of existing management a key element of the transaction which is currently anticipated to close June 1, 1990.

TM&S reported net income of $470,000 on sales of $42.9 million for its fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1989, after deducting depreciation and amortization of $526,000.

The General Partner anticipates that the after tax operating cash flow of TM&S will exceed the associated increase in the base distribution requirements on the newly-issued Preferred Units.

Accomplishing this acquisition with Preferred Units has further strengthened the Partnership's capital structure and allowed retention of currently-invested funds for refinery capital expansion.

On Nov. 1, 1989, the Partnership assumed the refining operations and assets of El Paso Refining Inc. in connection with the sale to the public of a 43 percent limited partnership interest in the Partnership. The Partnership raised net proceeds from the offering of approximately $127 million which are being utilized primarily for the expansion of the Partnership's El Paso refinery from 26,000 barrels per day to 55,000 barrels per day. Expansion of the refinery is progressing on schedule with completion of the initial phase anticipated in the summer of 1991.

SACRAMENTO, CA (MAY 23) PR NEWSWIRE - Mobil Oil Corp. (NYSE: MOB) has become the fifth major motor fuel retailer in California to make methanol available for the state's alternative fuels demonstration program.

Mobil will join the state Energy Commission in installing methanol dispensers at up to 10 stations in Southern California by 1992.

ARCO Petroleum Products Co. and Chevron U.S.A. -- the two largest gasoline retailers in California -- are already dispensing methanol at 18 different locations throughout the state.

Exxon and Shell have plans to distribute methanol by the end of this year.

Mobil's commitment means that as many as 69 methanol dispensers will be installed in California by 1992.

Mobil and the Commission will jointly select the sites based on strategic geographic locations and demand for the fuel by California's methanol-fueled vehicles.

Energy Commission Chairman Charles R. Imbrecht, a member of Gov. Deukmejian's California Advisory Board on Air Quality and Fuels and co-chair of the United States Alternative Fuels Council, said that the Commission has long recognized the need to introduce cleaner alternative transportation fuels in California.

The Commission has helped bring together oil companies, auto manufacturers and methanol suppliers to test and demonstrate methanol as a cleaner alternative to gasoline in motor vehicles.

"Government, industry and academic experts recognize that methanol holds great promise as an air quality strategy. Public/private partnerships are the most effective way to obtain the data we need to clean up our air and improve our quality of life," Imbrecht noted.

"Methanol also has the important additional benefit of reducing our dependence on oil," he added.

More than two-thirds of the state's 750 methanol-fueled vehicles are in Southern California fleets. General Motors has agreed to supply California's public and private fleets with 2,220 variable fuel vehicles by 1992.

A similar agreement is being pursued with Ford Motor Co., which has already supplied the demonstration program with more than 200 fuel flexible vehicles. The Commission expects to have 5,000 fuel flexible vehicles on California highways by the end of 1992.

With a recent 10 percent reduction in the wholesale cost of methanol supplied to the state's 8 million gallon fuel methanol reserve, methanol's costs are equivalent to premium gasoline.

Four suppliers have each agreed to supply 2 million gallons of fuel grade methanol to the reserve, which is administered by the Commission and provides methanol for the state's demonstration programs.

Delivery terminals are located in northern and Southern California. Methanol is a clean, odorless fuel that can be produced from domestic resources such as natural gas and biomass.

Mobil will dispense M85, a methanol fuel which is 85 percent methanol and 15 percent unleaded gasoline.

Mobil will share the cost of dispensing M85 by paying for installation, operation and maintenance of the equipment.

The state pays for all methanol storage and dispensing equipment at station sites.

CAIRO, EGYPT (MAY 22) UPI - Israeli Labor Party leader Shimon Peres said Tuesday that he opposes the settlement of Soviet Jews in the Israeli-occupied territories, and suggested they be settled in Israel's Negev desert.

Peres made the remarks in a statement at the opening of a two-day Socialist International conference in Cairo. Egypt's Middle East News Agency carried the text in Arabic.

''I do not support settling Soviet Jews in the Israeli-occupied territories. ... They should be settled in the Israeli Negev desert,'' Peres was quoted as saying. ''The size of the West Bank and Gaza is not more than 4,000 square kilometers, while half of Israel is not populated.

''When the Labor Party was in a ruling coalition with Likud, it opposed the establishment of settlements in territories in which Palestinians live '' he said.

Peres, who also met with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak on Tuesday, praised the policy of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on Soviet Jewish immigration.

But Mubarak, in an opening statement at the same conference, urged Socialist International to confront what he called the dangers of mass Soviet Jewish migration.

''I think that Socialist International must confront the dangers of Soviet Jewish migration to the occupied Palestinian territory, which threatens to torpedo the peace process and puts the whole area on the edge of a fresh, bloody confrontation,'' the Egyptian president said.

The Israeli government has said it does not encourage new migrants as a matter of policy to settle in the Israeli-occupied territories, but allows them to do so if they wish. Arabs fear mass migration to the territories will reduce Palestinian chances of statehood.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (MAY 23) UPI - An accused drug trafficker trying to flee from police custody in southern Thailand was killed Tuesday in a gunfight that left two other people dead and 10 wounded, police said.

The suspect, Suphon Phetchara, and his younger brother, who attempted to free him, were gunned down in the battle, and a police warrant officer was also killed, said a police spokesman in Songkhla, 480 miles south of Bangkok.

The brother, Sunthorn, 20, pulled a gun to free the suspect as authorities transferred him from the provincial court, according to police and government television reports.

The pair escaped in a pickup truck while firing a stream of bullets, but they got less than 500 yards before crashing into a car, police said.

Equipped with five assault rifles, a grenade launcher, two pistols and a number of hand grenades, they opened fire from behind their truck at the police and naval personnel who surrounded them. A gunbattle raged for more than half an hour. In addition to the three killed, 10 people were wounded police said.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 24) UPI - Carole Bayer Sager and Toni Wine's ''A Groovy Kind of Love'' was named Song of the Year Tuesday night by BMI, symbolic of its having been the past year's most played pop composition.

Antonio ''L.A.'' Reid and Kenneth ''Babyface'' Edmonds were named Songwriters of the Year, and EMI Music Catalogs was named Publisher of the Year at the annual black-tie gala, which this year celebrated BMI's 50th anniversary.

BMI is the world's largest performing rights organization, representing more than 100,000 songwriters, composers and publishers from around the world in all areas of music. The organizations keeps track of the number of times a song is played on the air, and collects the royalties for the artists.

The organization also presented a 5-million-performance award to Richard Addrisi, who wrote ''Never My Love'' with his late brother, Donald. The song is only the second in BMI's repertoire to reach the 5 million airplay milestone on U.S. radio and television. ''Yesterday'' by Paul McCartney and John Lennon was the first.

''A Groovy Kind of Love'' was first released in 1965 by The Mindbenders.

Reid and Edmonds won for such hits as ''Every Little Step,'' ''The Lover in Me,'' ''On Our Own,'' ''Roni,'' ''Secret Rendezvous,'' ''Superwoman,'' and ''The Way You Love Me.''

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (MAY 23) UPI - Through two games of the Eastern Conference finals, the best guard has not been the flashiest or the one with the biggest media presence.

In fact, the best of the backcourt man has been the quietest - Joe Dumars.

Dumars scored 31 points and again provided solid defense on Michael Jordan Tuesday night, leading the Detroit Pistons to a 102-93 victory over the Chicago Bulls and a 2-0 lead in their Eastern Conference final series.

The best-of-seven series switches to Chicago for afternoon games Saturday and Monday. The Bulls are 5-0 in the playoffs at Chicago Stadium.

Dumars, who scored 27 points in Game 1, held Jordan to just 20 points. Jordan entered the game averaging 40 points, but has scored just 28 in the last six quarters against Detroit.

In the first two games Dumars has outplayed the more visible guards - Jordan and teammate Isiah Thomas. Dumars has scored 58 points on 24 of 40 shooting from the floor. Jordan has scored 54 points (17 of 43) and Thomas just 18 (5 of 21).

''I've had two really good scoring games,'' Dumars said. ''I'm in a pretty good rhythm and the guys are going out of their way to get me the shots.''

''He's getting a lot of open shots and putting them down,'' Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said of Dumars. ''He's got desire and pride and he's got great determination.''

Vinnie Johnson added 18 points off the bench for the Pistons. Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant each scored 17 for Chicago.

The Detroit defense was again stifling, holding the Pistons to 31 of 76 shooting from the floor (41 percent). The Pistons were also the more aggressive on the borads, outrebounding the Bulls 44-35.

Jordan made his impact felt for the first time since the first half of Game 1 as he paced a 15-4 run to open the third period. Jordan scored 6 points and Stacey King 5 in the surge that brought Chicago within 57-53 with 7:00 left in the third.

''He came out in the second half very aggressive,'' Daly said. ''He was finding guys all over the place.''

A 3-point basket by Craig Hodges gave the Bulls their first lead of the game at 67-66 with 3:35 remaining. But Detroit held Chicago scoreless from the field the rest of the period and led 74-69 entering the final period.

''We played our type of game in the third quarter,'' Chicago Coach Phil Jackson said. ''But at the end we came back down and played to their defense.''

Dumars hit two jumpers and Mark Aguirre sank two free throws to put Detroit up 80-69 with 10:28 left. Grant hit a jumper, the Bulls' first basket in over five minutes, to start a 9-3 surg to cut the Detroit lead to 83-78 with 6:34 left in the game.

Two free throws by Jordan with 4:42 left again brought the Bulls within 5 points, but Johnson converted a 3-point play to bring the lead to 8 and Detroit the outcome was never in doubt after that.

The Bulls' committed themselves to involving players other than Jordan in the offense in the first half and suffered from the strategy. The All-Star guard, showing no ill effects from his bruised hip in Game 1, took just 5 shots from the field in the opening period and converted but 1.

For the half Jordan had 7 points on 2 of 7 shooting from the field. The rest of the team was as inept, hitting just 12 of 34 shots from the field (35 percent) and trailing 53-38 at intermission.

''He's not shooting the ball well,'' Jackson said. ''You could tell from the start. He hurt his writs in that fall that hurt his hip.''

Dumars guided the Pistons attack in the first quarter, scoring 10 points in a 13-4 run that helpted Detroit to a 27-18 advantage after one period. Chicago continued to be stymied by the Detroit defense in the second period, while the Pistons reserves took over. Of the 26 Detroit points scored in the quarter, 16 were by reserves. Johnson led the way with 10 points.

The Bulls will have until Saturday to rectify their deteriorating outlook. But Grant struck an ominious note as the team prepared to fly back to Chicago.

''We have some guys who don't know what the playoffs are about,'' he said. ''They know who they are.''

(MAY 23) UPI - On the witness stand, Ivan Boesky admitted Tuesday he used inside information to trade securities, and knew it was illegal. This was the former Wall Street king's first public admission of a crime. Boesky settled charges of his inside trading by turning government informant in 1986. He testified in New York against former business associate John Mulheren. But he said Mulheren did NOT know he was getting inside information.

Three iron workers were killed and a fourth was seriously injured Tuesday when a network of steel girders collapsed at a construction site at Ohio State University. Officials say the top floor of the stucture fell on the men installing beams below. The tragedy occured at the 50-Million-dollar Prime Site Computer Facility... a state-of-the-art, four-story operation designed to serve six state agencies.

EDMONTON, Alberta (MAY 23) UPI - Glenn Anderson and Mark Messier collided in the first 19 seconds, then spent the rest of the game bumping the Bruins toward a summer vacation.

Anderson and Messier combined with linemate Craig Simpson for 11 points Tuesday night, putting goaltender Bill Ranford and the Edmonton Oilers on the verge of the Stanley Cup with a 5-1 victory over Boston.

Only one team - the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs - ever rebounded from a 3-1 deficit to win the Cup.

Anderson and Simpson each scored two goals with two assists, and Messier added three assists.

Messier regained the playoff scoring lead with 30 points, followed by Simpson's 29. On his first shift, however, he drilled Anderson while trying to hit Boston defenseman Glen Wesley.

''I tried to hit Wesley, obviously,'' Messier said of the collision. ''And he moved and I got a piece of Glenn and knocked the wind out of him. It didn't seem to bother him too much.''

Messier is know as one of the stronger checkers in the league. When Anderson was asked if he realized he had been hammered by Messier, he said ''Yup. I don't think anybody else could have done it. But I didn't see him.''

After that shift, Messier played anything like a person being hampered by injury.

''I'm sure Messier is the MVP of the National Hockey League,'' Edmonton Coach John Muckler said. ''He came up big again tonight. You can only hold him down so long. He took the challenge in the must game.''

For the first time in the series, Boston failed to apply strong forechecking in the first period.

''Obviously it's not the position we wanted to be in,'' Boston Coach Mike Milbury said. ''Now we go back to Boston. I thought we got beat in every phase of the game.''

Edmonton can clinch its fifth Cup in seven years Thursday night in Boston Garden.

Simpson set up Anderson's two goals then scored himself, giving the Oilers a 3-0 lead in the first 21 minutes.

''This was our biggest game,'' Simpson said. ''We had to win it and the first goal was the key. Andy was great and Messier was flying.''

''We expected to play a lot better,'' Boston defenseman Ray Bourque said. ''They were the better team tonight. To have a chance, we must forecheck them. They got out of their end like we weren't there.''

Ranford made 24 saves and had a shutout until John Carter scored with 4:58 left to make it 4-1.

Anderson's first goal moved him past Denis Potvin into sixth place on the career playoff scoring list with 165 points. His second goal came off a feed from slumping captain Mark Messier, who assisted three times in his best game of the series.

Simpson's second goal came in the final 84 seconds of the game and moved him past Washington's John Druce for the playoff lead with 15 goals. He and Anderson each added two assists, and Esa Tikkanen scored his 13th playoff goal for Edmonton.

Ranford stopped 11 shots in the second period when Boston had enough chances to get back in the game. Ranford, favorite for the Conn Smythe Trophy if the Oilers take the Cup, survived a first-period bid when Bobby Carpenter's try went behind him and through the crease.

He also weathered a couple of scrambles and continued his hex over sniper Cam Neely, who failed on a second-period attempt from the right circle.

Andy Moog was the victim of the Edmonton barrage, and the former Oilers goalie was taunted by the crowd of 17,503.

Despite Edmonton's 3-0 lead, Boston forced Ranford to sparkle in the second period. He stopped Randy Burridge from the slot, denied Brian Propp on a breakaway, and snagged Dave Christian's 45-footer. In the final minute, he completely lost track of the puck, and it had to be cleared by his defense.

Shortly thereafter, Tikkanen put the game away by beating Moog from the left faceoff dot.

The first fighting penalties of the series were handed out when Boston's Don Sweeney and Steve Smith of Edmonton were sent off the ice in the third period.

Canseco's grand slam in the sixth inning and his RBI single accounted for all of the Athletics' runs Tuesday, lifting Oakland to a 5-4 victory over the Blue Jays.

''I like this ballpark, it's electric,'' Canseco said. ''If I played here all the time, 60 homers wouldn't be safe.

Though the Athletics only return to Toronto once more during the regular season, Maris's record still may not be safe. Canseco's first career grand slam - playoffs excluded - was his 15th homer of the year and moved him one behind major league leader Cecil Fielder. At his current pace the slugger would have 64 homers by year's end.

''It's a great park to hit in,'' Canseco said. ''Line drives will go out.''

Canseco's smash went to the deepest part of center field, off the third deck restaurant window. One day earlier, he belted a three-run homer over the left field fence to help sink Toronto 4-1.

Canseco likes to spray his shots around the SkyDome, improving on his distance and accuracy. People still talk of his homer into the upper deck in the playoffs against Toronto last year but Canseco thinks he can do better.

''Hopefully next time I'll hit the scoreboard,'' Canseco announced.

He ranked the slam second on his ''best homer'' list.

''I'd rank this as No. 2 behind the one I hit in the World Series,'' Canseco said.

He was referring to his first grand slam, in the opening game of the 1988 World Series against the Dodgers.

''I don't rank them by distance but by importance,'' he said.

Canseco's eight RBI in the two game series boosted his season total to 39, tops in the American League.

Canseco's heroics made a winner of Curt Young, 2-1, who gave up three hits - all solo home runs - over 5 2-3 innings. He struck out one and walked none. Dennis Eckersley, went the final inning for his 11th save.

While Canseco scored four at once, Toronto blasted four solo shots - two by Kelly Gruber and one each by Manny Lee and Junior Felix. The Blue Jays completed a disasterous 1-7 homestand.

''There's no reason to panic,'' Gruber said. ''We can't put too much pressure on ourselves.''

Toronto's Frank Wills, 3-2, took the loss as he relieved starter Jimmy Key who left with a mild hamstring pull in the fourth.

Elsewhere in the American League, Milwaukee shaded Seattle 3-2, New York downed Chicago 5-2, Texas edged Boston 5-4, Baltimore mauled Minnesota 10-2, California clobbered Cleveland 8-3 and Detroit outscored Kansas City 9-8.

In the NL it was: Chicago 2, Cincinnati 1 in 16 innings; Philadelphia 4, San Francisco 2; New York 8, Los Angeles 3; Montreal 6, San Diego 1; Atlanta 4, St. Louis 3 and Pittsburgh 8, Houston 4.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Brewers 3, Mariners 2

At Milwaukee, Pinch hitter Bill Spiers singled home Glenn Braggs with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to lift the Brewers. Mark Knudson, 3-1, allowed two runs on seven hits for his first complete game of the season. Paul Molitor contributed a two-run double for Milwaukee and Ken Griffey Jr. belted his 10th homer of the year for the Mariners.

Yankees 5, White Sox 2

At New York, Bob Geren hit a three-run homer and Steve Sax doubled home two runs to power the Yankees. Dave LaPoint, 3-3, scattered seven hits over 6 2-3 innings for the victory. Dave Righetti gained his eighth save. Melido Perez, 3-4, took the loss.

Rangers 5, Red Sox 4

At Boston, Rafael Palmeiro drove in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly and Jack Daugherty had four hits to hand the Rangers their second win in the last nine games. Bobby Witt pitched the first six innings to raise his record to 2-5 and Jeff Russell earned his seventh save. Palmeiro delivered his RBI single off rookie starter Dana Kiecker, 0-1.

Orioles 10, Twins 2

At Baltimore, Joe Orsulak hit two homers and drove in a career-high four runs and Mickey Tettleton added a solo homer to power the Orioles. Reliever Mark Williamson, 3-1, allowed three hits in four innings for the victory. Kevin Tapani, 5-3, was tagged for eight runs.

Angels 8, Indians 3

At Cleveland, Wally Joyner hit a two-run homer and drove in four runs to lead the Angels. Joyner went 2-for-2 with an intentional walk against Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti, 4-2. Chuck Finley, 6-2, gave up six hits and three runs in 6 2-3 innings for his third straight triumph. Brian Harvey retired the last seven batters to earn his fourth save.

Royals 9, Tigers 8

At Detroit, Danny Tartabull's two-run homer capped a five-run seventh inning that enabled the Royals to snap the Tigers' seven-game winning streak. Steve Farr, 3-2, pitched three innings of one-hit relief for the win. Detroit starter Jack Morris, 2-6, blew a 6-3 lead and lost his fifth straight decision.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - House and Senate negotiators agreed on a long-awaited spending bill granting $720 million in emergency aid to Panama and Nicaragua, but a partisan battle on military aid to El Salvador threatened to delay the money.

The $4.3 billion supplemental spending bill containing nearly all of President Bush's emergency aid request for the two new U.S.-backed governments in Central America emerged Tuesday from a conference committee.

The supplemental legislation next heads back to the House and Senate for final passage before it can be signed by Bush, who requested the money months ago and demanded Congress act before its Memorial Day recess starting Friday.

The dispute over Salvadoran aid threatened to interfere with Bush's desire to get the money by his weekend deadline. The reason is that for Bush to send the money to Panama and Nicaragua, Congress either must pass a separate authorization bill or waive the need for one.

The supplemental spending bill contains such an authorization waiver, but the House Rules Committee could strip the waiver from the bill and Democrats were considering whether to do so.

Meanwhile, the House Tuesday took up a separate bill authorizing the aid for Panama and Nicaragua that also served as a vehicle for Democrats attempts to cut military aid for El Salvador in half.

The House first voted 250-163 for an amendment to the bill cutting the aid in what Democrats hailed as a sign of widespread support for their position.

But under heavy pressure from the Bush administration, the House then killed the bill 244-171 as Republicans combined with opponents of all foreign aid, or any for El Salvador, to reject the measure.

After the votes, Rep. Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., chairman of the Rules Committee and sponsor of the amendment cutting the aid, said he had not yet decided whether he would try to strip the waiver from the supplemental bill.

Congressional sources said earlier Democratic leaders did not want to be seen as blocking the foreign aid and would allow the waiver to go through. But Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., a leading Democrat on the issue, said, ''There's nobody out in the country screaming for aid to Nicaragua and Panama.''

The supplemental spending bill grants $420 million of the $500 million that Bush sought for Panama in January and the full $300 million that the president requested for Nicaragua in March.

Bush orginally sought $875 million in foreign aid. But congressmen tacked on amendments covering a variety of programs and causes - adding billions of dollars to the bill and raising issues ranging from abortion to Lithuania.

The delays prompted Bush to criticize Congress and to threaten a veto of the bill if it contained the Senate language allowing the District of Columbia to use local taxes for abortions - a provision dropped in conference.

The House bill provided $2.4 billion and the Senate price tag was $3.7 billion. The negotiators then made it $4.3 billion, adding money for flood relief and to make up a shortfall in the food stamp program.

Although the White House complained about the new spending, most of it was for mandatory programs and many of the other additions were backed by Bush.

Significant items in the bill include $1.2 billion for food stamps, $885 million for foreign aid, $529 million for the veterans programs, $433 million for firefighting and $216 million for disaster relief.

Bush last week stepped up pressure to pass the bill, calling on Congress to give up its Memorial Day recess if it had not completed action.

''For the people of Nicaragua and Panama, democracy hangs in the balance '' Bush said Tuesday.

Bush received a letter last week from Nicaraguan President Violeta Chamorro describing her government as bankrupt. U.S. officials also stressed the need to send seeds quickly to Nicaragua so farmers could plant before the rainy season, which usually starts in mid-May, but has been late this year.

The Democratic proposal on El Salvador would have withheld half of the military aid to that country in 1990 and 1991. El Salvador receives $85 million a year in military aid.

To encourage peace talks under way between the government and leftist rebels, all the aid would be eliminated if the government fails to negotiate in good faith or if there is a military coup. The government would get all the aid if the rebels attack, get foreign arms or fail to negotiate in good faith.

Military aid also would be eliminated if the government does not conduct a complete investigation of the murders of six Jesuit priests by the army. A House Democratic report last month said the probe was at a standstill.

(MAY 23) UPI - President Bush has demanded that an emergency aid package for Nicaragua and Panama be on his desk before Congress takes its Memorial Day recess, beginning Friday. Congressional negotiators agreed to a 720-Million-dollar aid package Tuesday, giving the president almost his entire request. But partisan politics in the House are threatening to delay final passage this week.

The House had NO trouble Tuesday passing a landmark piece of legislation outlawing discrimination against mentally and physically disabled people. The House affirmed the bill by a vote of 403-20. There are an estimated 43-Million disabled people in the United States. Maryland Democrat Steny Hoyer called the bill ''a significant and historical step forward for the disabled.''

Lithuania is refusing to give in to Soviet pressure. President Gorbachev met Tuesday with the presidents of Lithuania's neighboring Baltic republics of Latvia and Estonia. He pressed upon them the need for all three to suspend their declarations of independence. But the Lithuanian Parliament answered Gorbchev by rejecting his demand.

U-S officials issued their own warning on Lithuania Tuesday while attending the 13th annual meeting of the U-S-U-S-S-R Trade and Economic Council. The U-S officials offered their expertise in easing the Soviet Union's transition toward a market economy. But they were quick to add that any trade accord could be jeopardized if the Soviet blockade of Lithuania continued.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - The city's and state's top leaders have urged New Yorkers to join a color-blind campaign against bigotry to ease simmering racial tensions in the city.

More than 5,000 people jammed the Cathedral of St. John the Divine Tuesday night to hear Mayor David Dinkins call for a rededication to ''the values of justice, opportunity and caring,'' and Gov. Mario Cuomo blast federal budget cuts that have exacerbated urban woes.

''This is the time to come together to create a wave of energy and unity so powerful that it can wash away the hate and the hurt,'' the mayor said.

''I'm sick of the pain. I've seen too much. I need you to be my companions in this campaign for respect and unity,'' Dinkins said.

Cuomo, in a fiery speech, said New Yorkers must have a unified voice - and make it heard in the nation's capital.

To thunderous cheers, the governor said: "We should say, 'Mr. President, read our lips. We need your help and we are entitled to it.'"

The mayor had called the rally against racism, a ''town meeting,'' to promote what he has dubbed the ''gorgeous mosaic'' of the city's multi-ethnic culture. The rally lasted two hours, and drew political, union and religious figures from around the city.

A contingent of youths from a program housed in the cathedral's basement briefly drowned out the opening ceremony with chants of ''Stop the violence.''

Earlier Tuesday, Dinkins, speaking at a luncheon forum on integration sponsored by the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, invited the audience to join him at the evening rally.

''We Americans are held together by a long heritage of freedom, and we will not be divided by periodic spasms of bigorty and hatred,'' said Dinkins, sporting a blue ribbon in his lapel to symbolize the day of solidarity. ''That mosaic must be, can be and will be preserved.''

The rally comes in the wake of the two verdicts in the Bensonhurst racial killing case and a series of other racially divisive incidents in Brooklyn. The acquittal of the accused ringleader in the Bensonhurst slaying on murder charges last Friday night sparked a series of protests by blacks enraged by the verdict.

''We need to keep down the stupidity ... the ugly and dangerous instint,'' said Cuomo.

(MAY 23) UPI - Coca-Cola purchased full-page advertisements in newspapers across the country Wednesday, alerting consumers to a possible malfunction of the cash-containing cans used in its newest promotional contest.

The ads in the The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Los Angeles Times and several other major newspapers explain how to identify the so-called MagiCans, which are designed to pop out prize money when opened.

The ads said prize mechanisms may jam in some cans, and showed side-by-side diagrams of a properly working MagiCan and a malfunctioning container.

The ads said the mechanism ''in a very small number of MagiCans'' detaches from the inside of the can, preventing the prize from popping out. ''Rest assured, however, the mechanism can't come out of the can,'' the ads said.

The MagiCans, disguised to look - and sound - like ordinary Coke cans, contain chlorinated water instead of cola, the company said. The advertisements did not say whether the chlorinated water was dangerous, but said the liquid ''should not be accessible and is not meant for drinking.''

The company said more than a dozen people have reported defective cans and an 11-year-old Massachusetts boy said he accidentally drank the chlorinated water used to give the can weight, the Atlanta Constitution reported Wednesday.

The advertisements told consumers the chance of finding a malfuctioning MagiCan ''is extremely remote,'' but directed anyone who finds a malfunctioning can to call a toll-free telephone number for its ''MagiCan Information Center.''

The full-page advertisements, which carry a large headline saying ''Take a good look,'' told consumers to look inside Coca-Cola cans to make sure they contain cola, and to listen for a rattling sound inside the defective cans.

TOKYO (MAY 23) UPI - Japan has decided to withhold additional funding for construction of a dam project in India that may force resettlement of some 90,000 residents and endanger wildlife in the region, the national daily Tokyo Shimbun reported Wednesday.

The project calls for construction of the 479-foot-high Sardar Sarovar Dam on the Narmada River in Gujarat State in western India at a cost of $7.7 billion.

The paper said the decision followed an on-site investigation in March by the government-financed Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund through which addditional funds were to be provided.

India had been expected to ask Japan to provide an additional $968 million to purchase electricity generation equipment, the paper said.

The Foreign Ministry, which oversees Japan's official development aid, made the decision in view of growing opposition by local residents, supported by environmental groups in Japan and the United States, the paper said.

There was no immediate comment from the Foreign Ministry.

Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama told Parliament last month the government was still undecided on whether to provide additional funds for the project. He said the government will make a decision after obtaining information from the World Bank and the Japanese Embassy in India.

Construction of the dam started in 1987 after the World Bank decided to provide a loan totaling $450 million for the project. Japan pledged $18.4 million in official development aid in co-financing with the World Bank.

The World Bank asked India to submit a comprehensive package of measures to solve the problem involving resettlement of local residents by the end of June, the paper said.

Opponents of the project claimed forests will be destroyed and wildlife will face extinction if the project goes through. They also said some 90,000 people, mostly tribe members in the region, will have nowhere to settle.

SEOUL, South Korea (MAY 23) UPI - A man stabbed himself in front of the Japanese Embassy in Seoul Wednesday demanding that Japanese Emperor Akihito apologize for Japan's past colonial rule of Korea, the Yonhap News Agency said.

Dissident groups urged Roh to cancel his three-day Japan visit starting Thursday and some have threatened to ''use all means'' to stop his scheduled trip.

Police were on the highest level of alert in and around Seoul and have stepped up patrols around the Japanese Embassy and other key public facilities in the capital to thwart attacks and disturbances that dissidents may stage.

An unidentified man in his 30s came to the Japanese Embassy about 2:30 p.m., shouted ''apologize, Japanese emperor,'' kneeled and stabbed his abdomen with a foot-long knife, Yonhap said.

Police took the man to a nearby hospital where doctors said his life was not in danger, Yonhap said.

The National Democratic Alliance, a hard-core dissident group, said in a news conference that a Japan visit by former President Chun Doo Hwan in 1984 resulted in strengthening a military alliance among the United States Japan and South Korea and Roh's trip cause suspicion that he is pushing closer relations with Japan.

''We, along with the people, will use all means to block his trip because it is certain to create obstacles in the way of peaceful reunification of Korea,'' the Alliance said.

A coalition of 19 dissident youth organizations held a separate news conference and also urged Roh to cancel the trip. It also demanded firm legal protection for Korean residents living in Japan and Japanese compensation for Koreans who suffered under Japanese rule during World War II.

On the eve of Roh's scheduled departure for Tokyo, the two governments were still ironing out differences over to what extent Akihito should apologize for the 36 years of Japan's colonial rule that ended Aug. 15, 1945.

In Japan, Roh will call on Akihito and hold two rounds of talks with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu on pending issues including the legal status of Koreans living in Japan and Japan's perennial trade surplus with South Korea.

Roh will also address Japan's Parliament before returning home Saturday.

(MAY 23) UPI - The Ouachita River raged downstream Wednesday in Arkansas as the Trinity River crested a record 30 feet above sea level in southeast Texas, adding to the regional disaster spawned by weeks of rain and relentless flooding.

In Indiana, meanwhile, the White River crested 11 1/2 feet above flood stage, threatening the town of Hazleton in the state's southwestern corner.

The National Weather Service said the rain-engorged Ouachita, which flooded the city of Arkadelphia earlier in the week, receded rapidly Tuesday. The next target for major downstream flooding on the Ouachita is Camden, where the crest was expected to arrive Thursday at about 13 feet above flood stage.

About 34 homes were evacuated during the flooding in Arkadelphia, which washed out bridges and left two smaller communities isolated. The National Guard was sent in to help with cleanup efforts.

Worst hit by rain and flooding was Garland County in west-central Arkansas which was declared a state disaster area Tuesday by Gov. Bill Clinton after he inspected damage at the resort town of Hot Springs, where 13 inches of weekend rain sent 6-foot swells through downtown streets.

Springwater bathouses on the resort's Bathouse Row were closed because floodwaters swamped the National Park Service's thermal water treatment plant.

Tourism officials were trying to salvage the town's economy by scheduling a ''Save our Season'' event Friday to let travelers know the town was open for business despite more than $5 million in damage.

In Texas, the rampaging Trinity River was cresting Wednesday at a record 30 feet above sea level at the Liberty Bridge, Liberty City Manager Roy Bennett said.

Water management officials in southeast Texas said Tuesday they had been able to reduce the flow of water through Lake Livingston dam into the lower Trinity River, but that the level some 82 miles downstream continued to rise after hitting a record 6 feet above flood stage.

''We hope we're peaking out. It should start spreading out into the backwaters because there's no banks left for floodwaters to fill,'' said Jim Mitchum, Liberty County emergency management coordinator.

The floodgates at the Lake Livingston dam had earlier been opened enough to allow a record release of 100,800 cubic feet per second - more than five times the normal amount - because of the heavy rains. The flow has since been reduced to 91,300 cfs, according to the Trinity River Authority.

Forty-one Texas counties have been declared federal disaster areas during weeks of flooding. The American Red Cross estimates 4,600 homes in seven counties have been affected by the Trinity River alone.

In southwest Indiana, Gov. Evan Bayh declared a state of emergency Tuesday in Pike and Gibson counties because flooding threatened to contaminate drinking water for about 5,000 people. The National Guard was ordered out to help with emergency services.

But officials Wednesday said the levee at the town of Hazelton was expected to hold against the rising waters of the White River, despite several holes in it. Several homes had already been damaged, however.

Flood warnings were posted Wednesday for the Wabash River in Indiana, from Vincennes to New Harmony. Flood levels in the Mount Carmel, Ill., and New Harmony areas Tuesday morning were at the highest levels since March 1985 and the Wabash River was expected to rise a half-foot before cresting Thursday.

The weather service said flooding was affecting agricultural land and most local roads along the Wabash River. People were urged to move equipment and livestock to higher ground.

The flood level along the Kankakee River early Tuesday ranged from flood stage to about a foot above flood stage. The river started falling in most areas, but high water was still a problem along Indiana Highway 55 south of Shelby.

In other weather developments around the country, an approaching high-pressure system gave the South relatively clear weather overnight. Temperatures were mild, especially in Georgia, where brisk northwest winds spread drier air.

The NWS reported that Thunderstorms rumbled through the Great Plains early Wednesday. Thunderstorms, heavy rain, gusty winds and hail were reported over northeastern Nebraska and western Iowa.

Flash flooding was a concern in southern and eastern South Dakota, where heavy rains fell overnight. Temperatures ranged from 46 degrees at Custer, S.D., in the Black Hills, to 64 at Sioux Falls on the eastern border.

Light rain fell in northern Wisconsin, but to the south skies were clearing. Illinois and Missouri reported clear skies and temperatures in the 50s.

A low-pressure system in New England kept weather cloudy and drizzly, with unseasonable temperatures in the 30s and 40s.

The mountains of northern Maine and New Hampshire, dusted with light snow Tuesday, were covered with clouds and mist Wednesday. The coldest weather was reported in Houlton, Maine, on the Canadian border, where the temperature remained just above freezing at 33.

On the West Coast, a large and unseasonally cold storm from the Pacific Northwest was brought rain and some thunderstorms Wednesday to many of the western states.

HANOI, VIETNAM (MAY 23) UPI - Vietnam's Catholics paid homage to their late supreme leader, Cardinal Trinh Van Can, who was buried Wednesday at St. Mary's Cathedral.

Can, who was 69 and had been Vietnam's cardinal since 1979, died of a heart attack Friday, only hours after commenting that he felt tired.

He had been in good health, colleagues said, and was due to travel to the Vatican next month.

Wednesday's one-hour funeral procession and three-hour mass was officiated by French Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, a high-ranking Vatican representative. Etchegaray's participation underscored the long and once-strong relationship between Vietnam and French Catholics.

Can, who was born in what was North Vietnam, was always careful not to criticize the communist regime that suppressed Catholicism in the past and still does in many ways.

He was not among the hundreds of priests sent to ''reeducation camps'' after the communists reunified Vietnam in 1975, and he was allowed to visit the Vatican often, according to colleagues.

The deaths of Can and two of the country's three archbishops in the past two years leaves 81-year-old Archbishop Nguyen Van Binh of Ho Chi Minh as Vietnam's highest-ranking Catholic, until the Vatican makes new appointments.

Officially, the government says there are 6 million Catholics in Vietnam but unofficially, the church puts the figure at 8 million.

Can's death has given Catholics the opportunity to show their strength and devotion.

One priest estimated 1 million faithful had come to the crowded streets around the cathedral since Can's death. Priests and foreigners said they have never seen such a turnout in central Hanoi.

People began milling around the huge square in front of the cathedral Saturday, and as news spread that the cardinal had died, thousands more rushed in from the countryside. Only 3,000 a day were able to pass through the small room at the archbishop's house where Can's body was displayed.

The streets around the cathedral were closed early Wednesday. By the time the funeral procession began about 9 a.m., thousands of people, all wearing traditional white head bands, lined the strets. Other were perched on balconies, fences and trees.

Can's dark wood coffin, decorated with white plastic flowers, was carried in a long, slow procession from the archbishop's house to the cathedral.

Many in the crowd were obviously moved, and one group of distraught women followed the coffin wailing.

BOSTON (MAY 23) UPI - Harvard University has sold its shares in firms that manufacture tobacco, saying it could not justify investment in an industry that brings ''unjustified risk of harm to other human beings,'' a newspaper said Wednesday.

Harvard President Derek Bok publicly released the university's decision on May 18 in a letter to three students at Harvard's School of Public Health who had been demanding the school divest from firms that make cigarettes, The Boston Globe reported.

''In reaching its decision, the corporation was motivated by a desire not to be associated as a shareholder with companies engaged in significant sales of products that create a substantial and unjustified risk of harm to other human beings,'' Bok said in his letter.

Bok said the decision to divest was made in September 1989 and the sales were completed in March.

Bok also said the tobacco companies had not adequately responded to the university's questions about ethical issues involving the sale of tobacco and the firms' adherence to World Health Organization guidelines for marketing tobacco products in the Third World.

Anti-smoking advocates hailed the decision as a moral and historic breakthrough.

''This is a historic event that can't help but send a message that there's something rotten about holding tobacco stocks,'' said Dr. Allan Blum, a Houston physician who is chairman of Doctors Ought to Care, a national anti-smoking group that advocates divestment of tobacco stocks.

''If the largest and most prestigious university in the country won't buy tobacco stocks on moral grounds, it's got to send a message to Wall Street there's something immoral about the industry,'' Blum said.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - More than 100 City University of New York students refused Wednesday to leave an administration building they occupied to protest budget cuts and officials explored legal solutions to end the impasse.

The students planned a news conference at City Hall to list their demands and an afternoon rally at the building they took over late Monday.

The intrusion is the latest in a series of demonstrations held at several of the 21 campuses that comprise CUNY since May 1 over the legislature's proposed budget cuts, but some campuses have issued separate demands relating to the administration of their schools.

On Tuesday, CUNY administrators reacted to the takeover of an upper East Side administration building with a demand of their own.

''The takeover is in violation of the Board of Trustee's rules and regulations for the maintenance of public order in university facilities '' said Chancellor Joseph Murphy and board chairman James Murphy in a joint statement.

''The students must vacate the building immediately. They are disrupting the functions of the university. Many of the issues raised by the students and their justification for the takeover represent concerns that the university is willing to discuss and respond to.''

A spokesman for the board said the university is ''exploring all its options'' on how to remove the students - including legal avenues.

The students responded with their own statement early Wednesday that said they would remain in the building and issued seven demands, including a call for the chancellor search committee to include minorities in their final candidates' list; a university-wide policy to protect students against ''police brutality on college campuses''; the resignation of Gerald Lynch, president of John Jay College of Criminal Justice; the hiring of a president at Lehman College ''who represents the ethnic composition of the student body''; funding for Medgar Evers College to operate as a senior institution, and that tuition for foreign students be rolled back to pre-1988 levels.

''We will not be intimidated,'' said one of the protesting students who asked not to be named, adding that about 100 students were involved in the takeover. She said the students hope to negotiate with ''a quorum of the Board of Trustees.''

''So far, they won't negotiate,'' she said.

One agreement came out of the budget summit meeting yesterday between Bush administration and congressional negotiators. They agreed any credible deficit-reduction package they approve must save up to 600-BILLION dollars over five years. That's about twice the amount in the latest budget proposal made by President Bush.

Idaho Democrat Ron Twilegar easily won his party's primary for the Senate nomination yesterday. Republican Larry Craig won his primary with a tougher fight. They will face each other in November. In the three-way G-O-P race for governor, Roger Fairchild has a small lead. Democratic Governor Cecil Andrus is unopposed in his party for a fourth term.

In addition, the report says the Defense Department is studying the safety of two other atomic missile systems. The report says the defective shells could've exploded accidentally while they were stored in Europe.

(MAY 23) UPI - F-B-I agents searched two Northrop aircraft assembly plants and a record storage facility near Los Angeles yesterday. The search was part of an investigation of Northrop's work on the F-Abomber. The Justice Department alleges that the aerospace giant fraudulently inflated its bills.

A coroner's court in London ruled that 47 people killed in a plane crash last year died accidentally. The court said the two pilots who shut down an engine they mistakenly believed was malfunctioning were NOT guilty of negligence. The British Midland Airways Boeing 347-400 crashed 120 miles northwest of London.

The wheels of a U-S-Air passenger jet broke through a concrete runway at the airport in Manchester, New Hampshire, yesterday. The airport manager says NO one was hurt... but the D-C-9 was stuck. (MAY 23) UPI - News from the nation's capital, across the country and around the world... details and developments from the wires of United Press International.

House and Senate negotiators finally have agreed on a long-awaited spending bill granting 720-Million dollars in emergency aid to Panama and Nicaragua... but the check still isn't in the mail.

A partisan dispute over military aid to El Salvador threatens to interfere with President Bush's desire to get the money by his weekend deadline.

Bush's emergency aid request for the two new U-S-backed governments is part of a four-point-three-BILLION-dollar supplemental spending bill passed yesterday by a congressional conference committee. The measure now goes back to the House and Senate for final passage before it can be signed by Bush.

The threatened cut in military aid to El Salvador is tied to the funds for Nicaragua and Panama. Democrats want to cut military aid to El Salvador in half in order to encourage peace talks currently under way between the government and leftist rebels.

If the administration is going to send the money to Panama and Nicaragua... Congress must pass a separate authorization bill or waive the need for one.

The conference-passed supplemental spending bill contains such a waiver... but the House Rules Committee could strip the waiver from the bill.

Committee Democrats are considering whether to do so in order to force the administration's hand on El Salvador.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - New orders for durable goods fell a sharp 4.1 percent, or $5.3 billion, in April, because of declining orders for motor vehicles and aircraft, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

The decline, which was more than twice what several economists had expected, followed increases of 6.5 percent in March and 2.4 percent in February. In January, durable goods orders slipped 10.5 percent. The department attributed the volatility of the orders to the transportation equipment industry.

April's total orders of $123.3 billion was within the $125 billion range that durable goods orders have been in since the beginning of 1989, the department said. Durable goods are big-ticket items, such as automobiles, machinery, aircraft and other items intended to last at least three years.

Orders for transportation equipment slipped 14.3 percent, or $5.3 billion, in April to $31.6 billion. Both the motor vehicle and aircraft industries posted slower orders.

Non-electric machinery and primary metals orders also posted declines. Orders for non-electric machinery dropped 2.5 percent, or $600 million, to $21.8 billion, while primary metals orders were down 1.5 percent, or $200 million, to $11.6 billion.

Increased orders for defense communications equipment pushed up overall orders for electrical machinery, which gained $900 million, or 4.5 percent to $20.4 billion during the month.

Shipments of durables declined 2.3 percent, or $2.8 billion, to $122.1 billion in April. The department said durable goods shipments have been relatively flat since the beginning of 1989.

More than half of the decline in shipments was attributed to transportation equipment, which posted a five percent drop to $30.3 billion. Motor vehicles and parts contributed the largest share of the decreased transportation shipments, the department said.

Non-electrical machinery and primary metals shipments also were down. Shipments of non-electrical machinery slipped 3.4 percent, or $800 million to $22.3 billion, while primary metals shipments fell 0.6 percent, or $100 million, to $11.3 billion. Electrical machinery shipments increased 0.8 percent, or $200 million, to $20.4 billion.

April's unfilled orders increased 0.2 percent, or $1.2 billion, to $497.8 billion. Most of the increase was concentrated in transportation equipment while gained 0.5 percent, or $1.3 billion, to $269.8 billion. Unfilled orders for primary metals increased while unfilled orders for non-electrical machinery decreased.

New orders for non-defense capital goods declined 9.7 percent in April, or $4 billion, to $36.9 billion with the largest decrease posted in aircraft and parts. Shipments of non-defense capital goods were down 1.7 percent, or $600 million, to $35.5 billion.

Orders for defense-related capital goods increased 2.3 percent, or $200 million, to $7.9 billion. Shipments were up 0.9 percent, or $100 million, to $8.7 billion. Order backlogs decreased 0.5 percent, or $800 million, to $163.3 billion, the fourth consecutive monthly decline.

(MAY 23) UPI - Greyhound

Striking Greyhound workers made an unconditional offer to return to work and end their 12-week-old strike... asking Greyhound officials to just tell them when to report.

The union announced its offer yesterday in a letter to the Greyhound vice president in charge of labor relations, Anthony Lannie.

The letter from the president of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, Edward Strait, was on behalf of 93-hundred striking employees.

At Greyhound headquarters in Dallas, spokesman George Gravley said the company expects to respond to Strait's letter this week. But Gravley said the company has NO intention of allowing the striking drivers to take the jobs of replacement drivers hired since the strike began.

The offer puts more pressure on Greyhound management and the bus company's creditors to return to the bargaining table.

The unconditional offer to return to work is required under the National Labor Relations Act as part of the process in which a union makes its case that an employer is engaging in unfair labor practices.

Questions about the safety of three types of nuclear weapons are being asked in the White House and on Capitol Hill.

A published report today says the Defense Department is repairing defective W-79 nuclear artillery shells. Senior U-S officials and scientists say the shells could have exploded accidentally while stored in Europe.

The government discovered a defect in the Wrange artillery shells in early 1988 after the warheads had been deployed in West Germany, Italy and the Netherlands. Several hundred shells were disabled. And now they being repaired.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff last year secretly imposed handling and deployment restrictions on the Wrange missile carried by U-S strategic aircraft. Accidental explosions could release cancer-causing radioactive plutonium from the warhead.

The Department of Energy agreed last week to a congressional request for an independent inquiry into the possibility that the W-88 warhead could detonate if mis-handled in port. The W-88 is being deployed aboard Trident strategic submarines.

Some experts forecast that additional problems may be uncovered by special scientific inquiries ordered recently by Energy Secretary James Watkins.

MIAMI (MAY 23) UPI - Eastern Airlines plans to add new domestic routes and recall about 85 union pilots, the first recall since the 1989 strike that forced the carrier into Chapter 11 bankruptcy, The Miami Herald reported Wednesday.

Eastern trustee Martin Shugrue was expected to announce the plans Wednesday during a meeting with the airline's unsecured creditors, the newspaper said.

The meeting was to be the creditors' first with Shugrue since they persuaded a federal bankruptcy judge to take control of Eastern away from Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo and appoint Shugrue April 18.

Before recalling any pilots, Shugrue must first reconcile Eastern's union pilots, who have been out of work 14 months, with workers who crossed their picket lines.

Working pilots want returnees to come from a list of pilots who decided to cross the picket lines in August, but were shut out of jobs when Eastern stopped hiring. Union pilots think the new jobs should be filled by pilots on the union senority list.

Shugrue was expected to compromise by recalling from both lists.

As the creditors arrived for the meeting Wednesday, dozens of striking Eastern machinists marched peacefully outside the Coral Gables Hyatt hotel carrying signs that said ''No Contracts, No Peace, No Passengers.''

A machinists spokesman said the picketers bore no animosity. He said they wanted to show that they were ready to negotiate and to demonstrate their gratitude toward the creditors for their help in ousting Lorenzo.

''We're frankly welcoming them to Miami and thanking them for helping us get a trustee,'' he said.

Shugrue also was expected to report on his continuing efforts to find a buyer for Eastern, The Herald quoted an unidentified industry analyst as saying. The trustee has talked recently with both Pan American World Airways and Northwest Airlines executives about potential combinations, the newspaper said.

(MAY 23) UPI - Gun control advocates suffered a major defeat yesterday when the Senate voted 82automatic assault weapons.

The Senate now is left to vote this morning on a more limited crime bill amendment by Democratic Senator Dennis DeConcini of Arizona. His measure would ban nine of the weapons for a three-year period.

Said DeConcini... ''Assault weapons are rapidly becoming the weapon of choice for drug dealers. Our law enforcement officials are literally fed up.''

The California Democrat also stressed that semi-automatic weapons are NOT simply handguns or hunting guns. He says they have- quoting here- ''NO purpose other than to kill and kill effectively.''

Republican Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah led the fight against the proposals banning semi-automatic weapons. He says the issue is the right of law-abiding citizens to have their weapons. In his words... ''They have used semi-automatic weapons for over 100 years... law-abiding citizens who wouldn't hurt a flea.''

An oil company has agreed to pay the state of Alaska 175-thousand dollars as a penalty for operating tankers without oil spill response plans.

Alaska environmental officials say Union Oil of California operated its tankers in Alaska waters without state-required spill plans even after the Exxon spill- despite warnings from the state that it was cracking down on the industry and that NO tankers would be allowed to ship oil without such plans.

By agreeing to the out-of-court settlement, Unocal avoids criminal charges or a civil suit.

A Unocal spokesman in Los Angeles, Jeff Callender, says it's true the oil company did NOT follow the letter of the law. But he says there was NO intent to deceive. Callender characterized the violation as a ''misunderstanding'' and the settlement as a way ''to avoid litigation.''

And, he says- quote- ''Thankfully we did NOT have any spills.''

Joe Sautner of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation says the payment is the largest assessed against an oil shipper in Alaska for NOT having a state-approved oil spill contingency plan.

AMMAN, JORDAN (MAY 23) UPI - Prime Minister Mudar Badran, following an emergency Cabinet session, said the government would do its utmost to maintain order in Jordan where thousands of Palestinians have taken to the streets in protest of an Israeli's killing of seven Arabs.

In the latest violence to grow out of the mass slaying in Israel Sunday, two Palestinians were killed Tuesday in clashes with Jordanian security forces, the government said. Unofficial sources said nine Palestinians were killed Tuesday throughout Jordan.

Relative calm was reported Wednesday in Palestinian refugee camps, where residents said they would demonstrate peacefully during a weeklong mourning period for the Arabs killed in Israel and Jordan since Sunday.

''All areas are calm now except for a few small demonstrations in some of the refugee camps,'' a security official said.

Monday, Jordan admitted that police shot to death a 14-year-old boy. Sources in the Amman hospital said the boy was found with four bullets in the chest.

A second 14-year-old boy died during clashes Tuesday, Palestinian and family sources said. Both youths were reported to have been killed in the northern Jordanian city of Irbid, 50 miles north of Amman.

''Two people died during clashes (Tuesday) with police,'' the official Petra news agency quoted a government spokesman as saying.

The spokesman did not name the dead or say where they had died, only that the incidents occurred in various parts of the country and they ''fired shots at police officers.''

Officials at Palestinian refugee camps in Jordan denied that demonstrators fired at police, and accused Jordanian authorities of using excessive force.

Unofficial Palestinian sources told United Press International in Amman that at least nine Palestinian demonstrators died Tuesday in clashes with security forces around the country, bringing the total death toll in two days to 10.

The Cabinet held an emergency session Tuesday and Prime Minister Mudar Badran said afterward the government would take ''all measures to ensure law and order within the country.''

Some of Tuesday's clashes occurred when Jordanian police stormed the northern Jordan Baqaa Palestinian refugee camp to quell protests after Sunday's killings in Israel.

Witnesses said some 300 Jordanian riot police used 40 armored vehicles and fired live bullets to enter the Baqaa camp, home to some 48,000 Palestinian refugees, and demolished at least one house while the residents were still inside. Ten of the residents were injured.

The government did not immediately provide details of the number of people arrested, but said residents had burned hundreds of tires, raised black flags of mourning and were chanting anti-Israeli and anti-American slogans.

In other incidents, police sealed all roads leading to the city of Zerqa, some 10 miles north of Amman, after about 10,000 Palestinians marched to protest the weekend killings in Israel.

In Irbid, police dispersed some 15,000 demonstrators trying to reach

Yarmouk University. There were no immediate reports of casualties or arrests.

(MAY 23) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed higher Wednesday in moderate trading, bolstered by the strength of the Japanese yen against the U.S. dollar.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which gained 173.25 points Tuesday, added another 238.21 points to close at 32,176.51. The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Index of all listed major shares advanced 4.36 points to 2,394.95.

An estimated 650 million shares changed hands, compared with 550 million shares Tuesday. Advances outnumbered declines 584 to 356, while 185 issues were unchanged.

Brokers said the market gained some momentum from the advance on the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday and the strong showing of the Japanese yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange.

The U.S. dollar continued to slide in Japan on reports that a senior U.S. official said he favored the dollar's fall. In late trading, the Bank of Japan reported the dollar closed at 151.35 yen, down 1.05 yen from Tuesday's close of 152.40 yen.

Analysts said the dollar fell after David Mulford, U.S. Under Secretary of the Treasury currently on a visit to Tokyo, was reported as saying that he supports the dollar's depreciation.

Analysts said selective buying, triggered by the yen's appreciation, spread to cover broad sectors, lifting the market.

The fact that the market has been hovering around the 32,000 level for the past seven trading days without suffering a severe setback reflected its underlying strength, said Harushige Kobayashi, an official of Nikko Securities Co.

On the trading floor, constructions ended generally higher. Other gainers included autos like Toyota Motor and Honda Motor, shipbuildings such as Hitachi Zosen and Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries, foods, chemicals, and real estates. High-tech issues such as Sony and Kyocera weakened along along with some drugs.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices soared 1.93 percent on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange in one of the heaviest trading sessions in three months in reponse to reports that the United States will renew China's preferential trading status.

Stocks jumped more than 24 points in the first 15 minutes of trading, brokers said. The trend continued throughout the day.

The key Hang Seng Index, which climbed 40.04 points Tuesday, rocketed 57.44 points, or 1.93 percent, to close at 3,028.31. The broader-based Hong Kong Index climbed 36.72 points to 1,986.51.

Utilities rose 44.37 points, financials gained 14.74, industrials climbed 84.91 and properties jumped 86.32 points. An estimated 1.91 billion shares changed hands, compared with 1.19 billion shares Tuesday.

"The MFN question was a dark cloud that had been hanging over the market," said Howard Gorges, an analyst with South China Securities. "Now it looks like Washington is going to continue China's MFN status at least for one year and that news was responsible for most of the market's gains." China's loss of the status could cost Hong Kong firms billions of dollars.

Prices on the Singapore Stock Exchange closed slightly lower in active trading amid a spate of profit taking following three days of hefty gains.

The closely-watched Straits Times Industrial Index, which gained 7.60 points Tuesday, eased 5.64 points to 1,572.95. The narrower All Singapore Index slipped 2.15 points to 438.69.

An estimated 104.3 million shares changed hands, compared with 104.2 million shares Tuesday.

Analysts said the profit taking was anticipated and they expected the rally to resume.

Market watchers said most of the selling was in blue chips, the beneficiaries of the market's recent rebound. Smaller investors concentrated on secondary issues.

On the trading floor, Overseas Chinese Banking Corp. (foreign shares) led the decining issues, followed by Singapore Airlines (foreign shares) and Overseas United Enterprises.

G.B. Holdings led the advancing issues, followed by Keppel Corp. and Fraser and Neave (ordinary shares).

In Australia, stock prices closed higher in light trading on the Sydney Sharemarket.

The key All Ordinaries Index, which added 7.4 points on Tuesday, gained another 8.3 points to 1,473.7.

An estimated 66.7 million shares changed hands, compared with 65.1 million shares Tuesday.

Analysts said prices were boosted by the National Bank's decision to extended more time to Alan Bond to sell some of his subsidiaries.

According to analysts, the solution worked out, gives Bond Corp. ten weeks to complete the sales of its BBH subsidiaries to associate Bell Resources.

On the trading floor, ANZ Bank gained six cents to $4.76, Westpac added five cents to $4.79, Bell Resources ended unchanged 39 cents a shares, Brambles gained five cents to $13.15, and News Corp. closed unchanged $10.20.

NEW BRITAIN, CT (MAY 23) UPI - Stanley Works will plead innocent to federal charges the hardware giant conspired with three other companies to fix the prices of hinges sold nationwide, a spokesman said.

Stanley, Hager Hinge Co., McKinney Products Co., and Lawrence Brothers Inc. were indicted in St. Louis Tuesday for allegedly fixing prices in sales of hinges used to support heavy doors typically found in office buildings.

Five men also were indicted, including Richard G. Martin, president of Stanley's hardware division, and John F. Hollfelder, the division's former vice president for sales, who left the company in 1988.

"The Stanley Works and Mr. Martin intend to plead not guilty," the company said in a statement from its world headquarters in New Britain. "The company and Mr. Martin believe that they have meritorious defenses and they will defend themselves vigorously against the charges." The other individuals named are top executives of the three other companies.

The products, commonly called architectural hinges, represent a small part of Stanley's business, said Ronald F. Gilrain, Stanley's chief spokesman. Stanley has set up a reserve fund it believes is adequate to cover any potential costs from the indictment, he said, adding the company would not reveal that amount.

Stanley announced in July 1988 that it was a subject of the grand jury inquiry and said in Feburary that it had sent rebate checks to contract hardware customers who bought the hinges from January 1987 to May 1988. The company also declined to say how much was rebated, Gilrain said.

Stanley admitted no wrongdoing in making the refunds and the company was surprised by the indictment, Gilrain said. "We did not believe that we would be indicted," he said. "We felt that we had cooperated in the investigation and we are prepared to defend ourselves against the charge."

Stanley was indicted on one count of price-fixing along with Hager of St. Louis, McKinney Products of Scanton, Pa., and Lawrence Brothers of Sterling, Ill.

The indictment charges the companies and the officials conspired as early as April 1986 until at least April 1988 to fix prices of architectural hinges sold to wholesalers, contractors, and other customers across the United States.

COLUMBUS, OH (MAY 23) UPI - Federal safety officials say it will take at least two weeks to determine what caused a network of steel girders at a construction site to collapse, killing three workers and injuring a fourth.

The accident occurred Tuesday at the $50 million Prime Site Computer Facility under construction on the Ohio State University campus.

Rick Lombardi, vice president of Turner Construction Co., said the men were bolting steel beams to the structure when the top floor collapsed.

''The men were on the steel and fell into the hole,'' he said.

Lombardi declined to speculate on the cause of the accident, saying his company and OSHA were investigating. An OSHA spokesman said Wednesday results of the investigation will not be available for at least two weeks.

However, an unidentified state official told The Columbus Dispatch there were two possible explanations: the misdirection of a crane moving the beams, or a bolt shearing away from one of the beams.

Killed in the accident were Walter Darst III, 44, of Marengo, William Nicholson Jr., 24, of Lancaster and Robin Starr, 24, Columbus.

A spokesman said the fourth worker was in fair condition Wednesday at University Hospitals with head, arm and leg injuries.

The building will be a state-of-the-art facility to serve six state agencies and three elected state officials, enabling them to combine their computer operations with backup power and climate control. Their operations are now scattered throughout Columbus.

The four-story facility is located on a 15-acre site in Ohio State University Research Park, where the Ohio Supercomputer Center and the university's satellite communications are located.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) UPI - Ethnic Armenians in the Nagorno-Karabakh region used ballots smuggled into their disputed Azerbaijani enclave to vote for the neighboring Armenian republic's parliament in violation of the Soviet Constitution, news reports said Wednesday.

In an unsuccessful attempt to prevent the illegal voting in the election last Sunday, Soviet authorities detained Armenian activists smuggling ballots into Nagorno-Karabakh, shut down its main airport and placed under house arrest parliamentary candidates campaigning in the region.

Nagorno-Karabakh belongs to the republic of Azerbaijan but most of its 174,000 people are ethnic Armenians. The bitter dispute over the region's status has engulfed the two southern republics in periodic violence that has killed several hundred people since early 1988.

''The confrontation between the Armenian and Azerbaijani communities in the Nagorno-Karabakh Autonomous Region has not ceased, despite the apparent calm,'' the official Tass news agency said.

The independent Interfax news service said more than 94 percent of the 32,000 registered voters in 13 districts of Nagorno-Karabakh participated in the illegal polling Sunday.

Interfax said the ''documents related to the election campaign'' then were smuggled back into the Armenian capital of Yerevan so the illegal votes could be added to legitimate election tallies.

''According to Armenians, these elections were in fact a referendum that reconfirmed the right to independence,'' Tass said.

''The establishment of constituencies in another republic ... is at variance with Article 76 of the Soviet Constitution, under which a union republic exercises state authority only on its own territory,'' Tass said.

Within Armenia itself, in another indication of political tensions in the Transcaucasian region, the parliamentary voting ended inconclusively in most electoral districts, with most candidates failing to gain at least half the votes.

Interfax said only 74 of 259 races produced clear winners. It said runoff elections between the top two vote-getters will be necessary in 69 districts in which none of at least three candidates polled 50 percent.

Completely new elections, in which office seekers who did not run the first time can compete, will be held in 69 districts where no candidate got half the vote even though only two or fewer people were on the ballot, Interfax said. The results of 40 additional races were still not known by late Tuesday, it said.

Unlike the U.S. electoral system, voters in the Soviet Union can cross the names of all candidates off a ballot and it is still counted. Contests without popular candidates often produce no winners even in cases when there are only two people or a single individual seeking office.

Azerbaijani-led pogroms against Armenians in Baku and a local insurrection against communist rule led Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to order troops to storm the Azerbaijani capital Jan. 20 in a crackdown that left at least 159people dead.

Shootings have continued in Nagorno-Karabakh; snipers are firing upon military patrols and ''illegal activities have been stepped up on the roads,'' Tass said.

TROY, MI (MAY 23) UPI - Consumers will be given a $2 refund for each used car or marine battery they bring to a K mart store under a nationwide recycling program announced Wednesday by K mart Corp. and Exide Corp.

Exide will recycle the lead and plastic from discarded batteries to manufacture new battery products, the two companies said in a joint announcement. The program is scheduled to begin Thursday.

"K mart and Exide have always accepted junk batteries back when a consumer purchased a new Exide battery. This new program is an extension of our environmental consciousness," said K mart Chairman Joseph E. Antonini. Antonini said K mart has established battery depositories at its more than 2,200 locations nationwide.

DALLAS (MAY 23) UPI - The former chairman of Recognition Equipment Inc. has filed a lawsuit against the Irving-based company, claiming REI failed to make good on its promise of a "golden parachute."

Thomas Ringer - chairman, president and chief executive officer of REI between October 1988 and October 1989 - claims REI owes him at least $1 million in payments resulting from his dismissal from the company last year.

Ringer left REI after the New York-based Prospect Group increased its ownership stake in the company to 20 percent last October and installed its own management team to run the operation. Ringer's suit, filed Tuesday in Dallas federal court, claims REI has "failed and refused" to fulfill the terms of his employment contract.

Upon Ringer's dismissal, he received severance pay of $212,500. His minimum monthly salary under his employment agreement was $41,666, according to the company's 1990 proxy statement. Ringer's severance payment was based on 85 percent of his expected salary for a six-month period, according to the proxy. "We think we have paid him everything he is entitled to," said REI spokeswoman Jenny Haynes.

Ringer had been serving as REI's top executive in the place of former REI Chairman William Moore, who was on a paid leave of absence to defend himself against a federal indictment related to the award of a $400 million contract to build postal sorting equipment. Moore was acquitted in the case.

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN (MAY 23) UPI - Rockets apparently fired by U.S.-backed guerrillas slammed into the grounds of Kabul's leading hotel Wednesday, killing three employees, hotel managers said.

They said a front office manager, a driver and a security guard were killed by a rocket that exploded about 50 yards from the main entrance of the Intercontinental Hotel at about 10 a.m. The three men had walked out of the building to examine damage from three other shells that had hit the hotel grounds moments earlier.

Windows in the building on a hill overlooking Kabul were smashed but the blasts apparently caused no other damage.

The guerrillas have staged frequent rocket attacks against Kabul since last year that have killed more than 1,500 people, according to government figures, and cost the rebels good will among the civilian population.

Afghan officials said the guerrillas have stepped up the bombardments since last week to coincide with preparations for a traditional tribal grand council, known as a Loya Jirgah.

The meeting, which officials said should be held this week, was expected to approve constitutional changes committing the country to multi-party pluralism and removing references to the leading role of the Communist People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan.

The Loya Jirgah is part of a political offensive by President Najibullah aimed at making his regime more acceptable to the majority of the people.

The guerrillas, who are based mostly in Pakistan and backed by the United States and Saudi Arabia, have rejected Najibullah's peace moves and refused to negotiate or share power with members of the ruling party.

The rebels have had little military success despite the February 1989 withdrawal of Soviet troops backing the government, while Najibullah has defied Western predictions of his swift overthrow following the pullout.

(MAY 23) UPI - A nation-wide poll indicates the majority of the American people believe the country is on the wrong track. 60 percent are easy about the nation's future. The survey found 70 percent of the people believe President Bush is doing a good job... down from a 79 percent rating in January. 68 percent approve the way Bush is handling foreign affairs. 52 percent approve of the way the president is handing the economy. 49 percent say some taxes should be increased.

Neil Bush, the president's 34-year-old son, is scheduled to testify before the House Banking Committee today. His role as a top officer of a failed savings and loan association is under investigation by the congressional panel. Yesterday, the committee heard testimony that the president's son was a director of the Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan of Denver when it devised a plan to cover up devastating losses and inflate its capital.

The flood-swollen Trinity River in Texas is 10 miles wide in some areas today. The Trinity is cresting at a record 30 feet above sea level... a record six feet above flood stage... at the town of Liberty. The Liberty County emergency management co-ordinator, Jim Mitchum, says he hopes the river is peaking. The Red Cross estimates the Trinity flooded 46-hundred homes as of a couple of days ago.

In Arkansas, the Ouachita River is raging downstream toward Camden after receding at Arkadelphia, where 34 homes were evacuated. Two smaller communities are isolated by a washed-out bridge. Springwater bathhouses on Bathhouse Row in Hot Springs were closed because floodwaters swamped the National Park Service's thermal water treatment plant.

Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus will face former state Senator Roger Fairchild in the general election. Andrus had NO opposition in yesterday's Democratic primary as he seeks a fourth term. Fairchild won the G-O-P primary. In Idaho's Senate primaries, Republican Larry Craig and Democrat Ron Twilegar are the winners. One of them will succeed retiring Republican Jim McClure.

MINNEAPOLIS (MAY 23) UPI - Some 110 salaried employees in the Minneapolis-St. Paul operations of Honeywell's defense systems group will lose their jobs as of June 1, company executives said.

Tim Morin, a Honeywell spokesman, said Tuesday the layoffs "are part of an ongoing streamlining in order to maintain the unit's competitiveness ... in an increasingly difficult (defense business) environment."

The defense systems group is part of the defense and marine systems operations that Honeywell is seeking to spin off as a separate company. The group, which manufactures weapons, had about 4,000 workers in the Twin Cities before the layoffs. Morin said the current cuts are across-the-board, rather than affecting a particular weapons program.

The new cuts being to 310 the number of jobs eliminated in defense systems since last June, Morin said. Earlier cuts involved layoffs, retirements and attrition.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady told a Senate panel Wednesday that it could cost up to $57 billion more than previously estimated to bail out insolvent savings and loan institutions, bringing the total cost to as much as $130 billion.

Appearing before the Senate Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee,

Brady said in prepared remarks, that "there are too many unknowns to provide a single estimate of the ultimate cost" of bailing out thrifts that have already failed and those that may fail in the future.

"Taking into account all of the uncertainty and all of the variables, it appears that the cost of resolving institutions which are likely to come under the control of the (Resolution Trust Corporation) will be in the approximate range of $90 billion to $130 billion," Brady said. He emphasized that his estimates represent cost in present value, which does not include interest cost.

Brady's estimates are $17 billion to $57 billion more than the $73 billion provided in last year's thrift bailout legislation. That $73 billion included $50 billion to pay off depositors of failed thrifts from 1989-1992 and an additional $23 billion for thrifts that failed subsequent to 1992.

As for how the additional funds should be raised, Brady told the panel "the Federal Home Loan Bank system simply does not have the capacity" to back so much additional borrowing. "Additional resources will have to come from the Treaury funds," Brady said.

He said there appear to be "two basic choices" on how the money should be provided - giving a specified amount to cover some or all of the remaining losses or providing the RTC with whatever is necessary to complete the job.

"No matter how the funds are provided it will not change the cost of resolving the savings and loan crisis," Brady said. "This is not a discretionary activity; the government's deposit guaranties must be fulfilled," he said.

Brady said the administration plans to "stand behind the commitment made by President Bush in his first weeks in office - protect depositors, clean up the industry to the least cost of the taxpayers and punish the criminals."

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (MAY 23) UPI - NATO defense ministers agreed Wednesday to lower the ''readiness and availability'' of standing allied forces to reflect a drastically reduced risk from the Warsaw Pact.

''Clearly there is a substantial reduction in the conventional threat with substantially increased warning time,'' NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner said at the close of a two-day meeting of the alliance's Defense Planning Committee.

The meeting's final communique said a treaty on reducing conventional forces in Europe ''will virtually eliminate the possibility of a surprise attack on NATO as a whole.''

Assuming a further lessening of tensions, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said it was ''not unreasonable for us to conclude that we don't have to maintain the same state of readiness as in the past.''

The Defense Planning Committee, whose meeting preceded a July NATO summit in London, launched a fundamental review of the alliance's strategic position for the 1990s.

''We can now begin to reap the benefits of the greatly improved climate in East-West relations,'' the final communique said.

Faced with impatient electorates seeking peace dividends at home, the defense ministers scrapped an outdated rule that each country boost real defense spending by 3 percent annually.

''We have decided to take steps to lower the readiness and availability of a number of our standing forces,'' the defense chiefs said, adding they would also make ''substantial reductions'' in NATO training exercises.

Woerner stressed, however, the communique was not a signal for U.S. troops to leave West Germany, where most American soldiers are based.

''I would not draw an exaggerated conclusion,'' said Woerner, a former West German defense minister. ''This is not a message to go home.''

NATO officials declined to detail how force readiness would be lowered, saying such plans were classified.

But Cheney cited, as an example, the U.S. ability to ship 10 reinforcement divisions to Europe within 10 days, saying it may now be possible to ''rely on reserve forces.''

The defense ministers agreed to examine further use of multinational forces in Europe, which officials see as a way of dampening opposition in Germany to the continued presence of U.S. troops.

Stalled talks between NATO and the Warsaw Pact on conventional forces clouded an otherwise upbeat meeting. The conventional forces talks in Vienna have been snarled for weeks, which Woerner blamed on Soviet ''footdragging.''

''We have done all we could,'' he said. ''We continue to urge, to press, to make the necessary proposals.''

Cheney said he was hopeful the upcoming Washington summit between President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev would ''advance the cause'' of a conventional forces agreement.

The U.S. defense secretary said it was possible a conventional forces pact could be completed this year, but other defense ministers, including Britain's Tom King, were far more pessimistic.

A 35-nation summit of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe is expected to be held late this year, but the United States says it will oppose such a summit unless a conventional forces agreement is ready to be signed there.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - The federal tax system - especially its use of excise taxes and the Social Security payroll tax - treats working mothers and single women unfairly, a new study said Wednesday.

The study, commissioned by the Coalition of Labor Union Women, said the regressive nature of the payroll and excise taxes ''places an enormous burden on low- and middle-income families, particularly thosed headed by single women.''

''The administration and Congress must recognize that women will not fully realize economic opportunity until federal tax policy treats them fairly '' said Joyce Miller, president of the women's organization.

The report was released as Congress and the Bush administration sought to find common ground for a package of spending cuts and possible tax increases aimed at reducing the federal budget deficit. Most attention has been focused on increases in excise taxes - those that would harm working women and low-income people the most - as a major part of increasing federal revenues.

According to the study, co-authored by Arthur Lyons of Chicago's Center for Economic Policy Analysis and Helene Colvin, of the Strategy Group, also of Chicago, noted that women represent almost two-thirds of all adults living in households with incomes below $10,000 and hold 60 percent of the minimum wage jobs in the country.

''Under the current excise tax structure, a female-headed family with no spouse and one or more children under 6 years of age with a median income of $8,360 a year pays up to 14 times more as a share of income on excise taxes than does a family earning close to $100,00 a year,'' the study said.

Excise taxes - a sales tax levied on everyday-use products such as gasoline, telephone, tobacco, beer and airline tickets - is flat tax paid equally no matter the size of income.

Thus, those with lower wages pay a higher proportion of their income as taxes.

So, too, the payroll Social Security tax, which is currently levied at 15.3 percent on the first $51,300 of wages or salary. One half of the tax is deducted directly from take-home pay and the other half is paid by the employer. The maximum payroll Social Security tax paid by any employee in the United States is $7,711.20.

''For families headed by women who derive all of their income from working wages with an average income of $15,237 a year, the payroll tax estracts a share of income that is nearly 80 percent larger than the share of income from a family earning over $92,000,'' the report said.

The report said the federal income tax treats women more equitably than do other taxes because it remains somewhat progressive - based largely on an individual's ability to pay.

''However, there is still room to increase the progressivity of the income tax structure for middle-income families,'' the report said.

In addition, the report said that ''for all the good intentions'' of such legislative proposals as the Child Care Act, the Family Leave Act and raises in the minimum wage, ''America's working women will not achieve economic vaiability until federal tax policy treats them fairly.''

''As long as regressive taxes like payroll taxes and consumer excise taxes are relied upon as revenue sources, women and the children will continue to be economically repressed,'' the report said.

#90143u0973 05/23/1990 ~United Press International
WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - The U.S. government received an ''informal approach'' from the United Nations for permission to allow PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat to come to the United States, but the request was never followed up, State Department officials said Wednesday.

Richard Boucher, a State Department spokesman, said, ''No formal application was ever received.''

Anita Stockman, a State Department spokeswoman, said, ''Since there was no formal piece of paper received, no decision was made on whether a visa would be granted.''

A U.S. official, speaking on the basis of no further attribution, said that the United Nations ''made an informal approach Monday and made it clear that the United Nations supported the request.''

An administration official said that the United States did not say it would refuse permission for Arafat to come to the U.N. session. But the official said, ''We said we could not give any assurances that the visa application would be approved when it was formally received.''

Faced with the possibility of rejection of the application, U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar suggested moving the Friday session to Geneva.

A U.N. European headquarters spokesman said Wednesday the special council session would take place in Geneva even if Washington suddenly reversed past policy and gave Arafat a visa so he could talk at U.N. headquarters in New York.

The State Department in 1988 refused Arafat permission to come to New York for a U.N. appearance, because the Palestine Liberation Organization, according to Secretary of State George Shultz, ''had a history of violence.''

When the U.N. General Assembly met in Geneva, instead, Arafat used the occasion to renounce the use of terrorism and agreed to recognize the existence of the state of Israel. Those two conditions led to the opening of the U.S.-PLO dialogue, which has continued sporadically in Tunisia.

State Department officials said the United States would participate in the Geneva Security Council session Friday.

The Ud Nations has long protested the U.S. policy of denying Arafat a visa on grounds it violates the agreement under which the world organization was headquartered in New York with extraterritorial rights.

Seymour Reich, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, urged the United States to continue its policy of denying Arafat a visa, calling the PLO leader ''the world's leading terrorist.''

LIVERMORE, CA (MAY 23) UPI - A nuclear weapons expert who battled hydrogen bomb designer Edward Teller over the Star Wars program in a bitter 1985 dispute is leaving Lawrence Livermore Laboratory for a job at Los Alamos.

Roy Woodruff, 49, who resigned his job as head of all weapons programs at Livermore over his dispute with Teller and later won a grievance that he was being treated unfairly by lab officials, said he was leaving Livermore amicably.

''I have worked with these people for many years and I think it will be interesting to gain a new perspective on mutual programs,'' Woodruff said Tuesday.

Livermore and longtime rival Los Alamos National Laboratory, in New Mexico design and develop nuclear warheads for the nation's arsenal of missiles and battlefield weapons.

Woodruff has been at Livermore for 21 years. Since 1987, he has been head of a project seeking new technical methods for verifying nucelar arms control treaties. He said he will continue the same program at Los Alamos, birthplace of the atom bomb.

Woodruff was one of Livermore's nuclear weapons ''whiz kids'' until his feud with Teller and Teller's protege, Lowell Wood.

Woodruff charged that the two scientists had deliberately misled the Reagan administration with ''wildly optimistic assessments'' of the progress of a controversial Star Wars anti-missile laser weapon under development at Livermore.

Woodruff at the time was in charge of all weapons programs at Livermore.

Teller said the proposed weapon - a laser whose brilliant beam would be generated by X-rays emitted by nuclear explosions - needed only ''engineering'' development to ready it for defense against Soviet missiles.

Woodruff complained that Roger Batzel, lab director at the time, refused to allow him to give his assessment of the X-ray laser to high Reagan administration officials, including CIA Director William Casey, as Teller and Wood had done.

Woodruff resigned his post and was given a lower, routine job in a windowless office and told he would receive no pay raises.

Woodruff filed a grievance with the University of California, which runs the lab for the Department of Energy, charging that he was being punished for criticizing the laser program and Teller.

The university upheld his complaint and ordered the lab to give him a higher job.

The X-ray laser program, criticized by many weapons experts, has been steadily downgraded in priority and cut in funding. Its underground nuclear tests have been disappointing.

Woodruff will take a three-month leave next month and then move to Los Alamos.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - Two court-appointed doctors have found aging hotel magnate Harry Helmsley unfit to stand trial with his wife on state tax evasion charges, a judge said Wednesday.

Acting Supreme Court Justice John Bradley did not specify if Helmsley's problem was mental or physical but Leona Helmsley's lawyer said the problem was physical. Earlier the Helmsleys had maintained that Harry, 81, was not mentally capable of helping with his defense.

Bradley ordered both sides to return to state court June 20 to determine whether to hold a full hearing on the competency question before making his ruling on Helmsley's ability to stand trial.

Harry Helmsley did not appear in court Wednesday but his tearful wife spoke for him.

''My husband is being held hostage because they want me to plead guilty,'' Leona, 70, sobbed outside state Supreme Court. ''I've done nothing wrong and no way, no way will I plead guilty.''

Leona Helmsley has already been sentenced to a four-year prison term for federal tax evasion but remains free pending appeal. She stood trial alone in U.S. District Court last summer after Harry was deemed incompetent to stand trial based on ''neurological'' damage he suffered after a series of minor strokes.

During the federal trial, the New York Post reported Harry Helmsley was actually well enough to help prepare his wife's defense.

The most recent medical finding that Harry Helmsley is ''unfit'' was based on his physical deterioration rather than mental incompetence, said Leona's lawyer, Alan Dershowitz.

''Standing trial will endanger his physical health,'' Dershowitz said. ''This has nothing to do with mental competence.''

Bradley said both court-appointed doctors ''found Mr. Helmsley to be unfit but they are still making changes in their reports.''

Harry Helmsley's lawyer, Gerald Lefcourt, declined to comment on the doctors' findings.

The prosecutor, Assistant Attorney General Alfredo Mendez, said, ''Clearly the public interest requires a hearing in this case ... so the matter can be put to rest.''

The last time Leona Helmsley appeared in court, Bradley dismissed most of a 188-count state tax fraud indictment against her based on double jeopardy in the wake of the federal prosecution. In court Wednesday, her lawyers asked Mendez to turn over more information in the hopes of having nearly all the remaining eight counts dismissed.

In the federal case, a jury found Helmsley cheated the government out of millions of dolars in taxes by disguising renovations to her Greenwich, Conn., mansion as business expenses of the hotel empire she operates with her husband, Harry.

All the counts Bradley dismissed stemmed from activities at Dunnellen Hall the 26-acre estate. The eight counts he left intact concern a condominium in North Hills, N.Y., and the Park Lane Hotel in Manhattan. At both locations, she is charged with disguising renovations, furnishings and household purchases as business expenses.

All eight counts accuse her of offering a false instrument for filing in the first degree, and each carries a maximum penalty of four years in jail.

Both Helmsleys were indicted for evading about $1 million in New York state income tax.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (MAY 23) UPI - Moslem separatists killed a suspected police informer and a bystander was shot during a gunbattle Wednesday in continuing violence touched off by the assassination of Kashmir's chief Moslem cleric, officials said.

Hospital sources also increased to 64 the number of people killed by security forces when they fired on thousands of mourners carrying the body of the assassinated Mouvli Farooq through the streets of the Kashmiri capital Srinagar on Monday.

More than 300,000 Moslems turned Farooq's funeral procession the following day into a massive call for independence for Jammu and Kashmir, India's only Moslem state.

Tensions in Kashmir have escalated in the past few months and observers say India and neighboring Pakistan are close to war over the rebellious state. Kashmiri separatists are fighting for either complete independence from Hindu-dominated India or the ability to merge with Moslem Pakistan.

A doctor at the Institute of Medical Sciences who did not want to be identified said almost 150 people remained in critical condition with wounds inflicted by the Indian security officers Monday.

''The condition of the injured persons is worsening and they are not responding to the treatment,'' the doctor said. ''The toll will go much higher.''

Authorities, apparently still fearing violence over Farooq's death, kept a tight control over Srinagar, lifting a curfew for only three hours

Wednesday in areas where government workers are housed. Most of the city's 800,000 residents remained in their homes as troops and paramilitary police patrolled the deserted streets.

Government sources said other towns throughout the picturesque Kashmir Valley, one of India's top tourist spots, were paralyzed by strikes called to protest Farooq's death.

Police intensified the hunt Wednesday for the cleric's assassins, canvassing homes in the southern area of the valley and netting over 29 suspects.

Authorities initially blamed Moslem separatists for the death of the chief Islamic cleric, who was shot by three gunmen in his residential office Monday. But many Kashmiris believe he was slain by government agents.

Police said a bystander was killed in a gunbattle in the town of Karan Nagar between Indian security forces and Moslem separatists. There were also reports of clashes in Srinagar, 400 miles north of New Dehli.

An undisclosed number of militants shot a suspected police informer in Eidgah early Wednesday but escaped on foot, according to police, who had no other details.

The vast majority of Kashmir's 4 million Moslems appear to support the demand for succesion from India, contending the region has long been neglected by the Hindu-dominated government.

Separatists claim New Delhi reneged on a promise to hold a plebicite that would have allowed Kashmiris to determine whether they wanted to remain part of India, join neighboring Pakistan or become independent.

India contends Kashmir is an integral part of the republic. It has charged Pakistan with aiding the rebels because it is scheming to seize the entire Kashmir region, divided between the neighboring countries since 1948 when they fought their first of three wars for the territory.

Pakistan, which controls about one third of the Kashmir Valley, denies the charge but supports Kashmiri self-determination.

HOUSTON (MAY 23) UPI - A student working for his doctorate in history was free on bond Wednesday on charges he stole nearly 600 books worth more than $500,000 from universities in Texas, Florida and Louisiana.

Charlton J. Matovsky, a history student at Texas A&M University, was arrested Tuesday by FBI agents in College Station, Texas, and charged with interstate transportation of stolen property.

He was taken to Houston and later appeared before a federal magistrate, who allowed Matovsky's release on a $50,000 personal recognizance bond, the U.S. Marshall's Office said Wednesday.

Federal agents seized 60 books from Matovsky's College Station residence and more than 500 books from his home in Natchitoches, La., said FBI Special Agent Andrew Duffin.

According to the charges, the books were stolen from libraries at Florida State University in Tallahassee, Northwestern State University in Natchitoches and Texas A&M while Matovsky, 25, was a student at those colleges.

Four hundred of the books were stolen from the Napoleon-French Revolution Collection that has been amassed at FSU during the past 29 years. Many of the books in the collection no longer are in print and cannot be replaced, Duffin said.

The collection is one of the largest of its kind in the United States, FSU officials said, and history students from across the nation travel to the university to use it for research.

The theft of books from the collection at the Robert Manning Strozier Library first was noticed in 1989, the FBI said.

Matovsky, a student in the doctoral program of A&M's history department, was a student at FSU in 1988-89, the FBI said.

If convicted, Matovsky could get up to 10 years in prison.

KANSAS CITY, MO (MAY 23) UPI - TWA Chairman Carl Icahn confirmed he is considering selling the airline to employees, a newspaper said Wednesday.

The airline's Machinists Union has proposed an employee stock ownership plan in which employees would buy stock in the company and perhaps participate in running it, Icahn said in an interview with the Kansas City Star.

Icahn's statement is thought to be the first acknowledgement he is willing to sell TWA as a whole, the newspaper said. The TWA chairman said he would keep TWA's overhaul base in Kansas City, where most of its 6,800-area employees work.

Icahn said he was more optimistic about the employee buyout concept after a meeting with machinists' union representatives Tuesday. At this point, only the machinists union has been involved in buyout talks. TWA's pilots, based in St. Louis, have said they would not participate in an employee buyout because of the heavy debt burden at TWA.

On Tuesday, a U.S. District judge in Kansas City granted a temporary restraining order requested by TWA to stop employees at the overhaul base from demonstrating and staging work stoppages.

TWA alleged work slowdowns and stoppages have been directed by machinists' union leaders. The union represents about 4,000 workers at the overhaul base.

Demonstrations, work stoppages and slowdowns have been reported at the overhaul base since Icahn indicated earlier this month he would consider a plan to break up the airline. Icahn discussed giving TWA's domestic routes to America West Airlines, a non-union carrier.

TWA's lawsuit claims a work stoppage has been under way at the overhaul base for about a week. A hearing on TWA's request for a preliminary injunction was scheduled Friday.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Government inspections showed Wednesday that nearly one in four nursing homes administered drugs improperly and about the same number failed to provide adequate personal hygiene for residents.

The 1988-1989 findings were part of the second annual Medicare-Medicaid report on the performance of more than 15,000 U.S. nursing homes. The Health Care Financing Administration issued the report.

Inspectors found that 24.2 percent of nursing homes improperly administered drugs, 25.5 percent did not provide proper daily hygiene, 20.8 percent did not follow proper isolation techniques to prevent the spread of infection and 19.8 percent did not provide each resident with a urinary catheter with proper routine care.

More than a third of the homes did not follow sanitation rules for food preparation, the survey showed.

''It is a sad fact that enforcement of existing regulations in nursing homes across the nation is grossly inadequate,'' said Ken Hoagland, spokesman for the National Council of Senior Citizens. ''This latest report merely tabulated some of the more egregious violations and points up the continuing necessity for enforcemennt of existing regulations and for enactment of stronger regulations.''

Gail Wilensky, administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, said the report provides ''a snapshot'' of conditions at inspection time. She urged consumers to talk to doctors, long-term care ombudsmen and nursing home representatives when choosing a nursing home.

The American Association of Homes for the Aging expressed concern that consumers might use the report as ''one-stop shopping.''

''You can't tell a nursing home's quality of care based on these results

'' said Deborah Cloud, a spokeswoman for the association. ''While a statistic may be troubling ... there may be a broad range of reasons for each home to be out of compliance.''

The report said a facility's failure to meet a specific requirement may represent an ongoing problem or a singular failure by an employee.

The results, representing performance in 32 categories, involved facilities that participate in the Medicare and Medicaid programs and qualify as both skilled nursing facilities - those providing a level of care closest to hospital care with 24-hour nursing services - and intermediate care facilities, which provide less extensive health care.

Here are some of the survey's findings:

-24.2 percent, or 2,492 facilities, improperly administered drugs according to the written orders of the attending physician.

-36.3 percent, or 3,729 facilities, did not follow rules requiring that food be stored, prepared and served under sanitary conditions.

-25.5 percent, or 2,623 facilities, failed to provide residents with daily personal hygiene to assure cleanliness, good skin care, good grooming and oral hygiene.

-20.8 percent, or 2,140 facilities, did not provide isolation techniques to prevent the spread of infection.

-19.8 percent, or 2,034 facilities, did not provide each resident with a urinary catheter with proper routine care, including periodic evaluation.

-19.7 percent, or 2,029 facilities, failed to provide each resident with rehabilitative nursing care to promote maximum physical functioning to prevent loss of ability to walk or move freely, deformities and paralysis.

-17.1 percent, or 1,757 facilities, did not ensure that each resident with bowel or bladder control problems has the necessary care to encourage self control, including frequent toileting and opportunities for rehabilitative training.

-14.9 percent, or 1,528 facilities, did not ensure that each resident receives proper care for injections, fluids supplied through tubes, colostomy-ileostomy, respiratory and tracheotomy care, suctioning and tube feeding.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - An international coalition of 26 environmental groups announced plans Wednesday to issue an ''environmental scorecard'' on the performance of each world leader at the July economic summit in Houston.

The coalition, which included groups from the United States, West Germany, Japan, Britain, France, Canada and Italy, said the scorecard was intended to pressure leaders of the seven major Western industrialized nations to make concrete commitments to reduce pollution.

George Frampton, president of the Wilderness Society, said environmental groups want world leaders to follow through on their publicized statements at last year's economic summit in Paris in which they promised new attention to environmental concerns.

''Last year in Paris there was a lot of green talk,'' Frampton said. ''This year we are looking for green action.''

Frampton said environmental groups had met with Bush administration officials about the summit but that U.S. plans for the summit were still in the preliminary stages.

''We've seen prelimininary documents that are open-ended,'' he said. ''There is a lot of room for this to develop. In the final analysis, it comes down to whether he (Bush) will exercise leadership on the environment.''

The scorecard will evaluate the efforts of each leader in regard to six key issues:

-Binding commitments to reduce carbon dioxide emissions linked to global warming.

-Protection of forests, wetlands and other important ecosystems.

-Reduction of toxic discharges into oceans.

-Policies to slow population growth.

-Efforts to tie economic aid to Eastern Europe to improved environmental policies.

-Increased assistance to Third World countries to assure environmentally sound economic development.

GENEVA (MAY 23) UPI - The U.N. Security Council will meet Friday in Geneva, rather than in New York, to allow PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat to address a debate on the latest violence in the Israeli-occupied territories, the United Nations said Wednesday.

A U.N. European headquarters spokesman said the special Security Council session would take place in Geneva even if Washington reversed past policy and gave Arafat a visa so he could talk at U.N. headquarters in New York.

The Geneva session was scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. Friday and continue until all speakers had had their say, the spokesman said.

The debate could be continued in New York after the special Geneva session at the Palais des Nations, the U.N. European headquarters building and previous location of the pre-World War II League of Nations.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar was arriving in Geneva Friday morning, the U.N. spokesman said.

In Washington, officials said the U.S. government received an informal approach Monday from the United Nations for permission to allow Arafat to come to the United States, but the request was never followed up.

''No formal application was ever received,'' said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher.

State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman added, ''Since there was no formal piece of paper received, no decision was made on whether a visa would be granted.''

A U.S. official who requested anonymity said the United Nations ''made an informal approach Monday and made it clear that the United Nations supported the request.''

An administration official said the United States did not say it would refuse the visa request, but, ''We said we could not give any assurances that the visa application would be approved when it was formally received.''

Arafat addressed a special session of the entire U.N. General Assembly in Geneva in 1988 after the United States denied him a visa. The United States and Israel opposed the Geneva meeting, on the grounds Arafat's appearance did not justify an expensive special session.

In denying Arafat a visa, the United States said his Palestine Liberation Organization had a history of violent activity.

But it was at the special Geneva session that Arafat formally ''condemned terrorism in all its forms,'' recognized the right of Israel to exist ''within secure borders'' and called for coexistence and direct negotiations.

The United States came out in favor of direct Israeli-Palestinian talks and later opened a dialogue with the PLO.

The United Nations has long protested the U.S. policy of denying Arafat a visa on grounds it violates the agreement under which the world organization was headquartered in New York with extraterritorial rights.

The officials said it was Arafat's intention Friday to discuss the rising violence in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank. Sunday, an Israeli shot dead seven Palestinians in Israel. The mass slaying has prompted Palestinians in the territories and neighboring Jordan to take to the streets in protests that have at times turned deadly.

Seymour Reich, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, meanwhile urged the United States to continue its policy of denying Arafat a visa, calling the PLO leader ''the world's leading terroris.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Scientists have found two chimpanzees infected with a virus very similar to the human AIDS virus, providing the most valuable clue yet in the search for the mysterious origin of the deadly disease, it was reported Wednesday.

French researchers said they detected a virus resembling the human immunodeficiency virus or HIV in two wild, baby chimpanzees captured in Gabon, an African nation that straddles the equator.

HIV, also known as HIV-1, is the major cause of acquired immune deficiency syndrome worldwide. Before the latest work, no close viral relative to HIV-1 had been found in animals.

Since the AIDS epidemic first surfaced in 1981, scientists have been puzzled by the origin of the deadly AIDS viruses. The new virus may prove to be a ''missing link'' between AIDS-like primate viruses and those that infect humans, a U.S. researcher said.

HIV-2, another AIDS-causing virus discovered several years after HIV-1, is related to HIV-1, but afflicts far fewer people. Evidence seems to indicate HIV-2, which is most prevalent among West Africans, probably crossed over into humans from West African monkeys frequently infected with a simian immunodeficiency virus or SIV. SIV is very similar to HIV-2, but is only a distant cousin of HIV-1.

Scientists gauge the similarity between viruses by determining how closely the viruses' genetic make-up resemble one another.

The virus found in the Gabon chimps, which researchers suggest naming chimpanzee immunodeficiency virus or CIV, is more closely related to HIV-1 than HIV-2, but varies too much to simply be considered a strain of HIV-1, Simon Wain-Hobson of the Pasteur Institute and his colleagues reported in the journal Nature.

Although the findings ''provide no final solution to the mystery'' of where HIV-1 came from, they offer ''the most significant clues to date'' in piecing together the scientific puzzle, U.S. researcher Ronald Derosiers wrote in an editorial accompanying the study.

The newly discovered chimpanzee virus may prove to be a ''missing link'' between the SIV-HIV-2 viral clan and HIV-1, said Derosiers of the New England Regional Primate Research Center in Southborough, Mass.

But Derosiers emphasized many questions still remain.

The findings do not solve the controversy over whether HIV-1 entered humans relatively recently from animals like chimps, or whether HIV-1 has long infected humans at low rates and the epidemic that emerged in the 1980s stemmed from modern behaviors like intravenous drug use and international travel.

''I wouldn't venture which is most likely at this point,'' Derosiers said.

There is relatively little AIDS among humans in the area of Africa where the infected chimps were found. It also appears that few chimpanzees in the region are infected with CIV because only two of the 83 chimps in the Gabon colony tested positive for the virus.

The French team did not determine exactly how the two baby chimps, both of which appeared ''in relatively good health,'' became infected with CIV.

''It is conceivable the chimps could have become infected from a human source, possibly due to the reuse of needles and syringes,'' Derosiers said in a telephone interview. But he added the chimp virus is ''outside the range of variation'' of HIV strains known to infect humans.

In addition to a human infection source, the affected chimps could have gotten the virus from eating other monkeys. A third possibility is that chimpanzees, like other types of African monkeys, have long been naturally infected with the virus.

BEIJING (MAY 23) UPI - China's leadership paraded Beijing's paramilitary anti-riot police across regional television Wednesday, driving home its intent to crush any unrest on the first anniversary of its deadly crackdown in Tiananmen Square.

Many of China's ranking Communist Party and government leaders looked on with approving smiles as hundreds of soldiers and People's Armed Police in full riot gear marched in tight formation.

The show of force was the lead item on the state-run evening Beijing news program.

Among the hard-line leaders shown viewing the lock-step parade were Prime Minister Li Peng, Communist Party General Secretary Jiang Zemin and most members of the Politburo.

With the first anniversary of the June 4 killings in and around Beijing's Tiananmen Square less than two weeks away and China's first Asian Games looming in September, authorities have waged a mounting campaign to thwart potential political unrest.

Chinese have been warned in nearly daily news stories of the stiff price they face for demonstrating or even making unauthorized speeches in public.

The paramilitary police and army have been undergoing specialized training aimed at crushing demonstrations and separating Chinese dissidents from foreign visitors during the Asian Games, the first major international sporting event ever held in China.

Beijing views the quadrennial games as a chance to repair China's international prestige, which was badly tarnished in last year's crackdown.

In the southern city of Guangzhou, officials worried by rising crime and civil unrest have begun teaching martial arts students the finer points of riot control, the semi-official China News Service reported Wednesday.

Nearly 500 students - one-fourth of them young women - have completed the 13-week course offered by the Anti-Riot Training Center in the Canton province seat of Guangzhou, it said.

The specialized self-defense training enables students ''to check violent crime and hooliganism'' as well as to strengthen their morals, personal habits and physical stamina, the report said.

The news service said the training was organized in the face of an alarming rise in muggings and gang activities in Guangzhou, southern China's booming commercial center also known as Canton.

Guangzhou officials recently announced that the city had formed its first elite squad of riot police as well as a new rapid-deployment team in the city's paramilitary People's Armed Police force.

The nation's first crack anti-riot squad was formed in Beijing in 1988 and was deployed several times during the pro-democracy protests last spring. Several other cities have formed similar anti-riot forces.

FAIRFAX, VA (MAY 23) UPI - Former American University President Richard Berendzen pleaded guilty Wednesday and was given a suspended sentence for making obscene telephone calls from his office to the home of a police investigator.

''I deeply regret all of this,'' said Berendzen, a respected educator before his resignation.

Fairfax County Judge J. Conrad Waters Jr. gave Berendzen, 51, a suspended 30-day jail sentence for the misdemeanor conviction. The judge ordered Berendzen to continue undergoing therapy and said reports must be made to the court every 90 days for one year.

Commonwealth's Attorney Robert F. Horan Jr. said Berendzen was treated like any other defendant in similar cases.

''He's not entitled to any more or any less,'' Horan said.

Suspended jail sentences are standard when a defendant is in therapy, the prosecutor said. Berendzen could have received up to one year in jail.

In a statement read by his attorney outside the courthouse, Berendzen said he realized the questions about his resignation and the events leading up to it would not end. Therefore, he said he would authorize the release of a report from the hospital to provide ''a fuller context for my actions.''

The report was to be released Wednesday afternoon.

''Today's plea before the General District Court of Fairfax County concludes a chapter in my life of pain, apprehension and sorrow,'' the statement said. ''It has been a necessary step, one I have taken after much contemplation and with deep regret for my actions.''

Berendzen abruptly resigned from the respected Washington, D.C., school on Apr. 10, saying he was exhausted. Two weeks later, it was revealed he was under investigation in suburban Washington for allegedly making obscene telephone calls.

Horan said in two calls made in late March, Berendzen talked to the wife of a police officer and then to the officer himself about having ''bizarre sexual conduct with a ficticious family group.''

Berendzen apparently was not aware he had called the home of an officer. He reportedly made the calls after finding the number in a newspaper advertisement for day care.

After his resignation, Berendzen entered the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for treatment.

''He's got a serious problem,'' Horan said.

CAIRO, EGYPT (MAY 23) UPI - Israeli Labor Party leader Shimon Peres denied Wednesday Arab claims that Israel is preparing for war against Iraq and called on the Arab world to ''unite in the direction of peace.''

''Israel does not have any intention of attacking Iraq or any other (Arab) countries,'' Peres told the Cairo Foreign Press Association.

''We have so many other demanding issues and I think all countries - Arabs and Israelis - came to the conclusion that war does not produce anything serious but carries a very heavy cost,'' he said.

''We went through five wars. Many young people lost their lives, a lot of wealth was wasted in order to return back to square one,'' he said. ''Why do it again? What for?''

Peres, who is in Cairo for the two-day Socialist International conference, was responding to Iraqi and Arab allegations that Israel may be preparing to launch a preemptive strike against Iraq.

Iraq has threatened to use chemical weapons against the Jewish state if it attempts a repeat of its 1981 air strike against a nuclear reactor near the Iraqi capital Baghdad.

On the emergency Arab summit meeting, scheduled to open Monday in Baghdad, Peres said: ''I understand that the Arab summit is being convened with the purpose to deepen Arab unity.

''Now as far as we are concerned, the problem is not Arab unity, the problem is Arab direction. If the Arabs will unite in the direction of peace, it is OK.

''If on the other hand this will be a union for the renewal of belligerency, it will become a tragedy. I am for the demilitarization of the region,'' Peres said.

Peres also said he is anxious for calm to return to the Israeli occupied territories where the slaying Sunday of seven Palestinians by an Israeli sparked rioting that left 12 Palestinians dead and hundreds wounded.

Reacting to President Bush's call for Israeli security forces to exercise ''maximum restraint,'' he said, ''I think Israel herself would like to see the situation in the territories calming down.

''Israel is responsible for the security, safety and well-being of all people in the territories and elsewhere no matter if they are Arabs or Jews. We have to guarantee the life, the security and respect of every human being without any distinction to which nation he belongs or which people he is a member of.

He said Sunday's slayings an act of ''an irresponsible man shooting ... killing innocent people and that created a chain of reaction.''

''First of all, I regret it very much because bloodshed is bloodshed whether it is a Jew or Arab. It is the same color, it is blood and it is red and painful and I hope we shall overcome it as soon as possible.

''I hope we are at the end of this chain of reaction and we shall return to normal relations.''

On the migration of Soviet Jews to Israel, Peres said his party would oppose settlement in the occupied territories and encourage people to settle in the Negev desert and Galilee, in northern Israel.

''I think we shall prepare to settle the Negev ... the Galilee,'' Peres said. ''I think to overcome a desert is less expensive than to overcome a hostility and it would be far more economic to settle in the Nevev desert than elsewhere.

''Labor felt very strongly there is no need to add new settlements in the West Bank and Gaza and this will surely be a Labor policy,'' Peres said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - The United States must radically change how it uses standardized tests, which are often the key to school or work opportunities, to make them less relied on and more accountable, a report said Wednesday.

The Ford Foundation-funded National Commission on Testing and Public Policy released the report after three years of study.

''Current testing, predominantly multiple choice in format, is overrelied on, lacks adequate public accountability, sometimes leads to unfairness in the allocation of opportunities and too often undermines vital social policies,'' the report stated.

Commission Chairman Bernard Gifford called the report ''the most comprehensive policy-oriented review of testing ever conducted.''

''The chance to attend a college, or to enroll in a training program, or to secure employment should never depend entirely upon a single test performance measure,'' Gifford said.

Mandatory standardized testing consumes some 20 million schools days and the equivalent of $700 million to $900 million in expenditures annually, the report said.

In the most recent drive toward educational reform, standardized test scores of schools and school districts were often used as the key criterion to measure success.

''All tests are to some extent culturally dependent; nor has society yet been able to extend educational opportunities to all, hence the score gap between minority and majority groups,'' the report said. ''Differences in performance on other indicators such as grades and ratings are generally smaller than test score difference.

''Thus when test results alone are used in selection, misclassification falls disproportionately on minority groups.''

Challenging the current emphasis on test scores, the report said, ''We cannot test our way out of our educational problems. The opposite is true. As teaching turns into test preparation, test results cease to reflect what examinees really know or can do.''

Educational Testing Service, one of the developers of standardized tests such as the Scholastic Appitude Test, said it welcomed the commission efforts ''to make sure that tests are properly designed, used and interpreted.''

''Testing should be neither the lead horse nor the scapegoat of American education but rather a reliable means for our nation's educational goals '' said Gregory Anrig, ETS president.

FairTest, a testing reform group, said the report's conclusions echoed its own, and the group urged a ''moratorium on new multiple-choice tests, a massive reduction of educational testing and the institution of performance-based evaluation.''

The commission proposed:

-Reorienting testing practices to promote the development of all human talent and redirecting programs away from an overreliance on multiple-choice tests.

-Using test scores only when they differentiate characteristics relevant to the opportunities being allocated; when test scores disproportionately deny opportunities to minorities, more proof should be needed to show the tests measure characteristics relevant to the opportunities being allocated.

-Using more than test scores to make important decisions about individuals groups or institutions.

-Subjecting testing to greater public accountability.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Neil Bush, the president's son, Wednesday defended his actions as a director of a failed Denver savings and loan and called ''frivolous'' allegations that he has violated federal thrift regulations.

Bush, 34, appeared relaxed as the hearing began, joking with a battery of photographers and waving to members of the House Banking Committee.

At one point, Bush joked with the panel, saying: ''I'm here voluntarily. I tried to make a deal with my mother where she'd come here and I'd go to Wellesley. Only kidding.''

The committee is investigating the collapse of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association of Denver. Bush, who lives in Denver and is in the oil industry, joined the thrift's board in 1985.

He left four months after government regulators took over the collapsed Silverado in December 1988. Protecting the thrift's depositors from losses is expected to cost taxpayers more than $1 billion.

At the time of its closing, Silverado had assets worth $2.2 billion and a negative net worth of $264.8 million.

Five former Silverado officers and directors have agreed to consent orders that prohibit them from working in the savings and loan industry without prior regulatory approval. None of the executives admitted any wrongdoing.

In January, the Office of Thrift Supervision filed an administrative complaint against Bush accusing him of violating thrift regulations.

The OTS is seeking a cease and desist order against Bush, under which he would agree not to violate thrift rules in the future. OTS officials have declined to identify the rules they alleged Bush violated.

Bush, called the OTS action ''frivolous,'' and said he is ''baffled'' by the agency's pursuit of him.

Bush defended his vote to approve $106 million in loans to a business associate, Colorado developer Bill Walters, who eventually defaulted on the loans. A bank controlled by Walters had extended a $1 million line of credit to Bush's oil exploration company, JNB Exploration.

Bush said the line of credit was needed during a bid on an Argentina oil project to show his company could come up with financing if the bid was accepted. The line of credit was never used, he said.

''There was no conflict of interest,'' Bush said. ''I had no financial interest or otherwise in Walters' business.''

Bush said Silverado's board voted unanimously to approve the loans to Walters, who he described as ''the Donald Trump of Denver.''

Bush also testified that he was unaware of a July 15, 1985, letter from Michael Wise, Silverado's former chairman, to Silverado's preferred stockholders that said Bush had agreed to abstain from any board considerations involving Walters and Kenneth Good, another investor in JNB Exploration.

''I would not have voted on any matters had I made an agreement not to do so,'' he said.

Bush said Silverado's management sought his presence on the thrift's board for his expertise in the oil and gas industry, vital to Denver's economy, rather than because his father was then vice president.

''They never asked me to use my influence,'' he said. ''Before I joined the board I told Wise, I made it clear that if he wanted me on the board for political reasons, he could forget it,'' Bush said.

Wise and four of the thrift's other top executives and directors, have refused to appear before the panel and will be subpoenaed.

Thrift regulators testified Tuesday that Silverado's board acted as a ''rubber stamp,'' approving a so-called quid pro quo plan that permitted borrowers to receive loans for more than they requested.

The extra money was used to buy Silverado stock, repossessed real estate and shares in a ''pool'' of shaky commercial real estate loans. The purpose of the plan, regulators testified, was to inflate Silverado's capital, operating income and book value, regulators said.

Thrift examiners have found 16 transactions where Silverado loaned borrowers more than they requested. The deals resulted in losses to Silverado of $278.5 million.

Bush has refused to sign a consent order similar to those signed for other Silverado officers and directors.

ZURICH, SWITZERLAND (MAY 23) UPI - South African President Frederik de Klerk, nearing the end of a nine-day tour of Europe, held private talks

Wednesday with Swiss banking and business leaders on possible new credit lines for Pretoria.

In earlier talks in Paris, London, Bonn and elsewhere, de Klerk sought political backing for his reform program and economic cooperation rather than sanctions.

The Swiss government assured him at discussionsa in the capital of Bern Tuesday of its support for reforms.

Neutral Switzerland as a matter of principle have never gone along with international sanctions against South Africa or any other country on grounds they are counter-productive.

South African officials refused to say who de Klerk saw Wednesday in the Swiss financial center of Zurich.

The big Swiss banks and industrial corporations also were as discreet as always although sources said people seeing him certainly included officials of the main commercial banks.

''It is clear that the question of new credits was the main subject in Zurich,'' one South African diplomat said.

Ever careful, Swiss banks reduced their exposure in South Africa by half over the past three years, down to little more than $1.5 billion.

De Klerk flies to Madrid early Thursday.

The Spanish government will host the South African for only six hours.

Spanish officials also disclosed Wednesday that anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela will make an official visit to Spain in September.

De Klerk, on a nine-nation, 19-day swing through Europe, will call on King Juan Carlos in the morning and lunch with Felipe Gonzalez, president of government, in the afternoon.

The purpose of his European swing is to explain progress his country is making toward eliminating apartheid and to try to get the European Community to ease sanctions it placed against South Africa in 1986.

De Klerk will meet with officials in Rome after he leaves Madrid.

SARASOTA, FL (MAY 23) UPI - City commissioners have revised an anti-nudity ordinance that had banned skimpy bathing suits after five beachgoers were arrested for displaying buttock cleavage.

The commission voted 3-2 Tuesday to do away with the part of the ordinance that required residents to cover up what the law called the ''anal cleft.''

The action came after the arrests of four men and a woman last week for wearing T-back bathing suits on Sarasota's secluded North Lido Beach.

''The portion of the ordinance doesn't make any sense to me at all,'' said Commissioner Jack Gurney, who joined Mayor Kerry Kirschner and Commissioner Fredd Atkins in voting to rewrite the ordinance.

They said it didn't make any since to restrict bathing attire when other public beaches do not do so.

Commissioners Lou Ann Palmer and Gene Pillot voted to leave the ordinance intact.

Commissioners still must conduct a public hearing before Tuesday's action becomes final, re-opening a local controversy that filled commission meetings five years ago.

Officials said they were flooded with dozens of telephone calls protesting the arrests. Pillot said, however, that the only calls he received supported the arrests.

Assistant City Attorney Mike Connolly said he would await the outcome of the public hearing before deciding whether to prosecute the five people arrested.

One of those arrested, Todd Joel Keefe, 27, of Sarasota, told commissioners earlier in the meeting that the arrests would discourage tourists who are unaware of the 1985 ordinance. Three of those arrested last week were from out of state.

''What kind of message are we sending to people when we invite them to our community and arrest them within 24 hours of arriving?'' Keefe asked.

Bonnie Wagner, a Sarasota resident, told commissioners of her differing opinion. ''I would appreciate it if someone would tell me what the redeeming factors are in the revealing of buns,'' she said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - The fund that insures the nation's bank deposits declined by $851 million in 1989, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said.

The Bank Insurance Fund's 1989 year-end balance fell to $13.2 billion, or 0.7 percent of insured deposits, from $14.1 billion in 1988, the FDIC said Monday.

The results represent a ''significant improvement over the corporation's 1988 operating loss of $4.3 billion,'' the FDIC said.

During 1989, 206 banks were closed and one was financially helped at a total cost to the FDIC of more than $4 billion. The corporation had revenues of $3.5 billion during the year.

''Even with the loss, BIF's liquidity remains strong, with liquid assets at year-end of $14 billion, or 71 percent of total assets,'' said Stanley J. Poling, director of accounting and corporate services of the FDIC.

The fund stands behind the government's commitment to insure bank deposits up to $100,000.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Americans like their pennies - in jars, in piles on the dresser, or jingling in their pockets - and nearly two-thirds of them want to keep the one-cent coin in circulation, too, a Gallup survey showed Wednesday.

Call them suspicious, but the survey also found that more than three-fourths of those questioned said proposals before Congress to eliminate the penny and round cash prices up or down to the nearest nickel would just be an excuse to raise prices.

Generally speaking, the Gallup Poll survey of 750 people over age 18 found more than half believe wiping out the penny would just be confusing.

Virtually everyone recognizes the coin's place in American culture - even 82 percent of those who want to pitch the penny agree it ''is a long-standing tradition in this country.''

At the bottom line, 62 percent said they oppose legislation to discontinue the penny, while 26 percent said they would favor it.

While 59 percent said eliminating the 1 cent piece would cause confusion, 43 percent disagreed on grounds most people try to avoid picking pennies out of a cluster of change anyway.

More than three-fourths, 77 percent, expressed concern merchants might increase their prices in order to compensate for rounding prices to the nearest 5 cents.

One reason elimination is being considered is the cost of keeping tens of billions of the coins flowing from hand to hand. But only 31 percent of those interviewed said continued production is too expensive; 43 percent disagreed and 26 percent had no opinion.

The survey conducted April 23-26 for Americans For Common Cents and has a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

Donna Pope, director of the group, said in a telephone interview that results confirmed what she knew all along - ''The American people want to keep their pennies.''

Pope said it costs the government between six-tenths and seven-tenths of a cent to make a penny, and the small profit ''goes to reduce the amount of money that the government has to borrow.''

According to U.S. Mint figures, 12.6 billion pennies were minted in 1989, up from 11.3 billion in 1988. A Mint spokeswoman said 12.1 billion pennies will be produced in the 1990 production year ending Sept. 30.

The copper penny has changed in composition over the years. During the 1981-1982 production year, pennies were made of only 2.5 percent copper and 97.5 percent zinc, compared with 95 percent copper and 5 percent zinc before 1981. The increasing cost of copper prompted the change.

WHITE'S CITY, NM (MAY 23) UPI - The swallows have returned to Cottonwood Cave in the Lincoln National Forest but the 10-day-old fire that has charred 33,135 acres of southern New Mexico still burns, Forest Service spokesmen said Wednesday.

The birds, under the stress of smoke and fire, left the cave last week but were back Wednesday, said National Forest Service spokesman Bob Valen.

Bats that fled the caves in the 47,000-acre Carlsbad Caverns National Park near the Texas border have not yet returned, Valen said.

Valen said about 500 firefighters are bracing against westerly winds to keep the fire from spreading.

''When the winds start gusting up today, it will be a real test of their fire lines,'' he said.

The fire started May 13 and is believed to have been ''man-caused,'' Valen said. Investigators continue searching for suspects.

The blaze has charred 17,000 acres in the Lincoln National Forest, 11,000 acres in Carlsbad Caverns National Park, 3,400 acres of Bureau of Land Management land, 1,230 acres of private land and 300 acres of state land.

There has been no damage to buildings, Valen said. Firefighters have suffered only minor injuries such as sprains, scratches and fatigue.

No endangered species have been affected by the fire, Valen said.

''We're not worried about the bats,'' Valen said. ''They'll be back.''

National Park Service personnel said there is no need for tourists to stay away from the famous Carlsbad Caverns because the fire did not get close enough to do any damage.

''New Cave, on the southern boundary of the park, was burned over but no damage was done,'' he said.

LONDON (MAY 23) UPI - Stock prices closed lower in moderately active trading Wednesday on the London International stock exchange after the government reported a higher-than-expected trade deficit for April.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which climbed 29.2 points Tuesday, fell 23.9 points to 2,287.4. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 18.7 points to 1,810.8.

Volume amounted to around 542 million shares, down from the 630 million that changed hands Tuesday.

Analysts said news from the Central Statistical Office that Britain's merchandise trade balance fell to $3 billion in April from a revised $3.5 billion in March depressed stocks.

The government said the value of exports rose to $14.7 billion, up 3.5 percent from March, while imports were relatively unchanged at $17.7 billion.

The April figures bring Britain's trade gap for the first four months of 1990 to about $12.3 billion, nearly half $25.3 billion forecast for the full year by Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major.

The $3 billion deficit was an improvement on the previous month's revised figure of $3.5 billion, the second highest on record.

Market forecasters were expecting a decifit of around $2.5 billion for the month.

Market analysts said the figures were a bad sign for the government in its attempts to control the nation's chronic trade imbalance.

The FTSE, which had been up by about 23 points just before the figures were released, quickly reversed itself, shedding almost 22 points by midafternoon.

On the trading floor, Ranks Hovis plunged 63 cents to $5.77 after the group warned that its profits may not match last year's level.

B.A.T Industries eased 13 cents to $10.95 following a downgrading after disappointing first-quarter figures.

Courtaulds lost 19 cents to $5.21 after reporting a 6 percent rise in profits.

In the pharmaceutical sector, Wellcome PLC was off 48 cents to $10.54.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices closed higher in moderate trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which added 2.08 points on Tuesday climbed 18.54 points, or 1 percent, to 1,831.80, reversing a steady two-week downturn in prices.

ZURICH, Switzerland (MAY 23) UPI - South African President Frederik de Klerk, nearing the end of a nine-day tour of Europe, held private talks Wednesday with Swiss banking and business leaders on possible new credit lines for Pretoria.

In earlier talks in Paris, London, Bonn and elsewhere, de Klerk sought political backing for his reform program and economic cooperation rather than sanctions.

The Swiss government assured him at discussionsa in the capital of Bern Tuesday of its support for reforms.

Neutral Switzerland as a matter of principle have never gone along with international sanctions against South Africa or any other country on grounds they are counter-productive.

South African officials refused to say who de Klerk saw Wednesday in the Swiss financial center of Zurich.

The big Swiss banks and industrial corporations also were as discreet as always although sources said people seeing him certainly included officials of the main commercial banks.

''It is clear that the question of new credits was the main subject in Zurich,'' one South African diplomat said.

Ever careful, Swiss banks reduced their exposure in South Africa by half over the past three years, down to little more than $1.5 billion.

De Klerk flies to Madrid early Thursday.

The Spanish government will host the South African for only six hours.

Spanish officials also disclosed Wednesday that anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela will make an official visit to Spain in September.

De Klerk, on a nine-nation, 19-day swing through Europe, will call on King Juan Carlos in the morning and lunch with Felipe Gonzalez, president of government, in the afternoon.

The purpose of his European swing is to explain progress his country is making toward eliminating apartheid and to try to get the European Community to ease sanctions it placed against South Africa in 1986.

De Klerk will meet with officials in Rome after he leaves Madrid.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (MAY 23) UPI - The European Community will send $1.24 million in humanitarian aid to Poland, particularly to help Polish children, the EC Executive Commission said Wednesday.

One consequence of the introduction of economic reforms in Poland is that the government, in the period of transition, cannot ensure sufficient supplies of special foodstuffs and medicine for children suffering from chronic diseases such as diabetes and asthma, the commission said.

The aid will provide these special products for Polish children.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (MAY 23) UPI - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and opposition leader Hans-Jochen Vogel agreed Wednesday to meet next week to seek a compromise over a dispute about the details of economic, currency and social union with East Germany.

Kohl suggested the meeting in an interview with the West German television station ARD after a heated parliamentary debate between members of his Christian Democratic Union and opposition Social Democratic Party officials.

Vogel, who heads the Social Democrats, said he welcomed the suggestion and party officials said the two will meet May 29.

During the parliamentary debate, Social Democratic deputies said they did not oppose economic union of East and West Germany but wanted improvements to a draft treaty for economic, currency and social union signed last week by the finance ministers of East and West Germany.

''We are exclusively interested in improving the treaty in the interests of citizens in both parts of Germany,'' said Ingrid Matthaeus-Mueller, the Social Democrats' deputy parliamentary floor leader.

The opposition deputies said it is essential to modify or extend the treaty to help soften the blow of economic union, which entails the introduction of the West German currency and economic system in East Germany on July 1.

Experts believe in the short term the union will force the closure of a number of formerly state-run East German companies and lead to massive unemployment in the former communist state, while causing inflation in West Germany.

The debate came as the East German government announced further cuts in consumer prices, largely aimed at an alignment with international markets and reducing a stockpile of unsold goods.

The trickle of Western exports to the former communist country has already turned into a flood and many East Germans are putting off important purchases until the West German mark is introduced July 1.

With overflowing warehouses, industries in the textile, shoe and electrical goods sectors are already on the verge of total collapse.

A government spokesman told an East Berlin news conference that among the prices slashed Wednesday were those for eggs, meat, poultry, canned fruit and vegetables. Prices for textiles, shoes, leather items, books, sporting goods, and industrial goods were ordered cut Monday.

Apart from basic goods, East German consumer goods were sold at highly inflated prices to stem demand that the old Stalinist command economy was incapable of meeting.

In West Germany, parliamentarians of the ruling Christian Democrats accused the opposition of delaying German unification for political reasons, a tactic Kohl's party claims would hike the costs involved in uniting the two states.

The conservative deputies said the improvements sought by the Social Democrats are already included in the draft treaty.

''Do they want the unity of Germany or don't they? Conditions for it have never been better than now,'' said Alfred Dregger, who heads the parliamentary faction of the Christian Democrats and its Bavarian sister party, the Christian Social Union.

West German parliamentary debate on the treaty started Tuesday at the Social Democratic-dominated Bundesrat, the council of states. It continued Wednesday at the Bundestag, the federal assembly, where the center-right government coalition is a majority.

The draft treaty will need to be ratified by the Bundesrat and the Bundestag, as well as the East German parliament, when it comes up for a third reading in late June. West German legislation provides for the formation of a mediation committee if the Bundesrat and the Bundestag fail to reach agreement - which is seen as unlikely.

Kohl's Christian Democrats and the opposition Social Democrats have accused each other of using the current debate for political gains, with a view to general elections scheduled for Dec. 2, which could become all-German elections.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (MAY 23) UPI - Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai will visit India next month to discuss a lingering trade dispute with its giant neighbor that has caused severe hardship in Nepal, he said Wednesday.

Bhattarai, leader of Nepal's new interim government, told United Press International that he would be in New Delhi for three days starting June 8 to meet senior Indian officials.

India imposed a virtual trade embargo against Nepal following the expiration of a bilateral trade and transit treaty last March. Both sides accused the other of failing to come to the table to negotiate a new pact.

Severe food and kerosene shortages were caused in Nepal, which depended heavily on concessional Indian rates for essential commodities. Rancor between Nepal's King Birendra, who then headed the government, and Indian officials further strained relations.

Bhattarai, head of Nepal's first multi-party government in 29 years, adopted a more conciliatory tone and offered to talk with the Indian government.

A senior leader of Bhattarai's Nepali Cogress Party earlier had demanded that the trade embargo be lifted before the prime minister's visit to New Delhi.

But Bhattarai said Wednesday, ''India will not lift the trade embargo before my visit. What is the point of my going to Delhi if all the problems are settled before my going.''

He met Birendra to discuss the trade dispute that strained relations between the neighbors in the past year.

The trade embargo was imposed partly due to India's anger over a Nepalese decision to buy arms from China and allow Chinese nationals to work close to the India-Nepal border. Indian officials said the move went against the spirit of a bilateral treaty between India and Nepal that gives special status to the landlocked nation.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said Wednesday he acted properly in an embarrassing news leak episode involving Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., but refused to discuss details or disclose whether Gray is now the target of an FBI investigation.

During a news conference, Thornburgh was peppered with questions about a high-level Justice Department shakeup linked to repercussions from a news report about Gray.

CBS News reported last year that the FBI was investigating Gray for alleged financial irregularities. Democrats were infuriated, viewing it as part of a Republican plot to embarrass the party and undermine Gray's campaign for the No. 3 leadership post in the House.

Gray won the job and Thornburgh said at the time that Gray was not the target of the investigation. It reportedly involved an accountant who has worked for Gray.

This week details of a financial investigation involving Gray became public. Under questioning, Thornburgh would not say whether Gray is the target of that investigation.

''I'm not going to comment on any ongoing investigation,'' Thornburgh said.

Earlier this month, the No. 2 official in the Justice Department, Donald Ayer, abruptly resigned, charging that Thornburgh, in order to protect two of his closest aides, interfered with the investigation into the CBS report.

Those aides - Robert Ross Jr. and David Runkel - were reassigned last week amid reports they failed FBI lie detector tests on the Gray disclosure.

Ayer said Thornburgh helped conceal the fact that Ross and Runkel failed the polygraph tests. He also said Thornburgh tried to keep the investigation away from the Justice Department's internal watchdog unit and then refused to follow a recommendation for a more detailed investigation.

Asked about Ayer's charges, Thornburgh said, ''The actions I took in this matter were proper.''

The attorney general referred to a written statement attributed to Solicitor General Kenneth Starr, who said there was no basis for criminal prosecution or administrative action in the Gray leak.

Pressed by reporters, Thornburgh said, ''I'm not trying to hide anything'' but added, ''The matter is closed.''

Thornburgh said there had been a ''full and comprehensive review'' of the Gray leak investigation and there was ''no purpose'' to saying more.

Thornburgh, a former Republican governor of Pennsylvania, has had a stormy tenure since he took over the Justice Department from the controversial Edwin Meese in August 1988. Asked if he planned to leave President Bush's Cabinet, Thornburgh said: ''The answer is no. Of course not.''

The Gray affair has proved personally and politically embarrassing for Thornburgh, who waged a highly publicized crusade against leaks and now is the subject of publicity suggesting his closest aides were involved in the disclosure about Gray.

It is unclear whether the recent issuance of new subpoenas involving Gray are related to the year-old investigation, or signal a new inquiry. The subpoenas demand financial records on money paid to Gray or his wife, primarily speaking fees.

Among the organizations receiving subpoenas were Bright Hope Baptist Church in Philadelphia, where Gray preaches, and Kids Inc., where Andrea Gray works. The group grants last wishes to dying children.

Gray's aides previously have said the congressman donates some of his speaking fees to his church and to Kids Inc.

(MAY 23) UPI - New orders for durable goods in April fell more than twice what several economists had expected. The Commerce Department says new orders for big-ticket items intended to last at least three years dropped a sharp four-point-one percent, or five-point-three-Million dollars. The drop was attributed to declining orders for motor vehicles and aircraft. New orders had increased six-point-five percent in March.

For many Arkansas and Texas residents, there seems to be NO end to the rain and flooding of their rivers. MANILA, PHILIPPINES (MAY 23) UPI - Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos ruled out Wednesday the imposition of martial law despite a series of recent slayings of U.S. servicemen and soldiers and grenade attacks.

''As far as I am concerned there is no need for those extreme emergency measures,'' Ramos told a news conference.

Ramos said, however, the Cabinet at a meeting earlier in the day discussed proposals to extend limited emergency powers Congress granted to President Corazon Aquino to cope with the economic impact of last December's coup attempt.

Ramos denied charges by the shadowy Young Officers Union that the recent killings and bombings were a ruse by government agents to force Aquino to declare martial law.

The YOU is a clandestine organization within the 159,000-member armed forces seeking the ouster of Aquino. It participated in the Dec. 1-9 coup attempt in which 119 people were killed and more than 500 were wounded.

The late dictator Ferdinand Marcos imposed martial law in 1972 in what historians now say was a move to perpetuate himself in power. Many Filipinos say Marcos orchestrated bombings in the early 1970s to justify the measure.

Ramos said the defense department ''would be the last one that would wish to have a situation of martial law.''

Police reported four grenade attacks against banks and a building housing U.S. government offices in the past five days, causing minor damage but no casualties. Several bombs also have been recovered in the capital's financial district.

On Wednesday, gunmen riding in a van sprayed automatic gunfire on a car carrying Constabulary Col. Reynaldo Dino in suburban Kalookan town, killing him, his 27-year-old daughter, two bodyguards and a civilian bystander.

Police said the assailants, led by a woman, pulled alongside Dino's car after his two police patrol escorts left him at a crowded highway and opened fire. Ten others were wounded in a mini-bus that Dino's car slammed into.

Aquino denounced the killing of Dino as an ''assault on all peace-loving Filipinos.'' She ordered an immediate investigation ''to bring the killers to swift justice.''

Ramos said the Dino slaying was part of the ''summer offensive'' by the 19,000-strong communist New People's Army. The insurgent army has been battling the Manila government for 21 years.

At least 11 Americans have been killed in politically motivated killings in the Philippines in the past three years, three of them this month.

Also on Wednesday, government troops clashed with guerrillas in the town of Lasam in Cagayan province, 250 miles north of Manila, leaving two soldiers and a militiaman dead. Three rebels were killed in the encounter.

The military has said 179 government troops and 115 civilians have died this year in assassinations, ambushes and clashes.

ABIDJAN, IVORY COAST (MAY 23) UPI - Agreement has been reached on new economic austerity measures aimed at rebuiliding the country's beleaguered economy, the government announced Wednesday. A communique said the government had agreed on a new set of measures after discussions with the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Cuts in public spending are to be introduced, but salary cuts have been permanently scrapped, sources said. Plans to cut public sector salaries by up to 40 percent caused riots in the streets in March, forcing the governement to delay imposition of the austerity program.

A ministerial committee under the chairmanship of Alassane Ouattara, president of the West African Central Bank, was set up to review all aspects of the austerity measures. Following meetings with creditors, the World Bank and the IMF, Ouattara announced his recommendations to the council of ministers.

The new measures are intended to increase fiscal returns by an overhaul of customs and excise duties, the sources said. Foreign loans are expected to carry out this restructuring. Funds are also to be set aside to limit fraud and corruption, thery said.

Credit facilities for government spending are also to be tightened, the sources said. The measures are to be formally approved by the National Assembly June 1.

The sources said by then Ouattara should have worked out details of the agreements that have been reached with creditors and the amount of funds available to carry out the program.

The government is expected to launch a campaign to prepare the public for the new measures. In March when the original measures were introduced, including pay cuts, there was strong criticism of the suddenness with which the announcement was made. Protests erupted immediately, and the government was forced to back down.

SUVA, Fiji (MAY 23) UPI - Fiji's military-backed government Wednesday ordered the Indian Embassy closed, escalating tension between ethnic Fijians and the ethnic Indian population that forms a slight majority in the South Pacific island nation.

''The government of the Republic of Fiji considers the decision of the government of the Republic of India in banning trade with Fiji as an unfriendly act,'' the Ministry of Information said in a statement.

The statement also said a decision by India to oppose Fiji's readmission to the British Commonwealth was an unfriendly and unwarranted act, but did not elaborate on either charge.

Fiji was expelled from the British Commonwealth in 1987 following two military coups against the nation's first elected Indian-dominated government.

''The Fiji government considers the continued interference by the Embassy of India in the internal affairs of Fiji as unfriendly and in contravention of international law and practice,'' the statement said.

The two-page statement ordered the Indian Embassy to close within 24 hours of the notice, which was released Wednesday shortly after noon. It ordered all Indian nationals working for the embassy to leave Fiji within two weeks.

The Indian charge d'affaires, Vidhya Bhusan Soni, declined comment on the Fiji move.

''We are not making any statement, official or otherwise,'' was the only response from another member of the Indian Embassy.

Another member of the staff said he had been expecting ''some sort of reaction from Fiji's government to India's international campaign.'' He declined to enlarge on his comments.

Other foreign embassies in Suva met Wednesday to discuss the expulsion order. A staff member at the Australian Embassy said the news ''had stunned most of us around here.''

The order came almost six months after Fiji ordered former Indian Ambassador Thettalil Sreenivasan to leave the country.

The explusion notice was the latest chapter in the continued cooling of relations between tiny Fiji and India since the two military coups of May and September 1987.

The coups, instigated by the Col. Sitiveni Rabuka in the name of preserving Fijian rights, overthrew the ethnic Indian-dominated Labor Party-National Federation Party coalition goverment, which wa7.

Rabuka staged the coups, claiming ethnic Fijians were fearful of an Indian takeover of the island nation, where ethnic Indians make up a slight majority of the population of some 720,000.

The Fijian government continues to be backed by the army, 90 percent of which is native Fijian, and has moved to restrict activities of Indians who participate largely in the business sector. Indians were brought to Fiji in the 19th century by British rulers to work on sugar cane plantations.

BANGKOK, Thailand (MAY 23) UPI - The battling factions in Cambodia have reduced their differences over a peace settlement and more progress is expected at talks next month, Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said Wednesday.

At the same time, however, the competing sides in the 11-year-old conflict reported hundreds more soldiers killed in recent fighting.

''Now the substantive problems, the long-term problems, have been agreed, so only the transitory problems are left,'' Thach told reporters before returning to Hanoi.

Even on the question of a transition government, he said, only minor differences remained.

He said the main problem is the need to work out the relationship between the two governments claiming legitimacy and the ''Council of National Reconciliation'' that will include representatives of all sides in the conflict.

Diplomatic sources said, however, that the power relationship was the key to a settlement since all sides fear that if they give up too much power in the interim arrangement, they will lose the general elections that are supposed to follow.

The commander of the U.S.-backed Khmer People's National Liberation Front and nine other senior officials Wednesday announced the formation of a separate political party in an apparent break with other Front leaders.

Gen. Sak Sudsakorn, commander-in-chief of the KPNLF, said he has set up a political party called the ''Liberal Democracy Party'' with the intention of participating in future elections.

The commander formally declared the formation of the party to cheering residents of the Site-2 refugee camp about 135 miles east of Bangkok.

Thach denied a report by Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman Sompongse Faichampa that in talks Tuesday with Foreign Minister Siddhi Savetsila, Thach expressed hopes the Vietnamese-backed government of Prime Minister Hun Sen would be ''more flexible'' in talks set for June 4-6 in Tokyo.

''All concerned parties must be flexible,'' he said. ''It should not be only one-way traffic.''

Thach said he expected further progress at the talks but would not be attending the meeting himself.

Earlier, in an interview with the Voice of America, resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk said the parties are likely to sign a cease-fire agreement in Tokyo, but he predicted it could spark more fighting to gain territory until the agreement could be internationally supervised.

Phnom Penh radio, in a report Tuesday on dry season fighting, said the 286th division has killed 434 resistance guerrillas in three months.

Khmer Rouge radio said Wednesday its forces attacked a government regiment defending the district town of Kong Pisei in Kompong Speu province, only about 30 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, on May 16.

''After a 30-minute battle, our resistance forces completely destroyed the regimental position and the Kong Pisei district office buildings, killing 45 enemy soldiers on the spot and wounding 52 others,'' the radio said.

In a separate attack four days earlier, the Khmer Rouge destroyed two Soviet-supplied tanks and two trucks, killing five soldiers south of Kompong Speu, the radio said.

The reports could not be independently confirmed.

(MAY 23) UPI - Crude oil prices plunged Wednesday following a surge in U.S. inventories, a wave of Middle East gold selling and indications that the OPEC cartel is failing to make promised delivery cutbacks.

On the initial day of trading in the July-delivery contract, the benchmark West Texas Intermediate was down 82 cents to $18.10 a barrel in early trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, prompt delivery WTI was losing 80 cents to $16.85 a barrel.

Unleaded gasoline for June delivery, which lost 1.39 cents Monday and Tuesday after gaining 2.55 cents last week, was being quoted at 62 cents a gallon on the Merc, down 1.04 cents.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent crude was down 60 cents to $16.15 a barrel. The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - was trading at $13.97 a barrel, down 48 cents.

Late Tuesday after Merc trading had stopped, the American Petroleum Institute reported U.S. crude oil stocks grew 4.4 million barrels last week to 380.2 million barrels, 39 million barrels higher than a year ago and the highest level since the early 1980s.

The buildup added to the world glut of crude stocks and the downward pressure on prices that has dominated oil markets for the last six weeks. Bill Hinton of Stotler & Co. in New York said traders were ascribing the large spread between the Merc and cash-market WTI prices to the difficulty some refiners were having in finding storage facilities for prompt delivery crude.

John Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Foundation has estimated, however, U.S. storage capacity around 471 million barrels, indicating there is room nationwide for more crude.

In addition, Peter Gignoux of Shearson Lehman Hutton's London office said there are indications that the agreement early this month of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to reduce cartel output is not working out. Gignoux said sources tell him that Iran has actually increased its exports.

A drop in the value of gold also is affecting the market, he said. "I strongly believe in the correlation between gold and oil prices." In Europe, the value of gold plunged amid a wave of sales from the Middle East.

Analysts said an extremely large sell order, rumored to have come from the Middle East, sent gold tumbling in Zurich, closing $13 lower at $361.50 an ounce from $374.50 per ounce at Tuesday's close. Gold moved down by $11 in London at $363.75 per ounce against $374.75 per ounce.

Peter Beutel attributed the drop in gold and oil prices to a large payment by Saudi Arabia on a previous multibillion dollar arms deal with Britain that included the Tornado fighter-bomber. "The Saudis coffers appear to be running short. The Saudis have two things to make payments with - gold and oil," Beutel said.

MIAMI (MAY 23) UPI - Carnival Cruise Lines Inc. filed a $700 million suit Wednesday against the parent companies of a Finnish shipyard that went bankrupt before delivering three cruise ships on order by Carnival.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in Miami, alleges that Oy Wartsila AB and Valmet Oy AB of Finland misrepresented the financial condition of their shipyard subsidiary, Wartsila Marine Industries Inc.

Carnival spokesman Tim Gallagher said the collapse of Wartsila Marine added at least $100 million to Carnival's construction costs, and delayed the delivery of its cruise ships Fantasy and Ecstasy. The company's contract for the third ship, the Sensation, was canceled. Carnival ordered all three ships in 1987.

The lawsuit says a report by independent Finnish auditors earlier this month indicated that Wartsila Marine's parent companies saddled it with overvalued assets and contracts with huge but hidden losses when it was formed in 1987.

Wartsila Marine went bankrupt in October. The shipyard's clients, including Carnival, Union Bank of Finland and the Finnish government, formed Masa-Yards in November to continue work at the yard. Carnival holds an 11 percent stake in that venture.

Carnival agreed to complete construction of two ships at the yard. The Fantasy was delivered two months late for $225 million, or about $25 million above the original price.

Gallagher said Carnival expects to take delivery of the Ecstasy in April 1991, about six months later than planned, at a cost of $275 million, or $75 million above the original cost. "We are talking to other shipyards about constructing the Sensation," Gallagher said.

Carnival, one of the world's largest cruise operators, said it suffered more than $400 million in damage, including its additional construction costs and the loss of passenger bookings as the result of the bankruptcy. The Carnival suit also seeks $300 million in punitive damages.

In a separate development Wednesday, Carnival announced plans to raise about $200 million by issuing zero coupon convertible subordinated notes due in 2005. The company said it filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The company said it plans to use the money to repay the $149 million down-payment financing for its Holland America Line subsidiary's purchase of three ships, and to boost working capital.

The company and its subsidiaries Holland America and Windstar Sail Cruises operate 15 ships in the Caribbean and Mediterranean, the South Pacific, and Alaska.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - A French cable broadcaster and cellular telephone network operator has paid $100 million for a 16.7 percent stake in Air and Water Technologies Corp., it was disclosed Wednesday in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Compagnie Generale des Eaux, based in Paris, paid $100 million for 3.54 million shares of Branchburg, N.J.-based Air & Water, which has 21 million shares of common stock outstanding. The Schedule 13D filing also indicated the stock of the environmental services firm will be held in escrow until the purchase has been cleared under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976.

The purchase was financed by internally generated funds, General des Eaux said in the filing. "Generale des Eaux pursues a long-term strategy of acquiring interests in high quality, high technology companies, and the acquisition of the (Air & Water) shares is being carried out in accordance with this strategy," the French company said in the filing.

Even if Generale des Eaux plans a takeover, however, its efforts would be limited by a standstill agreement that the two companies concluded May 13. Under that agreement, Air & Water would have the right of first refusal for any stock that Generale des Eaux may decide to sell to a third party. Similarly, if Air & Water receives a takeover bid from a third party, Generale des Eaux will have the right to better that offer.

Generale des Eaux cannot "sell or transfer, or agree to sell or transfer or grant proxies... or other voting rights, or options, warrant or any similar agreement with respect to any shares" for three years, the agreement provides.

The two companies plan to explore the possibility of marketing and selling Air & Water's products in Europe and developing joint ventures in Europe and the Far East.

PARIS (MAY 23) UPI - A new generation of the supersonic Concorde moved a step closer to reality Wednesday when two major American manufacturers and a West German company agreed to study the feasibility of building the aircraft.

The Boeing Co. of Seattle, McDonnell Douglas Corp. of St. Louis and West Germany's Deutsche Airbus said they would join Aerospatiale of France and British Aerospace in a preliminary study to decide whether building a newsupersonic plane is environmentally and financially realistic.

Aerospatiale and British Aerospace, which make the Concorde aircraft now in commercial service, announced two weeks ago a five-year, $35 million feasibility study for a new Concorde capable of flying up to 2.4 times the speed of sound and carrying 200 passengers.

A brief statement issued by Aerospatiale in Paris Wednesday said only that studies by the U.S. and German companies would complement the broader five-year study. Boeing, McDonnell Douglas and Deutsche Airbus will decide at the end of a year whether they will remain involved in the project.

Aerospatiale President Henri Matre said the new Concorde would be able to fly at about 1,550 mph, slightly faster than the current Concorde, and would have a passenger seating capacity twice the current model's. The Concorde can carry approximately 100 passengers. The new plane would have a flying range of up to 7,500 miles, also double that of the current model.

If the studies are positive and financing can be obtained, production of the new aircraft would begin in 1995, with the first models flying by the year 2005. Matre estimated between 300 and 500 of the new planes could be sold worldwide.

"This means that there is room for only one model in the world," he said, explaining the cooperation between the companies. "It would be madness to build two models."

The Aerospatiale president said the manufacturers needed to design an environmentally safe, fuel-efficient and cost-effective plane. Research-and-development costs are estimated at between $10 billion and $13 billion.

The original sleek, long-nosed craft got off to a rough start because of the oil crisis of the 1970s. While its developers counted on selling 300 planes, only 16 were actually built.

But a fall in the price of jet fuel and an increase in passenger air traffic in recent years - especially between Europe, the United States and the booming economies of the Pacific region - could make a more efficient, second-generation supersonic airplane economically viable.

Also, after years of losses, the Concorde has begun to turn profits for Air France and British Airways, the two carriers that bought the original model. Air France reported a $15 million profit on its Concorde operations in 1987.

The 14 Concordes now in operation fly mainly on the London and Paris to New York runs. They also make special charter flights, and French presidents use them for official trips as a symbol of European technology. It took a yearlong court battle against environmental critics before a Concorde was allowed to land in New York for the first time on Nov. 22, 1977.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Education and health activists urged the government Wednesday to help rid public schools of the carcinogenic gas radon, but the Environmental Protection Agency said states should handle the problem.

''We support federal legislation to require testing of public school buildings for radon,'' Harvey Press, president of the Rhode Island chapter of the National Education Association, told a Senate Environment and Public Works subcommittee.

''Our organization also supports federal assistance for schools to take immediate corrective action when radon levels exceed EPA's radon action guidelines,'' he said.

Press, who also represents the national PTA, urged Congress to pass legislation that would authorize more than $5 million for radon testing in schools during the next four years.

Radon is an odorless, colorless gas created from the natural radioactive breakdown of uranium and radium. Radon accumulates in large concentrations in buildings, and according to studies by the EPA and other national scientific organizations, it is the second-leading cause of lung cancer in the United States.

Dr. John DiLiberti, a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics, said research indicates that children are disproportionately more vulnerable to the effects of such hazardous substances as radon.

''Since children both breathe faster than adults and appear to be more sensitive to ... ionizing radiation, the risk of lung cancer from a give radon exposure may be higher in children than adults, increasing the urgency of our response to this hazard.''

DiLiberti noted that while the academy supports passage of the legislation it is concerned that impoverished inner-city schools may be ignored because the bill specifies that only schools in areas with high radon production risks be tested.

''Poorly maintained, older schools may have unacceptably high levels (of radon) despite locations in geographic areas with inherently lower radon production risks,'' DiLiberti said.

Richard Guimond, director of the EPA's Office of Air and Radiation, said the radon problem in schools can best be solved by allowing states to develop their own programs with the help of federal grants.

''Although the federal role is important, radon is not primarily a federal issue,'' Guimond said. ''States play a vital role in determining which activities are most appropriate for their particular state and (in) assisting schools in reducing radon risk.''

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - Mayor David Dinkins said Wednesday his calls for racial and ethnic unity are striking a positive chord among the city's ''silent majority'' but that speeches alone are not the answer because ''there are racists among us, and too many.''

''We need a lot more'' than speeches, Dinkins said the morning after leading a hastily organized rally for racial harmony that drew 6,000 people to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Dinkins said society must attack the ''root causes, the underlying causes'' of racism and racial strife.

The mayor has been on a campaign-footing for nearly two weeks, stumping the city to promote healing and calm after coming under fire for not acting forcefully enough to defuse tensions arising from the Bensonhurst racial killing trial and a black boycott of two Korean groceries.

''The effort must continue. We must be ever vigilant,'' Dinkins said. ''There are racists among us, and too many. There's no question about that. This is not new. But there's a need for us to acknowledge it and attack it.''

The mayor said reaction to the Tuesday evening rally, highlighted by speeches by himself and Gov. Mario Cuomo, has been ''very positive.''

''It demonstrates there is this large, heretofore silent majority. But we still have to address the ills that beset our society,'' he said.

Dinkins said he would continue to reach out to that ''silent majority'' while acknowledging there is little chance he would be able to change the minds of some of his most vocal critics.

Among those were civil rights attorney C. Vernon Mason, who said he is not very impressed by the mayor's rhetoric or actions.

''It's a call for public relations, a call for quiet, a call for calm without justice,'' said Mason, a black activist who has accused Dinkins of being a ''traitor'' who sympathizes more with Jews than with his fellow African-Americans.

But some Jewish conservatives also were displeased with the mayor.

The weekly Jewish Press, which strongly opposed his election in the first place, called on Dinkins to resign. It charged he is ''too soft on crime'' and is unwilling to enforce the law against blacks.

CARBONDALE, IL (MAY 23) UPI - It has always been tough for women to crack the male-dominated world of network television correspondents - and it seems to be getting even tougher, a researcher said Wednesday.

Joe Foote, Southern Illinois University professor of radio and television, said only eight of the most frequently seen 100 correspondents on ABC, CBS and NBC television networks in 1989 were women. The number is down from 15 in 1988, Foote said.

Although women made up only eight of the top 100, three women appeared in the top 10. Lesley Stahl of CBS was No. 3 followed by No. 4 Andrea Mitchell of NBC and No. 8 Rita Braver of CBS. The most frequently seen network correspondent in 1989 was NBC's John Cochran.

The figures are compiled from the Vanderbilt University Television News Index.

''It's pretty good news for women at the top and not such good news for the rest,'' said Foote, who has been doing his Network Correspondent Visibility Study since 1983.

''There is an assumption in American society that women are upwardly mobile in the workplace, but that's not the case in network television news,'' Foote said.

When it comes to men, Foote said the networks tend to draw their anchors and superstars from the correspondent ranks. But he said women who reach the top have not usually paid their dues as correspondents.

''The women stars seem to leapfrog the system and often come out of local television. This results in some women moving up before they are ready,'' Foote added.

Other findings:

-Washington continues to dominate network coverage. Nine of the top 10 most-seen correspondents are based in Washington.

-No blacks were among the top 50 correspondents. NBC's Noah Nelson was the most visible black at No. 59. Only two Hispanics made the top 50 - No. 16 Juan Vasquez of CBS and No. 41 John Quinones of ABC.

-Women have consistently made up about 16 percent of the national correspondents who made at least five appearances annually on the evening news.

-ABC had the most women in the study, but was the only network without a women in the top 50.

The top 50 were:

1. John Cochran NBC, 2. Brit Hume ABC, 3. Lesley Stahl CBS, 4. Andrea Mitchell NBC, 5. David Martin CBS, 6. Robert Hager NBC, 7. John McWethy ABC, 8. Rita Braver CBS, 9. George Lewis NBC, 10. Wyatt Andrews CBS.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - PepsiCo Inc. - aiming to make soft-drink consumption in India an everyday occurrence rather than an occasional treat - Wednesday launched an Indian joint venture it had been negotiating since 1985.

The effort will initially cost Pepsi-Cola International some $100 million but could result in enormous long-term gains if the beverage maker and its two Indian partners, Punjab Agro Industries Corp. and Voltas Ltd., stir the taste buds of India's burgeoning middle class.

Somers, N.Y.-based Pepsi, the world's No. 2 soft-drink maker behind Coca-Cola Co., believes about 150 million Indians currently have the income necessary to become frequent soft-drink sippers.

''We see this market as bigger than China and the U.S.S.R. combined,'' said Pepsi spokesman Barry Holt.

While the launch should help underscore India's reputation as a nation shedding its closed foreign-trade policies, it will allow Pepsi to gain a foothold in India unchallenged by archrival Coke, which withdrew from the Indian market in 1977.

Pepsi fought long and hard for the multi-point food-and-beverage deal that includes bringing Pepsi, Seven-Up and an orange drink called Mirinda to the Indian market.

It was given the final nod in February by the government of new Indian Prime Minster V.P. Singh - over the objections of Indian beverage makers and a challenge by Coke - after five years of negotiations and 15 reviews by two government regimes.

Per capita, India's 800 million citizens consume just three bottles of soft drinks a year - just the kind of undeveloped market that makes beverage manufacturers drool, analysts said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - The administration was ready Wednesday to extend most-favored-nation trade status for China despite continuing U.S. concern over the lack of progress toward improved human rights, officials said.

Secretary of State James Baker, at a White House briefing on the forthcoming U.S.-Soviet summit, said he did not want to anticipate the expected presidential announcement, but he gave a succinct list of reasons for extending the preferential trade treatment.

Baker's statements coincided with reports from administration officials foreshadowing the presidential decision, expected to be announced later Wednesday.

Baker pointed to several areas where the Chinese have relaxed control, including: the recent release of 211 political detainees, the lifting of martial law in Tibet and ''a general indication of willingness to begin to take further steps such as that.''

Baker also mentioned ''the disappointing lack of progress'' in human rights, but he also made it clear that the Chinese trade status would be continued.

Baker said, ''I think the real issue is who gets hurt or who gets hit if you decide you are not going to extend it. And what are the consequences of terminating. That's the way you ought to look at this, not so much what has been done in the one-year period since (the crushing of the pro-democracy movement at) Tiananmen.''

He added, ''You should consider the effects of this upon the reformers in the Chinese government, people who want to take China toward more democratization. You ought to consider, I would think, the effect on some very significant and substantial economic interests the United States has (and) the effect on Hong Kong.''

Most-favored-nation trading status is reserved for the United States' best trading partners, offering the freest access to U.S. markets. In most products, MFN means the difference between 5 to 10 percent duty rates, compared to 40 percent to 50 percent for products not covered by the preferential status.

U.S.-China trade in 1989 added up to $18 billion, with China exporting $12 billion to the United States and the United States exporting $5.8 billion worth of goods.

The White House was under strong pressure from the American business community to extend the trading status for China.

David Lambert of the National Committee on U.S.-China Relations, in recent Congressional testimony, listed the reasons his organization favors extension of the preferred trading status, saying failure to do so:

-''Would weaken those many persons still scattered throughout China's policy-making structure who argue that economic ties to the United States bring tangible benefits to their country.''

-''Would damage first, and most profoundly, those parts of the Chinese economy most closely linked to the outside world.''

-''Would aggravate the sense of isolation which China's most cosmopolitan and outward looking citizens already feel and would produce a new wave of nationalistic and xenophic sentiments in China.''

-Would just prompt China to turn to some of its 100 other trading partners most notably Japan. Those countries would move to fill any gap left by a reduction in U.S.-China trade. Cutting the trade would also make it questionable whether China could or would continue paying off its $45 billion in external debts, much of it owed to U.S. financial institutions.

KANSAS CITY, MO (MAY 23) UPI - Delegates to the United Auto Workers collective bargaining convention have approved resolutions covering a broad range of issues that will guide union leaders in 1990 contract negotiations.

The resolutions approved late Tuesday deal with a variety of issues important to the 450,000 members of the UAW employed in the automobile industry, including job security, health care, pensions, new technology, auto makers' investments in overseas operations and sourcing-outside contracting.

The pensions resolution did not include a clause regarding cost-of-living allowances (COLAs) on pensions, an issue that received considerable attention during the two-day convention.

But activists pushing for COLAs on pensions interpreted UAW President Owen Bieber's comments during debate on the resolution as a commitment to seek the COLAs. Bieber reportedly said after the meeting that he would put the issue on the bargaining table, but that could not be confirmed Wednesday.

Negotiators for the UAW and the automakers will begin talks in July on a new three-year contract covering workers at Chrysler Corp., General Motors Corp., and Ford Motor Co. The current contract expires Sept. 14.

The union leadership said before the convention it would not push for COLAs on pensions because of the cost involved. Detroit automakers also have said such contract provisions would be too expensive.

Besides bread-and-butter issues concerning wages, benefits, and pensions, issues the UAW will raise during contract negotiations reflect workers' concerns about trends within the automobile industry.

Among these are "sourcing," U.S. automakers' decision to move entire production programs to Mexico and other countries for export to the United States.

"In a period when large numbers of jobs are being lost due to the flood of imports, it is unacceptable that U.S. firms are adding to the tide with such shortsighted arrangements," the UAW resolution said. "Our job security and a healthy industrial base require U.S. firms to commit the investment necessary to produce a full range of high U.S.-content products."

The union said it would call on all UAW employers to increase their capital, product development, research, technological, and human investments in the United States.

The union also said it would attempt to strengthen contract provisions regarding technological change. The UAW said it would seek a provision requiring an employer to provide an impact statement describing new technology and its effect on employment and income security.

In an unsuccessful attempt to prevent the illegal voting in the election last Sunday... Soviet authorities detained Armenian activists smuggling ballots into Nagorno-Karabakh and shut down its main airport. Nagorno-Karabakh belongs to the republic of Azerbaijan but most of its people are ethnic Armenians.

Authorities in Lakeville, Michigan, say they have NO idea why someone dug up the casket of a long-dead child, took the remains and re-buried the casket. Officials say the grave was that of a two-year-old girl who died 18 years ago.

PARIS (MAY 23) UPI - Seven people suspected of belonging to a ''Satanic music cult'' were questioned Wednesday in connection with the desecration of a Jewish cemetery, but were released hours after they were picked up, police said.

The release of the latest suspects was another setback to investigators, who admit to having few leads in the case that rocked France two weeks ago.

Police gave little credence to a statement published Wednesday in a regional newspaper, signed by a group calling itself ''Mohammed El Boukhina'' and claiming responsibility for the vandalism at the Carpentras cemetery in southern France.

Police said they believe that at least some of the seven people arrested and later released may have vandalized another cemetery in November 1988.

Police arrested 15 people in pre-dawn raids in the region around the town of Albi, 200 miles west of the southern town of Carpentras. All but the seven were released after identity checks, police said.

The arrests in an area relatively far from Carpentras suggested that authorities believe the vandals who desecrated 34 tombs and impaled the body of an elderly man on an umbrella on May 10 came from outside the immediate region.

The vandalism at the Carpentras cemetery and similar acts at other burial sites later caused widespread consternation in France. A silent march against racism gathered an estimated 200,000 people in Paris May 14, including President Francois Mitterrand.

Police said the seven people questioned were between 20 and 30 years old and were linked to a bizarre ''satanic music cult'' known as ''Trash.'' Police said they may be the same group that unearthed a number of skulls in November 1988 at a cemetery in the town of Lombers, located just south of Albi.

Other police sources said an eighth person believed to be a ''skinhead'' may have been arrested by police in Toulouse in south-central France in the Carpentras case.

Police have concentrated their investigation among southern France's skinheads - so called for their close-cropped haircuts - because of their alleged connections with neo-Nazi groups.

Although the French government sent an additional 60 officers to work on the case last week, police sources said the investigation had been badly hampered by a lack of evidence and political meddling.

Last week, police arrested three skinheads in eastern France and charged them with defacing 90 tombstones at the Catholic cemetery of Saint-Herblain, but police said Wednesday they had been released.

SANTA MONICA, CA (MAY 23) UPI - Actor Jeff Conaway, best known for his role in the television sitcom "Taxi," pleaded innocent Wednesday to drunken driving charges stemming from an incident in which he allegedly struck a bicyclist with his car and seriously injuring the man.

Conaway, 39, who lives in the Hollyood Hills, appeared in Superior Court for arraignment and denied two counts of felony drunken driving and one misdemeanor count of giving false information to a police officer. He was allowed to remain free without posting bail and was ordered to return to court for a pretrial hearing June 27.

Prosecutors said Conaway was arrested Feb. 23 by Beverly Hills police after his car struck a bicyclist. The bicyclist, Farid Farhan, 31, suffered a broken leg and required 15 stitches for a cut on the back of his head.

Prosecutors said Conaway's blood alcohol content was .15, nearly twice the legal limit of .08. The prosecutor said the actor told police that a "phantom hit-and-run motorist" had struck the bicyclist.

BY PATRICIA KOZA - UPI

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (MAY 23) UPI - Romanians voted in overwhelming numbers for the communist-dominated National Salvation Front out of economic insecurity, cultural conditioning and fear, Romanian and Western analysts said Wednesday.

By giving interim President Ion Iliescu a stunning 85 percent of the vote and his Front an unassailable 66 percent edge in Parliament, Romania became the first Eastern European nation to freely vote in a government of former communists since Czechoslovakia in 1948.

The landslide vote may have surprised most observers. But several factors that make up the Romanian psyche contributed to the endorsement of some of the men who served in the despotic regime of dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, who was executed in Romania's December revolution.

From the voters' point of view, a major reason for the overwhelming ballot box endorsement of Iliescu was the lack of a true choice.

The other two presidential candidates, Radu Campeanu of the Liberal Party and Ion Ratiu of the Peasant Party, were millionaire emigres who returned to their homeland after the revolution.

''What right have they to come back here and tell us what to do?'' was the typical sentiment voiced by a computer analyst whose family had endured the dreary years under Ceausescu.

A second major factor is the composition of the working class.

Romania, chiefly an agricultural country, entered a period of accelerated industrial growth as late as the 1960s and 1970s.

Unlike the experienced workers of industrialized Czechoslovakia or East Germany or the politically astute workers of Poland, Romanian workers are first-generation urban dwellers. They credit communism with bringing them in from the country and providing them with jobs and apartments.

The last thing either workers or peasants want to hear is what the Peasants and Liberals seemed to be advocating: a swift transfer to a free-market economy and privatization of both land and industry, with its inevitable unemployment and inflation.

The only substantial opposition to Iliescu was among the intellectuals and the students. Neither segment has been able to build a bridge or appeal to the workers or the peasants, as Solidarity did in the Gdansk shipyard in 1980 to sow the seeds for the revolutions that erupted in Eastern Europe nearly a decade later.

Another large class of Romanians is the ''nomenklatura,'' the hundreds of thousands of bureaucrats whose owe their jobs and privileges to the Communist Party. They will resist the types of changes Romania must undergo to compete economically in the modern world in order to maintain the status quo from which they benefit.

Aside from their personal concerns, Romanians may want most of all to forget.

''The Romanian people don't want a detailed explanation of the past,'' said Thomas Kleininger, a researcher at the Institute of Art History and member of a leading opposition force, the Group for Social Dialogue.

''They only want to forget,'' he said. ''It's kind of like Germany after World War II.''

George Serban, a leader of the companion Timisoara Society in the city that was the birthplace of the revolution, said Romanians voted above all for security.

''After 45 years of communist propaganda, people have prejudices, suspicions,'' he said. ''They no longer have the taste of adventure, of risk. They want silence, stability - the stability of communism. They feel they may be poor, but secure.''

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Jimmy Breslin returns to print on Thursday following a two-week suspension over racial slurs.

Breslin was suspended without pay by his parent newspaper Newsday when he derided a Korean-American woman reporter with racial epithets for calling one of his columns sexist and then ridiculed the incident on a radio talk show.

The controversy cost Breslin one newspaper. The Oregonian of Portland, Ore., said it canceled his column because after the apology to reporter Ji-Jeon Mary Yuh, he kept up the commentary on the radio talk show.

''We decided to let him apologize, that was fine,'' said Judson Randall, the assistant to Editor William Hilliard. ''But then he turned around and called the radio show and made light of the apology.

''And we decided there's something funny going on in that guy's mind and we don't think that attitude's appropriate,'' he said.

Hilliard announced the decision in an editor's note accompanying a guest column written by Washington Post copy editor Dorothy Ing Russell discussing the incident.

Hilliard quoted Russell as saying ''there is no excuse for what Breslin did.''

''Breslin revealed attitudes that have no place in the newsroom or in a nation of people from all walks of life, of all colors, religions, and ethnic and national backgrounds,'' Hilliard said. ''And Breslin has no place in The Oregonian.''

The Los Angeles Times Syndicate, which distributes Breslin's column, would not comment on whether other clients have dropped it because of the incident.

But Steve Christensen, the syndicate's executive editor, said two or three newspapers have dropped the column during the last few weeks.

''We've had a couple of cancellations, but we don't know whether they were due to this incident or whether they were the normal cancellations you get when you're doing syndication,'' he said.

WARSAW, POLAND (MAY 23) UPI - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa called on striking railway workers Wednesday to end their wildcat walkout, saying their demands for higher pay were justified but that a strike was too drastic.

Walesa's plea came as the strike appeared to be moving toward resolution. Labor Minister Jacek Kuron met earlier with the strikers to hear their demands.

He promised to present the demands to the Council of Ministers and respond on Friday.

In the city of Torun, several railwaymen ended a sympathy hunger strike which had begun Sunday, the news agency PAP said.

''I think your strike is justified,'' Walesa said in a telex to the the strikers headquarters in the northwestern city of Slupsk. ''However, I cannot deny justice to the government's arguments.

''... Please end your strike by means of mediation and agreement of a kind that would not hurt your dignity and pride.''

Walesa was responding to an invitation by the railwaymen to come to Slupsk to discuss ways of resolving the conflict, which began two weeks ago when 45 workers began a hunger strike to protest low wages and lack of economic reforms.

The striking employees, demanding an 85 percent wage hike to $67 a month, currently earn $37 a month compared with the national average of $80 monthly.

The strike has shut down rail service to the major port of Szczecin.

A delegation of the strikers met with Kuron in Warsaw and presented a list of demands, including reorganization of the Polish railway system, higher wages and personnel changes on all levels, Polish radio said.

In his statement, Walesa noted the strikers did not work through either Solidarity or the OPZZ federation, the former communist trade union group.

''You are protesting outside any trade union structures,'' he said. ''This road is leading in the wrong direction. You are right, but in order to achieve your goals you have chosen inadequate, too drastic means.''

Noting the country's dire economic situation, he added, ''I think that our frail economy and young democracy may not stand this tough test.''
Earlier, Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki refused to send his representative for talks with the Solidarity leadership on how to end the strike.

''The government could not accept a demand which resembled an ultimatum to come for talks in Gdansk,'' a government spokeswoman said.

She said the government was concerned the strike was affecting Poland's image as a stable country.

The Solidarity National Commission, its top executive body, met Tuesday night and criticized the government for ''passive economic policy which restricts its actions only to halting growth of wages and fighting inflation.''

The full strike began last Sunday, halting 160 commuter trains and 22 long-distance trains.

CHICAGO (MAY 23) UPI - Soybeans, corn and oats closed mainly higher Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade while wheat closed lower.

Soybeans closed moderately higher in subdued activity with planting delays in the Midwest bolstering deferred months. Traders said there are fears that bean plantings could be boosted at the expense of corn if drier soil conditions prevail in early to mid-June.

Secretary of State James Baker's comments that President Bush will decide

''in the near term'' whether to extend China's most-favored-nation trading status trimmed gains on beans. Earlier in the day, commission houses and professionals steadily sold beans. There also was some light commercial selling.

Cash-connected buying and short-covering extended gains for corn, which also got a boost at midday from a rally in beans that resulted in local and scattered speculative buying.

Late speculative demand helped limit losses in wheat. New-crop months were under pressure by earlier commission house and commercial selling.

At the close, corn was off 1 1/4 to up 2 1/4, wheat was up 1/2 to off 1 1/4, soybeans were up 1 1/2 to off 1/4 and oats were up 1/2 to up 1.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) UPI - Soviet economic planners, seeking to calm fears about radical reforms, Wednesday promised an FDR-like New Deal for millions of jobless and a nationwide referendum on the transition to a market economy.

Economic reform czar Leonid Abalkin and Gosplan central planning director Yuri Maslyukov outlined their plan for the news media one day before the Soviet Parliament was to begin considering the reform package that could determine the fate of President Mikhail Gorbachev's "perestroika" drive for renewal.

Abalkin and Maslyukov said the envisioned transition to a modified market system will take two years, with the first price increases to be introduced July 1 and others next January.

Both men said they were aware of widespread public fears of the reforms, which call for slashing government subsidies that keep the prices of staples low and for an end to propping up unprofitable enterprises that employ millions.

At least 13 percent of the nation's 48,000 industrial plants are believed to be unprofitable and could face closure, costing workers their jobs. "The worst-case scenario would be 40 million jobless," Maslyukov said. Abalkin said: "The redistribution of the work force could amount to tens of millions."

Abalkin admitted frankly the radical steps to raise prices and sell off unprofitable enterprises would have been less painful if the government had taken them three years ago. The minister said the Soviets are looking to the American experience in recovering from the Great Depression of the 1930s.

"We are studying the public works system of Franklin Delano Roosevelt," Abalkin said. He spoke specifically of giving the new Soviet unemployed jobs building roads and bridges and doing conservation work of the sort devised in the New Deal's Public Works Adminstration.

"We have quite good prospects for public works at the local Soviet level," Abalkin said, stressing that the newly elected Soviets, or local council, now have increased economic powers.

Abalkin said unemployment compensation should be reserved as an extreme measure, while Maslyukov said flatly the government does not have enough funds to tide over an army of unemployed.

Maslyukov promised the government will hold a referendum on the transition to a modified market, and stake its future on the result. "If the government program is not approved (in the referendum), it is my opinion that the government should resign," he said.

Maslyukov said if the Soviet people vote down the radical reforms, the government would resort to a round-table discussion with opposing forces to discuss how to proceeed, which was done in Poland three years ago after a plebiscite in which Poles rejected a market system.

For the last two months, the Soviet press has carried warnings from readers who fear a market economy after decades of central planning that gave them virtual cradle-to-grave security, including guaranteed jobs, low apartment rents and cheap prices on bread, meat, and milk that have not changed for 30 years. The eight-cent underground Metro ride has not been raised for a half century.

The first test of public reaction to the new reforms will come July 1 when the state triples the price of bread, which now costs 32 cents a loaf - so low that Gorbachev lamented in Murmansk three years ago that children were using loaves to play football. Farmers also find it economical to buy bread at state stores to feed it as fodder to their cattle.

While economists have debated the move toward a market economy and Gorbachev's new Presidential Council has met countless times on the move, the Soviet economy has steadily deteriorated, with production dropping ten percent already this year.

The government budget deficit has resisted plans to slash it from $154 billion last year to $90 billion this year, and the state is forced to print more and more money to cover wages and enterprise bills.

Because the ruble is not convertible, the government cannot sell bonds or stocks abroad to finance its debt. The nation also lacks an internal stock and bond market to close the deficit.

The government's only options are to slash expenditures, increase taxes or print money. The printing press thus far has been its chosen method, further depressing the value of the ruble now called among Soviets "wooden money."

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (MAY 23) UPI - The new Romanian government's most pressing immediate problem is how to handle a radical group of anti-communist demonstrators who have controlled an intersection in the heart of the capital for nearly a month.

The group, which includes several hunger strikers, vows not to leave University Square until interim President Ion Iliescu and his National Salvation Front (NSF) resign, along with all communists in the government.

The square has been closed off to traffic during the protest and is the site of daily rallies, leaflet distribution, songs and chants calling for freedom and democracy.

It has been designated by the protesters as a ''communist-free zone'' and was left alone by the ruling Front during the recent election campaign in which it was returned to power in a landslide last Sunday.

Now that Iliescu and the Front have won the endorsement of the Romanian voters, there is rampant speculation about what will happen next with the protesters.

Late on Tuesday, Justice Minister Teofil Pop was chased from the square by a jeering crowd when he attempted to talk with the hunger strikers.

''I think the organizers have lost control,'' said Thomas Kleininger, a spokesman for the Center for Social Dialogue, a group of intellectuals with close ties to the demonstrators.

''They want to defuse what's happening there, but they're incapable.''

This week the strikers consolidated their position by putting up a huge banner, ''Welcome to Golania.''

A few weeks ago Iliescu had called them ''golans'' - hooligans. The protesters proudly took up the description as their own, and many sport badges reading ''golan.''

One of the hunger strikers, Victor Capraru, said the Romanian population voted for ''a little bit of salami, a little bit of meat'' and failed to see the bigger issue: namely, that the same types of people rule Romania now as did before the revolution.

''We won't leave until we win,'' he declared. ''Either we win or we die.''

Kleininger said his group has been trying to suggest ways to resolve the issue, but his greatest fear is that it will end violently.

''There could be violence - not from the outside, the police, but from the inside - an explosion of despair perhaps,'' he said. ''And that would compromise the idea of protest in this country for years. It'a very dangerous thing.''

He said the only thing that might resolve the situation peacefully is a gesture by Iliescu himself, ''but I think he isn't capable of it.''

DETROIT (MAY 23) UPI - Sales of domestically made cars virtually stalled during mid-May, coasting to the side of the road to post a 19.3 percent drop from year-ago levels - and the lowest annual selling rate so far this year.

Domestic light truck sales fell 15 percent from a year ago when measured by sales per day, automakers said Wednesday. Combined, U.S. vehicle sales dropped 17.7 percent during the May 11-20 period.

The annual sales rate for domestically built cars - the most common measure of industry performance - was a weak 5.6 million cars during the latest period, as against 6.8 million last year. It was the lowest rate since early December, 1989.

"Showroom traffic is slow pretty much throughout the country," said Joel Pitcoff, a sales analyst for Ford Motor Co. "Nobody seems to have a real handle on it, but it isn't just raining on us." Pitcoff also said that fewer fleet deliveries may be partially responsible for the sales stall. "That well is starting to run dry."

Some industry observers said buyers may be holding out for better buyer discounts after top carmakers renewed incentive programs with less lucrative offers earlier this month. Consumers may also be reacting to headlines that say interest rates will decline, so financing costs may be lower.

But other analysts said a steady, incremental increase in late-model used cars from daily rental fleets is hurting carmakers, as manufacturers are forced to buy back their cars at pre-determined prices and dispose of them themselves.

"The daily rental fleets are going into the used car market and attracting price-conscious buyers who often can get the same financing and warranty as on a new car," said Michael Luckey, of The Luckey Consulting Group, in Tappan, N.J.

The nine companies, General Motors Corp., Ford, Chrysler Corp., American Honda Motor Co., Nissan Motor Manufacturing U.S.A., Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Mazda Motor Manufacturing (USA) Corp., Mitsubishi Motor Sales of America, Inc. and Subaru-Isuzu Automotive Inc. (SIA) reported combined sales of 160,645 cars and 98,465 trucks in the United States during mid-May. This compared with 223,897 cars and 130,339 trucks sold in the year-ago period, automakers said.

The daily selling rate of 32,389 vehicles compared with 39,360 vehicles per day for the same period last year. There were eight selling days this year, compared with nine last year.

So far in 1990, the firms have sold nearly 2.65 million cars, down 5.5 percent from the 2.8 million units sold in the comparable 1989 period. Sales of light trucks were 1.58 million units, down 2.5 percent from 1.62 million trucks sold during the same period a year ago.

GM, Ford and Chrysler all posted double digit drops in both car and truck sales during the period when compared with a year ago. Sales of GM's domestically made cars fell 23.7 percent from a year ago, while its truck sales were off 16.7 percent. Second-ranked Ford's car sales fell 29.9 percent, while its truck sales were off 12 percent.

Chrysler's car sales fell 22.1 percent, while its light truck sales including Jeep fell 21 percent when compared with the combined total a year ago. Among the smaller companies reporting sales of U.S.-built cars, Honda posted a 22.5 percent gain. Toyota's sales rose 117.1 percent from relatively low volumes a year ago.

Nissan reported a 63 percent gain in sales of its U.S.-built cars, while its domestically made compact truck sales rose 32 percent, both from very low year-ago levels.

Mazda sold 1,272 cars produced at its Flat Rock, Mich. assembly plant, compared with 985 a year ago. Mitsubishi reported sales of 1,154 Eclipse cars built at its joint venture plant with Chrysler in Illinois, as against 854 a year ago. SIA sold 100 Subaru cars and 373 Isuzu trucks built at its new joint venture plant in Larayette, Ind., during the latest period.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries

Committee voted Wednesday to prohibit the sale of tuna in the United States that is caught in nets along with dolphins.

The hastily drafted restriction was adopted on a 26-19 vote as an amendment to a bill that would require labels on products containing tuna harvested by methods that kill dolphins.

Most U.S. tuna fishermen now catch tuna without endangering dolphins.

Although the amendment offered by Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, appeared to strengthen the legislation, sponsors of the original bill said his measure was intended as a diversionary tactic.

''It's not a friendly amendment,'' said Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., chairman of the Merchant Marine subcommittee that crafted the legislation.

Because no one had an opportunity to study the amendment before it was accepted, its implications are unclear, Studds said.

Young objected to the bill's labeling provisions, saying they fail to protect dolphins and pose an unfair disadvantage to U.S. fishermen, who have largely reformed their methods for catching tuna.

Without his amendment, Young said, ''The foreigners are going to continue to fish on the dolphin. They're going to market their tuna in this country (with the labels), and they're going to sell it at 40 cents less a can, and our consumers are going to buy it.''

But Studds suggested that Young's proposal would have the effect of driving foreign tuna fishermen out of the U.S. market altogether, with no incentive to reform their fishing practices.

The bill, as crafted by Studds' subcommittee, required all tuna products sold in the United States to carry the label ''The tuna in this product was caught with methods that kill dolphins,'' unless the government certifies that such methods were not used.

The legislation singled out two fishing practices as unsafe to dolphins - large driftnets, which indiscriminately ensnare a variety of marine wildlife, and the use of purse seine nets in the eastern tropical Pacific, where dolphins swim above the tuna and are inadvertantly caught with them.

Fishing practices would be monitored by government observers assigned to fishing vessels.

Those provisions remain in the bill that the committee passed Wednesday, but they would be rendered essentially moot by Young's amendment. His measure bans the sale of any tuna product in the United States unless it is certified as dolphin-safe.

The restriction would remain in effect until the United States negotiates an agreement with foreign countries to allow increased access to their fisheries by U.S. fishermen expected to be displaced from the eastern tropical Pacific.

The number of dolphins killed in those waters dropped to 85,000 in 1988 from an estimated 360,000 annually in the early 1970s, largely as a result of increasingly strict fishing regulations under the Marine Mammal Protect Act, according to committee figures.

In addition, the three largest U.S. tuna canners announced in April they would voluntarily refrain from buying tuna that is caught in nets with dolphins. The decision followed sporadic consumer boycotts of tuna products.

PHILADELPHIA (MAY 23) UPI - The city agreed Wednesday to pay a record $1.5 million in fines for discharging inadequately treated waste from a sewage plant into the Delaware River, federal regulators said.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the state Department of Environmental Resources, in a suit filed in 1988, had charged the city's Southwest Wastewater Treatment Plant with releasing improperly treated pollutants and fecal coliform into the river, EPA officials said.

The waste contributed to the river's failure to meet environmental goals established by the Delaware River Basin Commission for supporting fish and other aquatic life, the EPA said.

U.S. Attorney Michael Baylson said the fines will be the largest paid by a U.S. city for violations of the federal Clean Water Act. The city will pay $1 million to the federal government and $500,000 to the state's Clean Streams Fund.

Under a settlement filed with U.S. District Judge J. William Ditter Jr., the city must also overhaul the plant's treatment systems and hire a consultant to oversee repairs. If the overhaul is not completed within guidelines set by the government, the city could face additional fines, the EPA said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Scientists announced Wednesday they have succeeded making high-temperature superconductors into bars that can carry large electric currents - a major step towards putting the new technology to practical use.

A University of Houston team headed by Paul Chu, a pioneer in the high-temperature superconductivity field, said it has developed a ''continuous process'' with the potential to make ''desired sizes of (superconductors) in practical forms, such as plates, rods, wires, ribbons and even thick films.''

Superconductivity research has helped fuel specualtion about a futuristic world of resistance-free electrical movement in which commuters could ride to work on ''flying'' trains and computers could make calculations at the speed of light.

Reporting in the journal Nature, Chu and his colleagues said they have used the process to make small bars of a high-temperature superconducting material with good current-carrying properties.

The largest bar produced so far measures about 6 inches long, but given enough time and proper equipment there is no limit to the length of bars that could be made, Chu said in a telephone interview.

Superconductors are materials that allow electricity to flow with no energy lost to resistance and wasted as heat. Discovered in 1911, superconductivity was at first only thought possible at the incredibly low temperature of just above 0 Kelvin or minus 459 Fahrenheit. But recent years have seen giant leaps in the creation of superconductors that work at higher temperatures and can be cooled by liquid nitrogen, rather than more costly liquid helium.

Past efforts to produce superconductors in large, usable shapes, such as wire, have encountered problems because the crystals that make up the superconductors do not line up consistently - creating resistance against electric currents and cutting power-carrying ability.

''This is the first time anyone has demonstrated that we can process this (superconducting) material in a continuous fashion to make the material in any dimension or shape that you want,'' Chu said.

''The major impact of high-temperature superconducting material will not be felt until large current applications have become reality. And to do that, you really need to have large dimensions, not just high current density.''

Based on the latest achievement and recent advances by other scientists, Chu said he is cutting three years from his estimate of when superconductors capable of carrying large amounts of electricity will be ready for industrial use. He now predicts such applications are 12 years - not 15 years - away.

The biggest obstacles immediately facing the Texas researchers, who have financial backing from E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., in Wilmington, Del., is how to speed up their production process. ''Right now, production is very, very slow,'' said Chu, noting it takes about three days to make a 2-inch bar.

''Chu may have gone farther using this process than anybody else, but this is still in very, very raw form. ... Nothing is going to happen overnight '' said David Chaffee, executive editor of Superconductor Week, a newsletter in Washington.

In an editorial in Nature, Neil Alford of ICI Advanced Materials in Runcorn, England, said Chu's results promise to bring practical applications for high-temperature superconductors ''closer to realization.'' But Alford cautioned the new materials are still glass-like which could make handling a problem.

Although superconductor experts agree the Texas achievement is important, they note it builds on the work of many other researchers, including Sungho Jin at Bell Labs who in 1988 was the first to achieve high current-carrying power in ''bulk'' superconductors consisting of large, single crystals.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) UPI - The Lithuanian Parliament voted Wednesday night to suspend laws implementing independence if the Soviet Union would agree to ''inter-state'' negotiations on secession.

The resolution, however, does not affect the actual declaration of independence, a Lithuanian government spokesman said. The action, which Lithuanian leaders proposed as a compromise, failed to meet Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand that the March 11 declaration of independence be revoked or suspended.

The resolution also was unlikely to appease the Kremlin with its language insisting the negotiations should be conducted between two states, rather than as a republic seeking permission to leave the Soviet Union. Soviet officials have rejected similar assertions in the past.

The resolution, read on Soviet television, said it is aimed at ''resolving through negotiations with the U.S.S.R. the problems connected with the strengthening of the restored independent Lithuanian state.''

The Parliament pledged ''to stop for the period of official inter-state negotiations the action of decisions implementing the acts of the Supreme Council of the Lithuanian Republic of March 11, 1990.''

Under the proposed compromise, talks would be held on ''acts ... which concern interests declared by both sides to be a subject of negotiation.''

''The present resolution goes into force from the start of inter-state negotiations between the Lithuanian republic and the U.S.S.R., and acts for the period of negotiations defined by the two sides,'' the document said.

The resolution was a result of Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene's meeting last week with Gorbachev to discuss a compromise that might lead to negotiations.

At that meeting Gorbachev repeated his demand that the actual declaration of independence be suspended before any talks began. The Soviet leader reiterated the demand Tuesday in a brief meeting with the presidents of the other two Baltic republics, Estonia and Latvia.

In Estonia Wednesday, anti-independence forces called off a three-day strike that the official Soviet news agency Tass said affected 40,000 mainly Russian workers at 30 plants.

''We have only suspended the strike,'' a strike leader identified as A. Kopytin said on a Soviet television news show. ''We will have to fight for our rights for a long time still.''

Soviet government newspapers said Tuesday the Estonian government had ordered that food orders be cut off to the enterprises that were on strike.

''He who does not work, does not eat,'' Rein Migul, Estonia's deputy minister of agriculture, was quoted by Komsomolskaya Pravda as saying.

The strikers in Estonia demanded the resignation of Estonian President Arnold Ruutel and revocation of the republic's declaration of independence.

Nationalist governments were elected in all three Baltic republics earlier this year, and Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia have each passed declarations in the last 10 weeks seeking to regain the independence they lost in the Soviet Union's 1940 annexation.

ANCHORAGE, AK (MAY 23) UPI - A Soviet vessel allegedly caught fishing in U.S. waters west of Alaska has agreed to pay the government nearly $350,000, federal prosecutors announced Wednesday.

A lawyer for the Soviets continued to deny charges of illegal fishing and said the settlement implied no admission of guilt.

The 335-foot Ilya Ilyin, seized by the Coast Guard in late April just over 1 mile inside the U.S. 200-mile zone, has been released with its crew of 84 after three weeks in custody.

As part of the settlement, the Soviets were allowed to keep 750 tons of pollock found on board and allegedly caught in American waters.

The settlement was hammered out between the U.S. attorney's office and the Soviets Friday night and signed by U.S. District Court Judge H. Russel Holland at his home so the Soviets would not have to spend another weekend detained at the Kodiak Island Coast Guard base. Terms of the settlement were not made public until this week.

To win release, the Soviets had to pay an immediate $75,000. Holland agreed to suspend $65,000 if the Soviets paid $185,000 of the remaining $250,000 in 60 days.

In addition to the total $325,000 settlement, Holland ordered the Soviets to pay $13,560 to the Coast Guard to reimburse costs for seizing the vessel and another $11,000 to the U.S. marshal for the costs of detaining the ship and crew.

Civil charges in U.S. District Court of illegal fishing and a government request seeking forfeiture of the Soviet ship and its catch were dropped by the U.S. attorney as part of the settlement.

The Coast Guard cutter Yocona reported finding the Soviets fishing Apr. 25 inside the U.S. exclusive economic zone west of Alaska. The Ilya Ilyin fled, leading the Yocona into international waters. Following a 90-minutre high-speed chase, the Soviets allowed a Coast Guard boarding party to inspect the vessel. Fish were found and the $15 million ship was seized the next day.

Anchorage lawyer Michael White, who represented the Soviet fishing company from Korsakov on Sakhalin Island, said, ''This was not a case of intentional poaching. This was inadvertent. They in good faith believed they were fishing legally.''

White said defense experts would have disputed the Coast Guard claim that the Ilya Ilyin was 6,000 feet inside U.S. waters and he said, ''The Soviets believe they were on the right side of the line.''

The Soviets were fishing in plain sight of the Coast Guard, White said. ''If they were poaching, they wouldn't have done it in front of the cops.''

He said the Soviets fled because, believing they were in international waters, they figured the Coast Guard had no right to board. During the chase, the Ilya Ilyin received Soviet authority to permit a Coast Guard boarding.

This was the second Soviet fishing violation settlement this year. In March, a Soviet fishing company paid $275,000 for alleged violations in May 1989 by the Novoelyna, seized 4 miles inside the U.S. zone west of Alaska.

In a separate fishing violation case, U.S. Magistrate John Roberts set bond Tuesday at $1.75 million for the 170-foot Japanse fishing vessel Koei Maru No. 20, seized earlier this month in U.S. waters. It was one of the largest bonds ever ordered in a fishing violation case, according to the U.S. attorney's office.

Bond was set at $1.12 million for the ship and $631,579 for the 352 tons of processed fish found on board and allegedly caught in U.S. waters.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tim Burgess last week filed a 19-count complaint against the Japanese vessel, alleging that it fished illegally in the U.S. zone a number of times last month, this month and in May 1989.

Fleets fish unregulated in the so-called doughnut hole, international waters in the Bering Sea surrounded by the U.S. and Soviet 200-mile zones. American fishermen and federal fisheries officials have alleged that these fleets work on the eastern edge of the doughnut hole and often slip over onto the American side of the line where the Soviet and Japanese ships were seized.

#90143u1804 05/23/1990 ~United Press International

CHICAGO (MAY 23) UPI - Jurors in the racketeering and fraud trial of three Chicago Mercantile Exchange traders listened to tape recordings of what prosecutors contend were illegal deals in which broker Robert Mosky skimmed money from customers' accounts.

Mosky, Danny Scheck and David Zatz are the first traders to face trial on charges resulting from a two-year FBI undercover investigation at the CME and the Chicago Board of Trade.

FBI agent Randall Jannett, who spent nearly a year posing as a trader in the Swiss franc pit, testified he observed Mosky and Mark Fuhrman engaging in a non-competitive trade on March 8, 1988, and secretly recorded the transaction. Fuhrman has pleaded guilty in the case and will appear as a government witness later in the trial.

The tape, like others introduced earlier, was of poor quality, with voices barely discernable amid the uproar of trading. But the government transcript - admitted exclusively as a listening aid for jurors - indicates the tape shows Mosky buying five June Swiss franc contracts from Fuhrman at a price of 7320 to fill customer orders.

Mosky then told Fuhrman, according to the transcript, "I'll sell you five back." The sale was made at a price of 7321, with Mosky making the purchase for his personal account. But Jannett testified that the market was trading at 7308 to 7310 at the time the transactions were made.

Clearinghouse records introduced into evidence showed Mosky offset the contracts he bought back from Fuhrman by purchasing four contracts at 7311 and one at 7312. The net result, Jannett testified, was a profit of $612.50 for Mosky and a loss of $687.50 for Mosky's customers.

In another tape played Wednesday, the government contended Mosky gave Scheck sweetheart deals at the expense of customers. In the tape, according to the government transcript, Mosky is selling Scheck six contracts on behalf of customers at a price of 7250. But Jannett testified that the market was trading at 7270 to 7280 at the time of the deals.

The defense, however, offered alternative - and more detailed - transcripts of that tape, emphasizing bids being made in the background. The defense transcript indicates the market was trading as low as 7248 at the time of the transactions.

The defense has contended Jannett was inadequately trained in commodities trading before being sent into the pits and could not properly distinguish trading prices.

During Wednesday's testimony, Jannett inadvertently drew laughter from the courtroom audience and several jurors when he gave the wrong time bracket letter for a trade being discussed even though a chart showing a breakdown of time brackets was on display in the courtroom. Jannett also gave the wrong price of the transaction he was discussing although it too was listed on a chart displayed for the jury.

The government contends Mosky was the kingpin in a group of brokers who pressured so-called local traders - those who trade almost exclusively for their personal accounts - to absorb losses resulting from trading mistakes for which brokers are personally liable to customers. In exchange for their cooperation, the government alleges, Mosky and other brokers in the group gave the cooperating locals sweetheart deals.

Mosky, 33, Chicago, is charged with racketeering conspiracy, fraud, and violation of federal commodities trading rules. If convicted, he could be sentenced to up to 415 years in prison.

Scheck, 28, of Skokie, Ill., and Zatz, 43, of Chicago, are charged with fraud and violations of commodities law. If convicted, Scheck would face up to 90 years in prison and Zatz, up to 70 years.

#90143u1810 05/23/1990 ~United Press International
WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker, confidently defending his recent arms talks in Moscow against conservative critics, laid out twin goals Wednesday of completing superpower accords on nuclear weapons and conventional forces by the end of the year.

At a White House news conference, Baker also ruled out the granting of most-favored-nation trade benefits to the Soviet Union during next week's Washington summit between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Baker delivered a measured summation of Bush's goals and hopes for the May 30-June 3 summit, the second for the two leaders, who met last December at Malta.

Baker, who was in Moscow last week for discussions with Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, took the offensive on his handling of the negotiations on reducing strategic nuclear missiles, which conservative critics say involved too many concessions to the Kremlin.

The U.S. and Soviet sides agreed to limit cruise missiles and pinned down most of the basic language in a 500-page draft treaty, but left some issues unresolved.

''It would appear to me, at least, that most of the criticism is coming from those who in the past from time to time have simply rejected the concept of arms control generally,'' Baker told a questioner.

''I don't think you should look just at one negotiating session,'' he said noting that ''there is very strong support for this agreement among the military leadership of the United States ... as a good agreement that is very much in the national security interest of the United States.''

A strategic arms reduction treaty, or START, has been an elusive goal for U.S.-Soviet summits since 1987, when President Reagan and Gorbahcev embraced the idea of a 50 percent reduction in nuclear arms as a step toward total elimination. Despite the dramatic warming of relations since then, technical details and long held suspicious have blocked agreement on an accord.

At the coming Washington meeting, Bush and Gorbachev are expected to resolve some pending details and approve a broad outline for nuts-and-bolts negotiators to complete.

Baker made it plain he is pleased with how the talks are going.

Far from giving too much to the Soviets, he said, ''The reality is that this treaty is shaping up largely on original United States concepts and original United States proposals in terms of what we've given and what we've taken.''

''We've done very well indeed,'' he said.

As for extending new trade benefits to Moscow, Baker repeated that most-favor-nation status will not be extended until the Soviets complete and implement a liberalized immigration law.

However, it was announced Wednesday the Supreme Soviet will not act on the issue until after the summit, ruling out action on the trade front for now.

Baker told reporters that Bush, during his Oval Office meetings with Gorbachev, will ''raise our concerns over developments in Europe,'' where the ''military situation is lagging behind'' the changes in the political landscape.

''In our view, it is important that an agreement on conventional military forces be signed this year, locking in military changes consistent with the political realities and in effect changing the map of Europe,'' he said.

Bush and other NATO leaders have called for a dramatic reduction in Western and Warsaw Pact troop levels in Central Europe to reflect the lessening of tensions, but negotiations on manpower and armament limits have been slow to produce results.

Regarding nuclear arms, Baker said, ''The president will work toward finalizing a START treaty this year which would reduce the superpower arsenals, not just cap the levels of weapons.''

During the summit, Bush and Baker will sign a chemical weapons agreement and protocols on nuclear testing.

Other issues to be discussed by the leaders include German reunification; regional conflicts, particularly Afghanistan, and concerns over rising anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union.

Baker also said Bush ''undoubtedly will spend a great deal of time'' discussing the fate of the breakaway Baltic states - Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia - and emphasizing that ''their right to self-determination cannot be denied and Soviet efforts at intimidation can only raise doubts about the indivisbility of perestroika, glasnost and democratic reforms.''

#90143u1826 05/23/1990 ~United Press International

MOSCOW (MAY 23) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev angrily accused radical Communist Boris Yeltsin Wednesday of abandoning socialism and trying to break up the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev, his voice rising with emotion in a 45-minute speech to the Russian republic's new Congress of People's Deputies, called his radical critics ''political rogues'' and accused them of ''unscrupulous and dirty methods.''

Gorbachev said that while he favors strengthening the sovereignty of the Russian republic, Yeltsin was using the guise of greater independence for Russia to promote the breakup of the Soviet Union.

''If (Yeltsin's speech) is subjected to very serious analysis, you see he is proposing under the banner of restoring the sovereignty of Russia a call for the dissolution of the union,'' Gorbachev said.

The speech was punctuated by loud applause and cries from among the nearly a thousand deputies on the congress floor, causing Gorbachev at one point to ask the lawmakers not to shout.

''You may be boisterous,'' Gorbachev said, ''but I have dealt with more boisterous people.''

Gorbachev, at times pounding the podium for emphasis, said he was especially concerned because Russia was the core of the Soviet Union's 15 republics.

''How could we go on without Russia if it goes in another direction?'' he asked.

''If some other republic exercises its right to secede from the union, it would infringe upon the interests of other republics, but we would survive '' Gorbachev said. ''But the U.S.S.R. is unthinkable without Russia.''

Yeltsin, a former Moscow Communist Party boss who is now a leader of the radical Democratic Russia bloc in the congress, proposed Tuesday wide-ranging freedoms for the Soviet Union's largest republic including the right to charge world prices for the raw materials it sends other republics.

The Russian legislature is to choose later this week a candidate who will chair it and the Supreme Soviet, a standing Parliament elected from congress deputies.

Yeltsin is a main contender for the effective presidency of the Russian republic, which would give him a powerful base from which to challenge Gorbachev.

The Soviet president charged that Yeltsin's Tuesday speech ''contains an attempt to separate Russia from socialism'' and criticized him for proposing that Russia drop the words ''soviet'' and ''socialist'' from its official title.

Yeltsin refused to answer reporters' questions on the accusations, but told deputies after Wednesday's session that Gorbachev ''went into questions that I didn't even talk about in my speech.''

Radical deputies felt that Gorbachev had made a tactical error in personalizing the conflict with Yeltsin.

Gorbachev ''helped us by showing that he is seriously afraid of Yeltsin as a serious representative of serious democratic forces,'' said Sergei Nosovets, a Democratic Russia organizer from Omsk.

Yeltsin, who was formerly a candidate member of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo, fell out of favor and lost his top posts in the fall of 1987 for criticizing the pace of Gorbachev's reforms as being too slow.

But ground-breaking multicandidate polls last year paved the road for Yeltsin's political comeback when more than 6 million Muscovites voted for the renegade Communist and elected him to the U.S.S.R. Congress of People's Deputies.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Scientists have discovered a second protein that appears lacking in muscular dystrophy patients, an important development in the hunt for a treatment for the crippling disease, it was reported Wednesday.

The muscle cells of Duchenne muscular dystrophy patients are missing about 90 percent of a newly identified protein, which is called dystrophin-associated glycoprotein 156 or DAG 156, said researchers at the University of Iowa medical school in Iowa City.

The protein appears to be part of a ''complex'' of proteins that may be involved in maintaining the structure of the membrane of muscle cells, the researchers said.

The finding provides new understanding of the underlying cause of muscular dystrophy and could lead to new forms of treatment, such as drugs that replace the missing protein or correct the flaw, experts said.

In addition, testing for the absence or presence of the protein could provide a better way to evaluate potential therapies, such as an experimental approach in which healthy muscle cells are injected into patients, researchers said.

About 250,000 Americans suffer from muscular dystrophy, a group of inherited diseases in which skeletal muscles waste away, causing a slow loss of strength with increasing disablity and deformity and eventually death.

''In terms of the molecular mechanism of muscular dystrophy (the findings are) very important,'' said Kevin Campbell, a physiology professor who led the work.

''We're excited. We think this complex has some unique function and we hope to identify that function,'' said Campbell, whose research appears in the British journal Nature.

In 1986, researchers found the gene that causes Duchenne muscular dystrophy, the most common childhood type of muscular dystrophy that affects about one in every 3,300 boys born in the United States each year.

About a year later researchers determined the gene produced a protein called dystrophin, which Duchenne muscular dystrophy patients' muscle cells lack.

Campbell and his colleagues compared muscle cells of Duchenne muscular dystrophy patients to normal cells in the hopes of understanding more about what dystrophin does. They determined dystrophin interacts with the complex of glycoproteins.

''This is the first report that there is this large complex of proteins dystrophin is associated with,'' said Campbell.

When they tested the cells, they also found one of the proteins in the complex - DAG 156 - was lacking.

Scientists are unsure whether the lack of dystrophin is causing the lack of DAG 156. There may also be other proteins in the complex that are difficient, he said.

''One implication is ... you might be able to develop drugs or some type of therapy based on the gycoprotein,'' he said. ''We may be able to develop ways to block the muscle cell death.''

But the finding could also mean developing treatments could be more difficult since cells may require more than one protein, he said.

Nonetheless, Dr. Lawrence Stern of the Muscular Dystrophy Association called the findings ''exciting stuff.''

''One avenue of investigation that is critical is to find out what dystrophin does and how it's absence could result in the disease process '' he said.

''This is an important piece of information suggesting that the absence of dystrophin alone may not be only thing causing the disease, but rather the lack of dystrophin results in the diminution of a glycoprotein,'' he said.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 23) UPI - Chippendales has agreed to pay an undisclosed settlement in a sex discrimination lawsuit filed in 1988 by two men barred from viewing a male strip show at the nightclub, one of the plaintiffs announced Wednesday.

Andrew Exler, 29, a paralegal from Palm Springs, said the nightclub wrote a letter to him and the other plaintiff, Dennis Koire, apologizing ''for any inconvenience and distress caused to you by Chippendales on the evening you were denied entrance.''

Exler, Koire and Koire's girlfriend, Julie Palasco, sued Chippendales June 30, 1988, seeking unspecified general damages, attorney fees and a permanent injunction to stop Chippendales from preventing men from attending the all-male strip shows.

The three said that when they tried to attend a show together on May 20, 1987, they were told no men were allowed.

On Feb. 8, 1987, they tried to enter the nightclub after the shows ended at 10 p.m. and were told the men would have to pay $5 each, while Palasco could enter for free.

Chippendales owner Steve Banerjee declined comment on the out-of-court settlement, except to confirm it and the written apology. He said the club has never barred men from the all-male shows.

''We never not let men in,'' he said. ''I don't know what happened that night. They are more than welcome. We like to take their money.''

Banerjee said men usually don't come to the shows because they feel uncomfortable.

Exler said the amount of damages he collected in the settlement ''was a very insignificant amount - a token.''

''That's not what we were really after,'' Exler said. ''The main point is that they won't discriminate. You can't buy your civil rights.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Farm-state senators, after a weeklong quarrel over a Democratic plan to raise crop subsidy rates, agreed Wednesday to start over in trying to revise federal crop support programs.

The House Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, voted to impose the first-ever ceiling on payments under the wool and mohair program and plowed ahead with a proposal to give farmers more freedom to decide which crops to grow.

One of the few complaints about the current farm law, which expires this year, is that rigid rules lock farmers into planting the same crop year after year to maintain eligibility for subsidies, rather than allowing them to experiment with money-making crops.

Leaders of the House committee have proposed allowing farmers to plant a broad variety of crops, ranging from corn to canola, triticale and jojoba, on 25 percent of their land now devoted to the seven crops eligible for support payments plus oilseeds such as soybeans and sunflowers.

A key issue before the committee was whether farmers would take advantage of the so-called planting flexibility. The Bush administration said it was unlikely to inspire farmers to plant more soybeans. Soybean acreage has declined by 10 million acres in the past decade.

House Agriculture Chairman Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, wants to complete work on the new five-year farm bill this week.

Senate Agriculture Chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., acknowledged his committee was unlikely to complete its version this week.

After a lengthy caucus, the Senate committee agreed to name a six-member bipartisan group to seek an agreement on crop supports. Republicans strongly objected to a plan drafted by the Democratic majority one week ago to raise crop target prices and create an expensive oilseed marketing loan.

''The problem is, we don't have any money. We're trying to fool the farmers saying we're going to give you a raise in target prices,'' said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan. ''I've been on the committee a long time. You don't have partisan bills that pass.''

Democrats have argued government action is needed to prop up farm income.

Named to the task force were Leahy, Dole, David Pryor, D-Ark., Bob Kerry, D-Neb., Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and Thad Cochran, R-Miss.

During a brief morning session, the House Agriculture Committee voted to limit payments under the wool and mohair program to a maximum of $250,000. They also approved a five-year freeze in the honey support price of 53.8 cents a pound.

BOISE, ID (MAY 23) UPI - Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, and Democratic businessman Ron Twilegar won their U.S. Senate primaries and will meet in November to decide who will succeed retiring Republican Jim McClure, returns showed Wednesday.

In the three-way GOP gubernatorial race Tuesday for the right to challenge three-term incumbent Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, former state Sen. Roger Fairchild, 37, of Fruitland defeated state Sen. Rachel Gilbert, 59, of Boise.

Boise stockbroker Larry LaRocco, 43, won the 1st Congressional District Democratic race to bid for Craig's seat, while former Army Capt. Sean McDevitt, 27, Pocatello, won the 2nd Congressional District GOP primary.

Abortion is expected to figure significantly among other issues this fall in the Senate race, the race for an open seat in the House of Representatives and the gubernatorial race.

With 100 percent of the precincts reporting, Craig, 44, a member of the House for 10 years, captured 59 percent of the vote against state Attorney General Jim Jones, 48, unofficial results showed.

Craig will be the odds-on favorite in November as no Idaho Democrat has been elected to the Senate since the late liberal Frank Church in 1974. Craig is staunchly against abortion, while Twilegar, 46, of Boise, favors a woman's right to an abortion.

Twilegar, the former state Senate minority leader, captured 64 percent of the vote, easily outdistancing Idaho Falls businessman David Steed, 41.

In the GOP gubernatorial primary, Fairchild captured 37 percent of the vote with 100 percent of precincts reporting. Gilbert had 33 percent and Boise stockbroker Milton Erhart, 49, had 30 percent.

Andrus, 58, was unopposed in the Democratic race and, while he is a heavy favorite for an unprecedented fourth term, he is potentially vulnerable.

In March, despite his opposition to abortion, Andrus vetoed a bill that would have given Idaho the most restrictive state abortion law in the nation, saying it was too strict.

His action was hailed by supporters of legal abortion and angered anti-abortion activists who said he betrayed them, setting the stage for a possible fall showdown between the two factions.

LaRocco, who favors a woman's right to abortion, captured 43 percent of the vote. Former state Rep. Jeanne Givens of Coeur d'Alene was second with 33 percent, while former state Agriculture Director Dick Rush had 23 percent.

Larocco faces state Sen. Skip Smyer, R-Parma, who was unopposed in the GOP primary. Smyser voted for the restrictive abortion bill this year.

Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, 49, heavily favored to win a fourth term from the 2nd Congressional District, was unopposed in the primary.

McDevitt captured 41 percent of the vote to defeat state Sen. Ann Rydalch of Idaho Falls, who captured 36 percent of the vote in a four-way race. Stallings and McDevitt both are against abortion.

In the two other contested statewide races, Richard Williams of Shelley defeated two GOP challengers and will face Democratic incumbent State Auditor J.D. Williams; while Lt. Gov. Butch Otter won re-election by defeating former state Rep. Robert Forrey of Nampa.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (MAY 23) UPI - Interim President Ion Iliescu declared Wednesday there was ''no danger of sliding back to communism'' after his party's landslide victory in Romania's first free elections in half a century.

Beaming and appearing relaxed at their first news conference since Sunday's election, Iliescu and Prime Minster Petre Roman laughed off opposition charges that the National Salvation Front's lopsided win was a defeat for democracy.

''The break with communism is not just a personal thing, it's a great historical movement,'' Iliescu said. ''A return to communism simply is not possible. Who would bring it about?''

''There's no danger of sliding back to communism,'' he declared.

Iliescu also dismissed claims by some Western observers that the election campaign was flawed and rejected allegations that the Front intimidated opposition parties and manipulated the news media.

He said there was no need for an independent investigation into alleged campaign abuses, as demanded by one monitoring group, the Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights.

''The press is not under control of the government or anybody,'' Iliescu said. ''Mr. (Ion) Ratiu was in fact on televsion more than me in the run-up to the elections.''

Ratiu was the presidential candidate for the opposition National Liberal Party, which alleged it was not given equal access to state-run television.

Iliescu said the reason the opposition fared so poorly in the polls was because ''they resorted to violence, which was a mistake, while we entered the race in the spirit of fair play.''

''Where are the 8 million people who were supposed to have signed the (anti-Front) Proclamation of Timisoara?'' he asked.

With more than 90 percent of the ballots counted, Iliescu garnered 12,057,591 votes, or 85 percent, compared to 1,496,082 votes, or 10.6 percent, for his closest rival, Radu Campeanu of the National Liberal Party. Ratiu received 587,970 votes, or 4.2 percent.

The National Salvation Front also scored a decisive victory in the parliamentary elections, capturing 66.5 percent of the vote, partial returns showed.

Iliescu was a secretary of the communist party Central Committee before being kicked out of the leadership in 1984 by dictator Nicolae Ceausescu. Throughout the election campaign, opposition parties made an issue of the large number of former communist officials in the Front's upper echelons.

Despite their crushing defeat in the polls, anti-Front activists continued their monthlong occupation of Bucharest's University Square, demanding the removal of Iliescu and all other former communists from power.

''We hope for a second revolution now, because there's no other choice,'' said one demonstrator. ''We've lost our positions in society now.''

Two of 65 people staging a hunger strike at the square have been taken to a hospital after fainting from weakness.

The hunger strikers, some of whom have been without food for 19 days, said they would set themselves on fire if security forces try to remove them from the square.

Iliescu, however, said there were no plans to remove the demonstrators, whose numbers have dwindled substantially since the elections.

''There will be no violence, we hope,'' he said.

(MAY 23) UPI - A Christian Broadcast Network engineer pleaded innocent today to charges of using network equipment to send a religious broadcast over the Playboy channel. Thomas Haynie was named in a six-count federal indictment handed down in Norfolk, Virginia. He is accused of satellite piracy. Officials charge that Haynie substituted unauthorized messages over the Playboy Channel and another cable operation in 1987. A printed message reading, ''Repent, the kingdom of God is at hand!'' pre-empted a soft-porn movie on the Playboy Channel.

ORLANDO, FL (MAY 23) UPI - Motorists can expect to pay an average of $1.13 a gallon for gasoline this Memorial Day weekend, up 1.3 cents from the pump price at Easter, the American Automobile Association said Wednesday.

Average gas prices at self-serve pumps are forecast at $1.05 a gallon for unleaded, $1.06 for regular and $1.22 for premium unleaded, according to AAA.

Full-service unleaded averaged $1.29 a gallon, compared with averages of $1.21 for regular and $1.42 for premium unleaded.

The average national price of gasoline, including self- and full-serve and all grades of gasoline, will be at $1.13 a gallon, up from $1.11 in mid-April, AAA said.

An estimated 25 million Americans were expected to make highway trips of more than 100 miles on the Memorial Day weekend, up 3 percent from last year.

In its summer travel projections, also released Wednesday, AAA estimated 270 million Americans would take vacations by car this summer, 2 percent more than last summer.

A survey of AAA clubs indicated Orlando would be the summer's top vacation destination, followed by San Diego, Anaheim, Calif., and San Francisco.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - The computer memo appeared at the advertising firm of Chiat-Day-Mojo as mysteriously as Laura Palmer's body washed up on the lake shore in the first episode of ''Twin Peaks.''

''This is the voice of the silent drapery runner calling all lonely log readers together on the final night,'' began the message, which provided clues from Agent Dale Cooper on the whereabouts of Wednesday's season finale party.

The ABC series ''Twin Peaks,'' the brainchild of cult director David Lynch has become an obsession for fans, many of whom have not followed a television series in years, and its last episode has led many to go to extremes.

''The building number is five short of the total number of days in the year,'' the message continued. ''The street number and apartment number all contain the same digit. Put them together, add 111 and you get the sign of the devil.''

The culprit behind the message, Keen Wilkins, a media research supervisor at Chiat-Day-Mojo, said the party, which will be held in his apartment in the Hell's Kitchen neighborhood in Manhattan, is strictly for aficionados.

''Before you gain entry, you will be quizzed on every character and plot in the show,'' Wilkins warned. ''Don't show up without cherry pie, doughnuts or black coffee.''

Wilkins is not alone in his enthusiasm for ''Twin Peaks'' and parties ranging from the informal to the formal are being planned in Philadelphia, Washington and other cities by people thrilled by the moody series and meandering plot line.

ABC has picked up ''Twin Peaks'' for next season but that did not diminish the suspense about the Wednesday season finale for those die-hards who wonder about the significance of the blinking traffic light, the llama, the fate of Chet, the nerdy character on ''Invitation to Love,'' and why Audrey likes maraschino cherries.

The Philadelphia Inquirer features department planned a party for about 200 people dressed as ''Twin Peaks'' characters walking around with fish, Washington state apples, eye patches, ''damn good'' coffee, logs, and slicked back hair, said Maureen Carmen, an administrative editorial assistant.

Guests will write their names on the back of poker chips from the brothel-over-the-boarder, One-Eyed Jacks, and will be eligible for door prizes including little Elvises and broken hearts. ''We're really crazed here,'' Carmen said.

''I had Kona Coffee shipped in from Hawaii just for this occasion, I'm going to clean my coffee machine for the first time,'' said Aaron Sugarman a senior writer at Conde Nast Traveler magazine in New York. ''I was thinking I would have to get pie or doughnuts.''

''We would be partying because we have been watching, but our cable was cut off, which is really unfortunate because we have been missing all the last episodes of all the series,'' said University of Delaware senior John Kubaska, who graduates this weekend from the Newark, Del., school.

The first six episodes of ''Twin Peaks'' have been shown on Thursday nights, and the switch to Wednesday, despite extensive publicity by ABC, has left some viewers confused.

Some people were even blase.

''People are coming over for a barbecue but we weren't planning on watching 'Twin Peaks,''' said Fred Azcarate, program associate for the group Citizens Action in Washington. ''It's tonight? I guess we'll turn it on.''

PORTLAND, ME (MAY 23) UPI - A judge was asked Wednesday to block Colby College's sanctions against members of an underground campus fraternity and order the college to let senior members attend their graduation.

Lawyers for the Maine Civil Liberties Union asked Superior Court Judge Donald Alexander to prevent Colby from punishing the seniors and other students found to belong to the illegal Lambda Chi organization. The judge reserved decision Wednesday.

All fraternities have been banned at Colby since 1984. Colby announced earlier this month that it was disciplining students who had been found to belong to the underground fraternity. The school said seniors would be prevented from attending their graduation ceremonies on Sunday.

Some underclassmen have been suspended for next fall's semester and others were ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

The MCLU said it was bringing the suit on behalf of the students under Maine's new Civil Rights Act, which gives private citizens the right to sue anyone who interferes with their right to exercise any constitutional guarantee.

Sally Sutton, executive director of ths MCLU, said the group took the case and asked for a temporary restraining order after being contacted by a number of the student's families.

''The reason for going for the restraining order is that some of the plaintiffs will not be allowed to participate in their graduation ceremonies,'' Sutton said. ''We feel this violated their right of association, and we question whether Colby can extend this authority to off-campus activities.''

Ed Hershey, a Colby spokesman, said the issue is whether Colby has the right to ban fraternities from the campus.

''(It is) not whether students should be sanctioned, but whether Colby has the right to enforce a ban against fraternities,'' he said.

Colby, as have a number of other New England colleges, banned fraternities on the grounds that the exclusionary nature of Greek letter organizations runscounter to the goals of a liberal arts school.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - While declaring successful completion of the Uruguay Round of global trade talks is his ''top trade priority,'' President Bush warned Wednesday that ''no agreement is better than a bad agreement.''

Speaking at a Rose Garden ceremony to mark World Trade Week, Bush sent a blunt message to U.S. trading partners around the world: ''We must conclude that Uruguay Round of global trade talks by December.''

''Time is short. Our task is great,'' Bush said. ''I call on our trading partners to move these negotiations forward'' - first at the meeting of the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development later this month and at the Economic Summit of the seven major industrialized democracies in Houston scheduled for July.

Bush said the current round of talks on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade ''is an ambitious undertaking, the last best chance for the world to enter the next century with free and fair trade for all.

''So let me blunt: To the United States, no agreement is better than a bad agreement.''

Bush said reaching agreement in the GATT talks, attended by delegates from more than 100 nations, would be his ''top trade priority for this year,'' and that a reduction of subsidies and trade barriers is imperative.

''There simply cannot be a successful conclusion to the Uruguay Round without fundamental agricultural reform,'' he said.

The current GATT negotiations, which began in Uruguay in 1986 to strengthen the international trading system and regulate the roughly one-third of world trade that is now not covered, are scheduled to conclude by the end of the year.

Agricultural reform has provided the biggest hurdle to the talks, with the United States originally demanding that all trade-distorting subsidies be eliminated by the end of the century.

European countries, in particular, heavily subsidize millions of farmers who dump their surpluses on the world market while restricting the flow of U.S. farm goods to European markets.

In addition to reform of agricultural trade, ''a market inadequately covered by GATT rules and badly distorted by subsidies and trade barriers '' Bush also renewed the administration's call for new ways to quickly resolve trade disputes; for new rules to be applied to developing countries, and for rules to be adopted for new areas not currently covered by the 1974 GATT.

Bush also directed his Economic Policy Council to undertake a ''Commercial Opportunities Initiative'' to encourage American business to move into foreign markets.

He said the initiative would promote U.S. business in ''new or neglected markets'' through official presidential trade missions headed by Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - A panel of former U.S. intelligence officials recommended 13 legislative ''remedies'' to Congress Wednesday to halt a 20-year trend where Americans have sold secrets to foreign powers for money and ''caused grievous damage.''

The seven-member panel, led by Eli Jacobs, a former Army counterintelligence officer and a member of the Defense Policy Board that advises the secretary of defense, suggested specific legislation to deter, detect or penalize American spys.

The panel, formed six months ago at the request of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, studied 19 major U.S. espionage cases since 1970 and found that - unlike those in the 1950s - the more recent spies volunteered their services to a foreign power for money, not because of idealogy.

''The days of Philby, Burgess, MacLean, Blount and the Rosenbergs are over. Now our nation's secrets are sold at the espionage bazaar to the most generous buyer,'' Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, vice chairman of the committee, said in summing up one of the conclusions of the panel.

Jacobs, outlining the panel's findings to the Senate committee, said the six months of study of 19 post-1970 espionage cases found the ''intelligence activities against the U.S. caused grievous damage during this period.''

Of the panel's 13 proposals, four are intended to improve the U.S. personnel security system, five would provide additional penalties for espionage, and four are intended to enhance U.S. counterintelligence.

The first, and perhaps most important, proposal would establish uniform minimum requirements for everyone granted a top-secret security clearance in the government. There is no law that currently establishes such requirements.

In addition to undergoing a thorough background investigation, such officials receiving a top-secret clearance under this proposal would have to consent to allow the government to access their financial and travel records.

Another proposal would require all government employees engaged in cryptography or coding machines to agree to undergo a possible polygraph examination during the course of their employment.

Another would give the director of the National Security Agency discretionary authority to provide assistance to former employees for up to five years after they leave the NSA to help them cope with problems - authority already exercised by the CIA.

''In two of the (previous espionage) cases that were particularly damaging ... the individuals had left government service,'' said former NSA Director Bobby Inman, a member of the Jacobs panel. One of them ''was very disgruntled ... (the other) got into deep financial difficulty.''

Other proposals would make it a crime to possess espionage devices with intent to pass them on, would allow the government to prosecute cases without having to reveal the top-secret information in question, and would deny profits or retirement pay to those who are convicted.

Members of the Senate committee praised the panel's recommendations.

''It is our responsibility to seek and strike the appropriate balance of guarding the right of privacy against those who would betray our nation. I believe the balance has been struck'' with the panel's findings, Cohen said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - In a showdown with President Bush, the House added to the clean air bill Wednesday a $250 million, five-year program to provide extended unemployment aid to workers who lose their jobs because of increased pollution controls.

The worker aid proposal was approved on a 274-146 vote despite warnings from administration officials that the program was too expensive and ill-defined and could prompt the president to veto the clean air package, one of his top legislative priorities.

Opponents of the plan said virtually any worker losing his job could qualify for assistance, resulting in a runaway program that could balloon to $3.9 billion at a time of crushing budget deficits.

Advocates rejected those cost estimates as overblown and said the government had a responsibility to help coal miners, chemical and steel workers and others working in industries likely to be hard-hit by the proposed new emission controls.

''Where is a kinder and gentler nation now?'' Rep. Douglas Walgren, D-Pa., asked, citing one of Bush's campaign slogans.

The worker-aid amendment represented one of the few hotly contested issues to be resolved in the House floor debate over the bill, meaning a final vote could come as early as Wednesday night.

Because of extensive backroom negotiations over the past few months, there are relatively few remaining disputes over the major thrusts of the bill, which would reduce acid rain pollution from coal-burning power plants, toxic discharges from factories and smog-causing emissions from cars and industry.

House passage would set the stage for negotiations this summer with the Senate, which passed its clean air bill last month. Legislative leaders hope to send Bush a clean air bill before the fall, ending 13 years of congressional gridlock on the issue.

Bush has repeatedly urged Congress to hold down the cost of the bill and administration officials said the worker-aid plan would fatten an already expensive measure.

In a private meeting with House Republicans Wednesday morning, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu said the president strongly opposed the worker-aid amendment as too loosely drawn and carrying ''massive budget implications.''

In a latter to lawmakers, the White House said it would be impossible to determine whether workers lost their jobs because of the clean air bill or other unrelated factors. The administration also said the proposal would set a bad precedent, encouraging lawmakers to attach similar aid programs to future bills.

''It would open a multibillion-dollar deficit-increasing door that may never be closed,'' said Sununu and EPA Administrator William Reilly in a letter to House members.

However, Rep. Robert Wise, D-W.Va., prime sponsor of the proposal, insisted his program would be limited to $250 million, which he said was one-quarter of 1 percent of the bill's overall $21 billion price tag.

Wise said the plan would provide only six additional months of unemployment payments to workers that the Labor Department found were displaced because of clean air requirements.

But Rep. Norman Lent of New York, chief Republican sponsor of the clean air bill and point man for the administration, questioned assertions that the worker-aid program could be capped at $250 million.

He said the plan was loosely drawn so that tens of thousands of workers could qualify for aid, adding billions of dollars to the government's already bloated budget.

''At a time when our congressional leadership is striving to resolve a severe deficit problem, passage of (this) amendment is an unnecessary shot in the congressional foot,'' Lent said. ''Why do we do these things to ourselves?''

In acting on its clean air bill last month, the Senate rejected a similar - but more expensive - worker aid plan by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., following administration veto threats.

However, Byrd and several other senators have told House leaders that, if Wise's amendment is passed, they will work to ensure it is retained when House and Senate leaders meet this summer to iron out differences between the two chambers and arrive at a final clean air bill to be sent to the president.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Warning that a ''major national catastrophy'' is looming because federal agencies have failed to provide security for vital computer systems, two congressmen said Wednesday they will seek sanctions against negligent agencies, including a possible cap on computer capability.

Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Transportation, Aviation and Materials, joined with Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., author of a computer security measure enacted in 1987, in denouncing federal agencies for negligence in protecting computer systems from tampering or infiltration.

Their comments follow the release of a General Accounting Office report that said little progress has been made in implementing government computer security measures, including authorization and access control and proper training, and that officials lack commitment to do so.

Torricelli said his subcommittee will begin developing possible sanctions against agencies that continue to resist implementing security measures required by law. He said one possible sanction would be to freeze the growth of an agency's computer capability by preventing new systems or authorized users.

The report found that agencies implemented just 38 percent of the planned 145 security controls and the Computer Security Act did little to improve security for 22 critical information systems in 10 agencies, including the Internal Revenue Service, Social Security Administration and Federal Aviation Adminstration.

''Our economy, our air traffic control system, the Internal Revenue Service, federal research facilities and Social Security programs depend upon computer systems that are at severe risk because federal agencies have failed to place simple security controls in place,'' Torricelli said at a news conference.

''If these agencies cannot bring themselves to safeguard information that affects the lives of millions of people across the country, they should have to face consequences,'' Torricelli added.

''We have a problem here that could become a major national catastrophe unless our government gives the issue a high enough priority,'' Glickman said. ''By not complying with the law, they are demonstrating unabashed arrogance and insensitivity to critical computer and network security issues.''

JERUSALEM (MAY 23) UPI - Israel waged a campaign Wednesday to deflect international criticism over its handling of violent protests sparked by the slaying of seven Arab workers, but was dealt a blow when the United States indicated it may support the establishment of a U.N. force in the occupied territories.

The territories were calmer Wednesday than in previous days, but observers said the international ramifications of the crisis appeared to be escalating.

In Washington, Secretary of State James Baker said the United States for the first time was willing to discuss the possibility of sending an international observer force in the territories, the site of violent protests since the seven Arab workers were killed Sunday by a deranged Israeli with an M-16 assault rifle.

Hospital and Palestinian sources say 12 Palestinians have been killed and hundreds injured in protests over the brutal massacre, marking the bloodiest week in the 29-month-old Palestinian uprising, known as the intifada.

Israeli officials vehemently denounced the killings, but observers said the incident appears to have re-ignited the stagnating intifada and fueled frustration over Israel's refusal to allow the inclusion of the Palestine Liberation Organization in a stalled Mideast peace plan.

Foreign Minister Moshe Arens said Wednesday it was wrong to link the attack to Israeli policies or the stalled Mideast peace process, and warned the criticism could give Israel's enemies a reason to attack the Jewish state.

Israeli forces maintained curfews in much of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip Wednesday and security in Jerusalem was tripled as thousands of flag-waving Israelis celebrated ''Jerusalem Day.'' The festivities mark the 1967 capture by Israel of the Old City and Arab East Jerusalem from Jordan.

In the Israeli-occupied West Bank, 10 British children were slightly injured by broken glass when assailants threw a barage of stones at a tour bus near the village of Beit Sir, Army Radio reported.

Palestinian sources said at least 10 Palestinians were wounded during clashes with Israeli soldiers, but the violence was considerably less than in previous days.

In neighboring Jordan, officials also reported relative calm except for "a few small demonstrations'' in some Palestinian refugee camps after two days of violent clashes that left at least two people dead and dozens injured.

Baker's said in Washington that the United States would be ''prepared to discuss the question of a U.N. observer team if that indeed comes up at the U.N. Security Council session'' in Geneva Friday. The announcement was seen as a victory for the PLO, which had called for such a force to monitor the crisis.

Officials said that the United States would be prepared to support a U.N. force, but said it was unlikely that the Israeli government would allow it in the occupied territories.

Avi Pazner, spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, said Israel was firmly against international intervention.

''Israel in the past has always opposed such an idea, because it constitutes an infringement on our sovereignty and interference in our internal affairs,'' he said. ''We will discuss it with the United States and explain why we think they have to oppose such an idea.''

Saeb Erekat, a Palestinian professor of political science at Nablus University in the West Bank, who went on a hunger strike after Sunday's killings, called the announcement ''excellent news.''

''If Mr. Baker is sincere and serious, we have taken a major step forward '' he said.

President Bush telephoned Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak Wednesday to express his ''profound displeasure'' over the latest wave of bloodshed in the territories, the Middle East News Agency reported. On Tuesday, he sent condolences to the families of the slain workers, who were killed as they waited to be picked for day labor jobs in Rishon Le Zion near Tel Aviv.

The new U.S. policy is expected to create further friction in the U.S.-Israeli relationship, which has come under increasing strain since the peace process that Baker is trying to mediate stalled.

Arens said Wednesday there was no doubt Israel was ''going through a difficult period internationally'' in the aftermath of the slayings and subsequent violent protests.

''I think that the Israeli Defense Forces have acted in an exemplary manner in dealing with the rampage that we were faced by thousands of people in Gaza and to some extent also in (the West Bank),'' Arens told Israel Radio.

ABIDJAN, IVORY COAST (MAY 23) UPI - Ten headless bodies were discovered in the Liberian capital of Monrovia Wednesday as tribal killings spread in the West African country's civil war, diplomatic sources said.

The grisly discovery of the bodies came as the Monrovia government admitted its forces had been defeated in battles with rebel forces and had lost the key port town of Buchanan, 87 miles southeast of the Liberian capital.

The decapitated bodies of the 10 men were discovered by authorities in Monrovia in the past two days in what was seen as a sign of the mounting tribal tensions within the country, the sources said.

Most of the dead were from the Gio tribe which dominates Nimba county, where a 5-month-old war has been fought aimed at toppling the government of President Samuel Doe. He seized power in a bloody coup in April 1980.

The diplomatic sources said members of the armed forces have broken into the houses of Gio members in Monrovia and taken the men away at night. One woman said the soldiers came to her house Tuesday and threatened her, her husband and their eight children.

The soldiers left after being given money, but they later came back and demanded more money, which they again were given. But they took the woman's husband and he has not been since.

The Armed Forces of Liberia are dominated by Doe's Krahn tribe, which has long been in conflict with the Gio, particularly over the allotment of government posts.

Confirmation that Buchanan had fallen to the rebels of Charles Taylor's National Patriotic Forces of Liberia is a serious blow to the government, Liberia watchers say. Fresh troops have been sent to recapture the town, although throughout the conflict the rebels have shown themselves to be a superior fighting force to the government troops.

TORONTO (MAY 23) UPI - A slowdown protest by independent truckers in Ontario closed commercial traffic Wednesday at several U.S. border crossings, and more than 3,000 Canadian auto workers were sent home because parts weren't getting through from Detroit.

The Canadian truckers organized the protest to demonstrate their opposition to the U.S-Canada Free Trade Agreement. Independent truckers in Quebec held similar protests at a border crossing south of Montreal and at a main Ontario-Quebec provincial crossing on Monday and Tuesday.

Tayce Wakefield, a General Motors Canada spokeswoman in Oshawa, said 3,000 workers at the carmaker's Ste. Therese, Quebec, Oldsmobile Ciera assembly plant were sent home Wednesday morning after the factory ran out of parts.

There is also ''a serious risk'' that assembly plants in Ontario and the United States may run out of parts if the protest continues, Wakefield said.

Wakefield said parts were ''trickling in'' to its Canadian plants by both rail and air.

But Jim Hartford, spokesman at Ford Canada in Oakville, said he was ''not aware of any alternative'' to getting parts delivered in time to prevent shutdowns.

''This is a serious situation because we are dependent on a wide variety of critical parts'' that come through the Windsor gateway from Detroit and elsewhere in the United States, Hartford said. Windsor is located on the Detroit River opposite the Motor City.

Pete Diponio, a Canada Customs spokesman in Windsor, said ''hundreds of trucks'' were stopped on the roadway leading to the Ambassador Bridge and that no commercial traffic was crossing. The Windsor crossing normally processes several thousand trucks a day.

Independent owner-operated truckers parked their rigs at or near three Canada Customs stations in Ontario - at Windsor, Sarnia and near Gananoque - closing commercial traffic lanes.

Ken Maclaren, vice president at the Canadian Trucking Association, said the independent truckers are ''at the bottom of the totem pole'' and are the first hit when times get tough. But he added, ''they're biting the hand that feeds them.''

Maclaren said it was difficult to say who was protesting and what their exact demands were. He called some of truckers' demands ''crazy,'' adding that the free trade agreement has nothing to do with the truckers problems.

The Canadian trucking industry is fiercely competitive and a whole range of issues lead to the current protest, including competition with U.S.-based truckers, higher interest rates and increased taxes, Maclaren said.

The independent truckers, who contract themselves out to other carriers and companies, are not an organized group.

Ontario transport minister Bill Wrye was slated to meet with the truckers in Windsor Wednesday afternoon.

Maclaren called the truckers in Windsor ''a dissident group'' who were using the protests in Quebec to get their own off the ground.

The Quebec truckers were scheduled to meet with government officials to discuss wage and work week regulations which they want revised.

Don Wiersma, a spokesman for the Canadian Manufacturing Association which represents more than 3,000 companies, said: ''We're urging the governments (in Ontario and Quebec) to use the means they have to bring order to the highways and bridges. We can't have this kind of lawlessness.''

CMA members have told Wiersma that production cutbacks could be necessary if materials can't get in and goods can't get out.

Up to 75 percent of manufactured goods are transported by truck in Canada and a slowdown could seriously damage or close a business, Wiersma said.

(MAY 23) UPI - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met for five hours in Geneva today with Hans-Dietrich Genscher , his West German counterpart. After the meeting, Shevardnadze spoke with reporters and denied that Moscow is demanding a cut in the number of German armed forces before any reductions in European conventional forces can be negotiated in Vienna. Shevardnadze also said Moscow wants to accelerate the Vienna talks.

Soviet President Gorbachev delivered an emotional 45-minute speech to the Russian republic's new Congress of People's Deputies today. With his voice rising, Gorbachev called his radical critics ''political rogues'' who use ''unscrupulous and dirty methods.'' He also accused radical communist Boris Yeltsin of abandoning socialism and trying to break up the Soviet Union.

A news report says a group of people was arrested for plotting to kill author Salman Rushdie. Scotland Yard acknowledges that an unspecified number of people were detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Act, which allows suspects to be held 48 hours. One radio report says five Moslems were arrested in a plot to kill Rushdie, whose book ''Satanic Verses'' angered some Moslems who regard the work as blasphemous.

Political analysts believe that Japan and South Korea will be looking to establish common economic ground when leaders begin three days of talks. South Korean President Roh Tae Woo arrives in Japan tomorrow. Japan's prime minister is expected to announce a plan for technological co-operation with South Korea. Reports have focused on Japan's reluctance to apologize fully for the 1910-1945 annexation of Korea.

ANCHORAGE, AK (MAY 23) UPI - Heightened environmental concerns growing out of the Exxon Valdez oil spill may mean less offshore oil drilling around the United States in the future, a top Interior Department official said Wednesday.

''There will be more monitoring and assessment of the long-term effects of oil and gas exploration and production on the marine and coastal ecology '' Ed Cassidy, deputy director of the U.S. Minerals Management Service, told a federal committee that advises the government on offshore drilling policy.

Cassidy stopped short of announcing new offshore drilling policies for the administration, calling his ''new directions'' address nothing more than ''speculation'' from the No. 2 man in the federal agency that controls offshore oil and gas activity.

''If industry is permitted to continue exploring in areas outside of Alaska and the central and western Gulf of Mexico, those efforts will be conditioned by the most stringent limitations yet to assure that the nation's precious coastal and marine ecology will be protected,'' Cassidy said in an apparent reference to controversial proposals for drilling off

Florida and California.

He predicted that the outer continental shelf ''leasing, exploration and production process will be different. For one thing, I would expect far fewer sales in far fewer areas.''

Cassidy hinted that details of new offshore drilling policies would be unveiled this week. His superior, Minerals Management Service Director Barry Williamson, stayed in Washington to work on the administration policy with President Bush and Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan.

But Cassidy told the Outer Continental Shelf Policy Committee - officials from 23 coastal states, federal agencies, oil companies, environmental groups and the fishing industry - to ''expect greater emphasis on environmental, regulatory and research efforts to assure that OCS activities will be even safer and the risks of pollution will be even less than they are today.''

Sensitive drilling areas may be targeted for environmental studies to determine whether drilling should occur, he said. But Cassidy took a swipe at Congress for ''enacting sweeping and unreasonable moratoria'' on drilling in offshore areas in Alaska, California and Florida where the government wanted to let industry drill.

Unless the United States can produce more oil, Cassady said, it will import more, meaning more tanker traffic and ''that means greater risk of spills and harm to our coastal and marine environments.''

Last year's 11 million-gallon Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska, the country's worst, has taught ''a valuable but costly lesson about the consequences of being careless,'' Cassady said, and has ''demonstrated we can neither afford nor should we tolerate complacency.''

He said the Minerals Management Service and the Navy planned to reopen the nation's only facility for testing oil spill response equipment, materials and techniques under realistic conditions. The closed Oil and Hazardous Materials Simulated Environmental Test Tank, OHMSETT, at the Earle Naval Weapons Station in Leonardo, N.J., will be restored to full operation next year, Cassady said.

(MAY 23) UPI - Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens today defended the military for acting in what he called an ''exemplary manner'' in facing rioting Palestinians. 12 Palestinians were killed and hundreds wounded in the riots. Violence has subsided in the Israeli-occupied territories, since the weekend when seven Palestinians were killed by an Israeli posing as a soldier. But the White House yesterday said President Bush was deeply troubled by the violent aftermath to the slayings.

Marla Maples today began a new job as spokeswoman for No Excuses jeans. When asked how Donald Trump feels about her new venture, Maples said, ''He thinks it's a wonderful idea.'' At a news conference, Maples declined to say how much she is being paid. She denied ''absolutely'' that she's cashing in on her sudden fame, saying she's been doing commercial modeling work for the past six years.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - Stocks closed slightly higher Wednesday in active trading as investors sent prices up just before the close. The Dow industrials eked out their third record high this week.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 7.55 Tuesday in setting a record high of 2852.23, added 4.03 to close at 2856.26.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.27 to 195.85 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index added 0.86 to 359.29. The price of an average share rose five cents.

Advances pulled ahead of declines 757-740 among the 2,012 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 172,330,000 shares, versus 203,350,000 shares traded Tuesday.

Profit taking after the record highs set Monday and Tuesday in the Dow industrials depressed prices for just about the entire session. Analysts noted that Wednesday marked the 18th day of the rally and many investors simply decided to take an opportunity to cash in stocks and reap the profits.

But late in the day the market pushed into the plus column and took the key blue-chip index to its third all-time high this week. Analysts said investors were heartened that the market held relatively firm even while traders took profits.

"I think it's the fact that the market gave up little ground earlier today that supported prices into the close," said Newton Zinder, analyst at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

A sharp drop in the price of Westinghouse stock, after an analyst reportedly lowered his rating on it, and weakness in oil issues brought on by sharply lower oil prices kept pressure on the Dow industrials most of the day. Those issues remained lower even though other Dow components gained.

Analysts said news early Wednesday that durable goods orders fell a sharp 4.1 percent in April because of declining orders for motor vehicles and aircraft had little effect on the market.

Even though the decline was more than twice what several economists had expected, they said the report was not weak enough to spark fears that the economy was growing at anything less than a moderate pace.

On the trading floor, Nova Corp. of Alberta was the most active issue, up 1/8 to 7 1/8, after gaining Monday and falling Tuesday. The company sold its rubber division to Bayer AG of West Germany but the Italian company Enimont has complained that Nova did not respect bidding rules established in selling the unit.

Texas Utilities followed, off 1/4 to 36 1/2. A new issue, Alliance Global Environmental Fund was third, unchanged at 16 on its first trading day.

Westinghouse finished down 1 1/4 to 34 3/4 on active volume. As for the oil issues, Chevron fell 5/8 to 69 3/8, Exxon lost 1/2 to 47 3/8 and Texaco eased 1/2 to 59 3/8.

Among other blue chips, AT&T lost 1/8 to 43 1/8, and IBM added 1 to 118 3/4 in active trading. Coca-Cola jumped 1 1/4 to 44 7/8.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 205,578,010 shares, compared with 242,362,580 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed lower in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index fell 0.20 to close at 359.65. The price of an average share was off one cent. Declines led advances 298-271 among the 809 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 19,748,800 shares, compared with 18,232,600 traded Tuesday. Hillhaven led the Amex issues, unchanged at 1 1/2.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index closed up 2.98 to 456.87.

MOSCOW (MAY 23) UPI - The Soviet Union and a U.S. children's hospital signed a joint venture agreement Wednesday to improve health care for Soviet children through regular exchanges of doctors, nurses and other professionals.

The agreement between the Soviet Ministry of Health and Children's Hospital of the King's Daughters in Norfolk, Va., will allow U.S. and Soviet doctors to work side by side to improve pediatric medicine, said Ron Eisenberg, a spokesman for the American hospital.

A group of American doctors and hospital administrators has been in Moscow for a week, visiting Soviet pediatric facilities while finalizing details of the non-profit joint venture.

''All we're trying to do is help kids,'' Eisenberg said. ''The concept is really a recognition that what has happened in the past, where individual children receive treatment in U.S. hospitals, was valuable but in no way provided a solution.''

Children's Hospital of the King's Daughters, the top pediatric ospital in its area, has helped Soviet children in the past and is currently treating one young patient for radiation exposure from the Chernobyl nuclear power plant disaster, Eisenberg said.

''It's both a rewarding feeling and a depressing feeling,'' when hospitals treat individual Soviet patients, he said. ''You can help one or two but can't reach the vast majority who need help.''

The visiting American doctors found their Soviet counterparts to be very open about the deficiencies in the country's health system.

''They're very dedicated,'' Eisenberg said. ''But they're very short-handed. Equipment and technology is well behind what is available in the States. They know this.''

Under the new joint venture, to be called the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Children's Health Center, Soviet pediatric specialists will be brought to the United States to train and work and Americans will visit the Soviet Union to work alongside local health professionals.

Details of how many doctors and nurses will be involved in the program and how long the exchanges will last still have to be worked out, Eisenberg said.

The Soviet Union will pay travel costs for Soviets to travel to the United States and the American hospital will pay the costs for U.S. doctors and nurses. The hosts will provide housing for those involved in the exchange.

Eisenberg said that additional funding will be sought from the Soviet Children's Fund and corporate contributors in the United States.

He said while the group is also trying to develop ways to get badly needed supplies and equipment to the Soviet Union, the main emphasis of the program will be on exchanges of doctors and nurses.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - House Democrats helped clear the way Wednesday for final approval of $720 million in emergency aid to Panama and Nicaragua, saying they would not try to hold up the money in a dispute over cutting military aid to El Salvador.

In giving up the battle for the time being, the Democrats said they had won an agreement from Secretary of State James Baker to continue talks on possible cuts in U.S. aid to El Salvador.

Moreover, the Democrats said a 250-163 House vote Tuesday for an amendment cutting U.S. military aid to El Salvador in half - contained in a bill that was later defeated - showed they had the strength to attach the proposal to another bill and win.

''The days of providing the Salvadoran military a blank check are over,'' said Rep. Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., co-sponsor of the amendment.

Moakley added that the vote shows ''justice must be done'' in the murders of six Jesuit priests, their cook and her daughter last year, a case that has inflamed passions on Capitol Hill. Members of the Salvadoran military have been accused in the killings.

The House Rules Committee chaired by Moakley could have used parliamentary procedures to hold up the aid to Panama and Nicaragua and press for the cuts to El Salvador.

But Moakley said Wednesday he would not pursue such a strategy - although a formal agreement clearing the way for a House vote on the bill was held up by an unrelated dispute involving a Louisiana defense plant.

House and Senate negotiators had agreed Tuesday on a $4.3 billion spending bill granting nearly all of the aid for Panama and Nicaragua requested months ago by President Bush.

The legislation must return to the House and Senate for final votes - as yet unscheduled - before it can be signed by Bush, who demanded that Congress complete action before its holiday recess starting Friday.

However, for Bush to send the $420 milllion to Panama and $300 million to Nicaragua, Congress either must pass a separate authorization bill or waive the need for one.

The supplemental spending bill contains such a waiver, but the Rules Committee had the option of removing it.

Moakley said he ''really agonized'' over whether to grant the waiver, but that he did not want to hold up the aid, which Bush sought to encourage the new U.S.-backed governments in Panama and Nicaragua.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the foreign operations subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, said, ''I feel we have no choice.''

The decision was applauded by Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee, who called it ''very statesmanlike.''

The House Tuesday rejected a separate bill authorizing the aid for Panama and Nicaragua - the measure that also served as the vehicle for Democratic attempt to cut military aid for El Salvador.

The House first approved the amendment. But under heavy pressure from the Bush administration, the House killed the bill 244-171 as Republicans combined with opponents of all foreign aid to reject the measure.

The Democratic proposal on El Salvador would withhold half of the military aid to that country. El Salvador receives $85 million a year in military aid and more than $1 million a day in total U.S. assistance.

To encourage peace talks under way between the Salvadoran government and leftist rebels, all the military aid would be eliminated if the government fails to negotiate in good faith, if there is a military coup or if the investigation of the Jesuit murders is not thorough.

The government would get all the aid if the rebels launch an offensive, receive foreign arms, attack civilians, or fail to negotiate in good faith.

The decision on granting or witholding aid would be made by the president.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Almost 300 thrifts, one out of eight, are likely to fail and be taken over by the government over the next two years, federal regulators warned Wednesday.

According to the Office of Thrift Supervision, 299 troubled thrifts are concentrated in California, Texas, Florida, Louisiana, Illinois, Ohio and New Jersey, and have a total of $193 billion in assets.

Separately, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady told a Senate panel that the cost of failed thrifts to taxpayers may climb up to $130 billion, far more than previously estimated.

Over the last few months, ''there has been a modest decline in the quality of thrifts, with the good ones remaining stable and the troubled ones getting worse,'' OTS Director Timothy Ryan told a news conference.

The OTS, which supervises the savings and loan industry, classified the 2,502 thrifts, with a total of $1.07 trillion in assets, into four groups.

Group I comprises 1,267 institutions, 51 percent of all thrifts, with $399 billion in assets wich represent 37 percent of industry assets. Ryan said the group is ''well capitalized and profitable.''

There are 621 thrifts, 25 percent of all institutions, in Group II, with $327 billion in assets accounting for 31 percent of industry assets. These thrifts meet or are expected to meet the OTS' capital requirements, Ryan said.

The 315 thrifts in Group III, 13 percent of all institutions, are ''troubled and have low capital,'' the OTS director noted. With $152 billion in assets representing 14 percent of industry assets, some of the thrifts could move down into Group IV, and some up into Group II, he added.

The 299 thrifts in Group IV, 12 percent of all institutions, ''are expected to be transferred to the Resolution Trust Corporation,'' Ryan said. Group IV's $193 billion in assets account for 18 percent of industry assets and are concentrated ''in a few large institutions,'' he added.

The RTC was created last year to close failed thrifts and sell their assets to help the government recover the cost of covering insured deposits.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - The dollar was mostly higher in light New York trading Wednesday as players shrugged off a sharp decline in U.S. durable goods orders and geared down ahead of a four-day European weekend.

Gold prices fell by nearly $12 an ounce in New York and by as much as $13 on European exchanges. Analysts cited market talk of heavy bullion sales by a Mideast institutional investor.

"The word this time was that the central bank of Saudi Arabia unloaded a million ounces of gold," said Los Angeles-based precious metals consultant Bruce Kaplan. "That's a lot," he added.

Analysts pointed to the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency when the gold market plummeted March 26 in a similar episode. Prices skidded then by as much as $30 an ounce when an estimated 3 million ounces were sold.

Wednesday's selloff shocked investors, as gold prices already were at levels from which many believed they had to rise. "It really casts a shadow over the market and causes everyone to wonder where the bottom is," Kaplan said. By comparison, the currency market was somnolent. Players yawned at U.S. data showing durable goods orders down 4.1 percent in April.

"I'm not sure people are really concerned with the durable goods number," explained corporate desk trader Mark Morris of National Westminster Bank in New York. "They just kind of ignored them."

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.6760 West German marks, up from 1.6735 Tuesday, and 151.20 Japanese yen, unchanged.

Lori Poynter, a Harris Trust & Savings Bank currency investment officer, said the dollar was "searching for the upward end of the range" against the mark, which has weakened on German unification concerns.

Market dealings thinned out as many European players quit early on the eve of Thursday's Ascension Day holiday, she said. A Copenhagen conference for senior foreign exchange managers also drew off key players.

Other dollar rates: 1.4185 Swiss francs, down from 1.4190; 5.6460 French francs, up from 5.6270; and 1,231 Italian lire, up from 1,228. The British pound moved up to $1.6932 from $1.6925.

In Europe, the dollar mostly eased in thin dealing before Thursday's holiday, which for many would begin the weekend."There's not much interest because we are closed tomorrow," said a Deutsche Bank trader in Frankfurt.

The dollar was unchanged in Frankfurt at 1.6715 deutsche marks but fell in Zurich to 1.4080 Swiss francs from 1.4175.

In London, the pound shrugged off Britain's higher-than-expected trade deficit figure for April and rose to $1.6935 from $1.6915.

The U.S. unit retreated in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively, 5.6085 francs against 5.6320, 34.37 Belgian francs against 34.40, and 1,222.40 Italian lire against 1,228.35.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar kept falling against the yen on U.S. Treasury

JERUSALEM (MAY 23) UPI - Thousands of Israelis who never venture into the winding streets and crowded Arab markets of the Old City had it virtually to themselves Wednesday, dancing and singing in celebration of ''Jerusalem Day'' in honor of their 1967 military victory.

Arabs ignored the festivities and stayed home to observe a general strike protesting the slayings of seven Arabs in the occupied territories last Sunday by an Israeli posing a soldier.

Under the watchful eyes of hundreds of soldiers and police, the flag-waving Israelis - many of whom were armed - marched through Jewish and Arab neighborhoods to celebrate the 1967 capture of the Old City and Arab East Jerusalem from Jordan.

Many of the Israelis said they usually avoid the predominantly Arab Old City out of fear.

''It's so upsetting to feel that I can't go through my own city any time I want to,'' said one 18-year-old Israeli enjoying Jerusalem Day in a park with friends. ''We can't go through there the whole year.''

Tuesday night, however, she was among thousands of religious Jews who, under heavy guard, paraded through Arab neighborhoods on their way to the Western Wall, the holiest site in Judaism. There they danced and sang, celebrating 23 years of Jewish control.

The modestly dressed young woman said the marchers wanted the Arabs to know there were Jews in the Old City ''to prove what this day means for us.''

''Generally (Jewish) people don't do that, but we went through,'' she said. ''It's a symbol.''

In addition to the religious groups, Israeli school children, soldiers and citizens from all parts of the country converged Wednesday on Jerusalem for picnics, parades, speeches and concerts.

One female soldier from Bat Yam near Tel Aviv said all Israelis feel an attachment to Jerusalem even if they rarely come here.

''It's a special day and a special place,'' she said, sitting among hundreds of soldiers listening to a concert in a park. ''Jerusalem is the center of the country and this day has a special spirit.''

In an interview with Army Radio, Mayor Teddy Kollek urged Jews, who make up the majority in the city, to respect the feelings of Christians and Moslems.

''It will take a generation or two until the city is united,'' he said. ''But let us be satisfied with the fact that we are the sovereign here, that a great thing has happened, that the city is united and that we can go to any place.''

Apart from scattered stone-throwing incidents and the burning of two cars, there were few confrontations Wednesday despite the simmering anger felt by Palestinians over the Rishon Le Zion killings.

Most Arabs stayed home Wednesday, but those who ventured out found thousands of Israelis, especially soldiers. One Arab shopkeeper in the Old City's Christian Quarter complained that his car was stopped five times by soldiers asking to see his identity papers.

CHICAGO (MAY 23) UPI - As many as 480 people are expected to die in traffic accidents around the nation during the coming Memorial Day holiday weekend, the National Safety Council said Wednesday.

Nearly 25 million people are expected to take to the nation's highways - a seven-year high - during the three-day period, the council said, and it predicted that between 380 and 480 of them would die in traffic accidents. Another 18,000 to 23,000 people are expected to suffer disabling injuries.

Last year, 441 people died in traffic accidents and more than 20,000 were injured.

(MAY 23) UPI - The son of President Bush... Neil Bush... today defended his actions as head of a bankrupt Denver savings and loan. Before the House Banking Committee in Washington, Bush defended his vote to approve 106-Million dollars in loans to business associates who defaulted. A bank controlled by one of the men had extended a line of credit to Bush's oil company.

Treasury Secretary Brady informed a Senate panel in Washington today that the savings and loan bail-out could cost up to 57-BILLION dollars more than previously estimated. That would bring the total cost to as much as 130-BILLION dollars. Brady said the Treasury will need more money to pay its guarantees on thrift loans.

The Senate voted today to ban the importation and manufacture of nine military-style assault weapons. The guns are described as the ''weapons of choice'' for criminals and drug traffickers. The provision was included in an arms control measure now under debate.

Economists are blaming the transportation industry for most of April's sharp drop in durable good orders. The Commerce Department announced that orders for big-ticket items fell four-point-one percent last month. The top economist for the National Association of Manufacturers says the drop relects both random changes and overstocks in transportation orders.

IRVING, TX (MAY 23) UPI - The National Football League on Wednesday awarded the 1994 Super Bowl to Atlanta, with the game to be played in the yet-to-be built Georgia Dome.

''We felt awful good about it going in,'' Atlanta Falcons owner Rankin Smith said. ''But you never know what can happen in a secret ballot.

''I think a lot of factors entered into this. But if there was one overriding factor, it had to be the new stadium.''

The Georgia Dome will seat 70,500 people and, though it is scheduled to be completed well before the 1994 NFL title game, the league gave itself an escape clause in case construction does not begin on time.

''Those involved into the project are confident it will be built on schedule,'' NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said. ''But if all the necessary paperwork for construction is not ready by Sept. 1, we will take the matter up again at our October meeting.''

Atlanta, which will host its first Super Bowl, was selected on the fourth ballot over the three other bidders for the 1994 game - New Orleans, Miami and Tampa, Fla.

''This will be great for our city's self-esteem, image and economy,'' said Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, who took part in Atlanta's presentation to the NFL. ''We owe a great deal of credit to Rankin Smith. He is a 24-carat gold asset to our city and we thank him for all the work he has done.

''The 1994 Super Bowl will be the best ever, we guarantee it.''

The Super Bowl was the first major event landed for the Georgia Dome, which is the centerpiece of Atlanta's efforts to lure major sporting events to the city.

Atlanta is also hoping to grab a future NCAA Final Four and is the United States' bidder for the 1996 Summer Olympics.

''I've said all along that the NFL has to reward various entities who have created facilities for the league's use and this stadium was a key,'' Smith said.

''I sweated this decision out, though. You never know what is going to happen.''

When Tagliabue made the announcement, Mayor Jackson let out a whoop and then yelled, ''Allllllll right!''

Philadelphia Eagles owner Norman Braman, chairman of the Super Bowl site selection committee, said none of the losing bidders should feel disappointed.

''All of these cities are great cities,'' Braman said. ''Their track record shows they know how to run great sports events and know how to run the Super Bowl.

''They will all have Super Bowls in the future, you can be sure of that.''

Next season's Super Bowl will be held in Tampa, followed by Minneapolis in 1992 and Phoenix in 1993.

PANAMA CITY, PANAMA (MAY 23) UPI - At least 532 Panamanians and 24 Americans died during the U.S. invasion last year that ousted military ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega, a Panamanian human rights group estimated Wednesday.

The figure, slightly higher than the number officially given by the U.S. military, was issued in a report compiled by the independent Panamanian Human Rights Committee.

The report also estimates that 4,000 Panamanians were injured in the fighting when U.S. troops invaded last Dec. 20. The U.S. Southern Command estimates that 516 Panamanians and 26 Americans were killed.

The number of invasion victims has been a source of controversy in Panama, where other human rights and church groups have estimated as many as 700 Panamanians died.

Former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark - who visited Panama in January - said 4,000 Panamanians may have been killed.

Noriega, now in a Miami jail awaiting trial on drug charges, wrote that 10,000 Panamanian civilians and 200 U.S. soldiers died in the invasion. He sent a letter to an American college student that was reprinted in the May issue of the Panama City magazine Opinion Publica.

''We did not find thousands of dead,'' said committee President Roberto Troncoso. ''The figures we are giving are figures substantiated by documentation.''

He said the group came up with the 556 figure following visits to hospitals in Panama City and Colon, the cities where most of the fighting occurred.

The group also double-checked casualty lists used by other organizations and published advertisements calling on Panamanians to come forward with reports of missing persons, he said.

The report did not distinguish between military and civilian Panamanian casualties, but said 21 U.S. soldiers and three U.S. civilians died.

The Southern Command estimates 314 Panamanian soldiers and 202 Panamanian civilians were killed, and says 23 U.S. troops and three U.S. civilians died.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - Health Secretary Louis Sullivan, escalating his anti-smoking crusade, plans to urge states to ban cigarette vending machines, sources said Wednesday.

Sullivan is scheduled to present his idea Thursday to the Senate Finance Committee, which is holding a hearing on children's access - legal or illegal - to cigarettes.

Forty-four states and the District of Columbia have laws prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors, but enforcement of such laws has been lax and is made more difficult by children's easy access to vending machines.

United Press International learned Sullivan will present the committee with model state legislation - not federal - that would remove cigarette vending machines. He also will discuss a possible licensing system for cigarette sales.

''The beauty of this is that states would do it,'' said one source, who asked not to be identified.

Sullivan believes the best way to curb youths' access to tobacco is to eliminate the easy source of the cigarettes - vending machines.

The tobacco industry strongly opposes the proposal, claiming children usually do not buy cigarettes from vending machines.

''The tobacco industry doesn't want kids smoking, but ... the vast majority of vending machines are already in places where kids don't have access,'' said Tobacco Institute spokeperson Brennan Dawson.

''Most machines are in factories, workplaces, in cocktail lounges,'' Dawson said, ''So it's not a primary or even a large source of underage purchase.''

Dawson said a ban on vending machines would limit adults' legal right to purchase cigarettes. And she said states ought to be enforcing their laws banning cigarette purchases by minors.

Vending machine sales account for 6 percent of all cigarette sales in the United States, or 1.69 million packs, Dawson said.

An official of the National Automatic Merchandising Association could not be reached for comment.

Sullivan, who sees tobacco as a major health threat and a cause of costly lung and heart diseases, has had previous showdowns with the tobacco industry during his one-year tenure as health and human services secretary.

He denouced as ''blood money'' tobacco company sponsorship of athletic events, such as the Virginia Slims tennis tournament.

Sullivan also attacked R.J. Reynolds' proposal to test-market Uptown cigarettes to blacks, saying the tobacco company was pushing a hazardous product on a vulnerable group.

And he criticized Reynolds' marketing plan for Dakota cigarettes that would target young working-class women.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - British Airways PLC Deputy Chairman Sir Colin Marshall Wednesday said the airline will put a freeze on new hires this year in order to reduce labor costs and boost profitability in a highly competitive industry.

''Labor costs remain a major concern for British Airways, one of the most profitable carriers in the world,'' Marshall told airline industry analysts.

''There will be a freeze on new hires as a way to reduce our staff and let the numbers go down,'' Marshall said. ''We want to streamline, simplify our operations in order to increase our productivity.''

British Airways recorded a 14 percent increase in profitability in 1989, compared with 6 percent gain for Delta Air Lines, and profit declines of 30 percent for American Airlines and 65 percent for United Airlines, according to Marshall.

Marshall declined to say by how much British Airways intended to reduce its workforce.

''We now employ 50,000 people, and if this number goes down through attrition by only 2 percent, this will already represent 1,000 people in a year,'' he said. ''It is part of our strategy for profit margin improvement to shift people from a less profitable area to an area of growth instead of hiring new people.''

Marshall also declined to say whether the carrier would resort to layoffs if British Airways' staff does not drop to targeted levels.

''Our goal is to maintain the quality of our service while achieving greater cost efficiency,'' he said, pointing out that the airline's labor costs rose by about 15 percent last year, or 8 percent after accounting for inflation.

Other major increases in spending last year resulted from fuel costs, which rose 30 percent, and new aircraft leases, up by 44 percent.

''In the current business environment, we do not expect any significant upturn in any of the economies of the major countries where we fly,'' he said.

British Airways is a leading carrier in Europe, and along Britain-Northern America and Britain-Asia-Pacific routes.

Marshall predicted an increase of not more than 1 percent in the gross national product of the major industrialized countries where British Airways flies, resulting in a slow expansion in the airline industry.

The British carrier Tuesday reported a 40 percent increase in net income to $404 million for the fiscal year ended March 31, from $285 million in the previous year. The increase included a one-time gain from the sale of aircraft and British Airways' 20-percent stake in the Belgium carrier Sabena World Airways.

The air lines posted a fourth-quarter pre-tax profit of $25 million, compared with a loss of $8 million in the last quarter of fiscal 1988.

Marshall also cited improved traffic, up 13 percent in April, the first month of the carrier's current fiscal year. The increase mainly reflected growth in Europe where traffic is expected to steadily rise in view of the single market in 1993, despite strong competition from high-speed trains and the opening of the Channel's Eurotunnel between France and Britain.

Marshall said that, as the only airline beside Air France to fly the Concorde, British Airways was interested in new studies about the second generation of supersonic jets.

''It is on the drawing board right now and we'll have an input in it at a later stage,'' he said.

Marshall reiterated British Airways' commitment to an international ''open sky'' policy, where further deregulation would allow free competition, mainly in the United States.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - Television journalist Diane Sawyer has been ordered to appear at the racketeering trial of Imelda Marcos to verify a CBS News videotape of an interview she had with the former first lady of the Philippines.

Debra Livingston, an assistant U.S. Attorney prosecuting Marcos, revealed the subpoena in a letter to Judge John Keenan in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

''The government has issued a trial subpoena to CBS and Diane Sawyer, formerly with (CBS News's) '60 Minutes,' in connection with authenticating a videotape that aired on '60 Minutes,''' Livingston said. ''The government intends to introduce a portion of this videotape at trial,'' the letter said.

Sawyer left ''60 Minutes'' and CBS News and now works on the weekly ABC News program ''Prime Time Live.''

The letter said CBS broadcast the interview on Sept. 21, 1986, a few months after the Marcoses left the Philippines.

CBS lawyer Susanna Lowy said the network plans to fight the subpoena.

''60 Minutes'' spokesman Roy Burnett confirmed that an interview with Mrs. Marcos had been broadcast, but was not immediately aware of the exact content.

He added, ''CBS will be representing Diane Sawyer in this matter.''

Rena Terracuso, a spokeswoman for ''Prime Time Live,'' said Sawyer was not available and there would be no comment on the matter.

The letter to Keenan said, ''In this broadcast, Imelda Marcos stated, in substance, that her signature (found on a record left behind in Manila's presidential palace) was a forgery.''

The record, signed ''Jane Ryan,'' has been entered into evidence ''and Imelda Marcos's handwriting on this document has been positively identified,'' the letter stated.

Marcos is being tried on charges that she and her late husband, Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, conspired to buy New York real estate, art and jewelry with $222 million stolen from their homeland.

Saudi Arabian arms merchant Adnan Khashoggi, her co-defendant, is charged with helping to hide the Marcoses' ownership of the real estate.

VALLEYFIELD, QUEBEC (MAY 23) UPI - An outspoken Mohawk newspaper editor charged with murder in the war over gambling at the St. Regis Indian Reservation was released from jail Wednesday on $12,750 bail.

Doug George was charged with second-degree murder in the death of Harold ''J.R.'' Edwards, an apparently neutral bystander in a May 1 gun battle over gambling.

The court also set a series of other conditions for the anti-gambling crusader, including reporting to police once a week on Fridays, adhering to an 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew and handing over any weapons.

George also cannot meet with Ken Lazore, Roger Mitchell or Steve Lazore - three men arrested at the same time as George - unless it is in the presence of a lawyer and in connection with their related charges.

Steve Lazore and Mitchell are officers in the 14-man indigenous Akwesasne Mohawk Police force. The three were charged with being accomplices after the fact.

Also arrested on May 13 in connection with Edwards' murder was David George, Doug George's brother.

David George was charged with pointing a weapon. All but Doug George were released on their own recognizance two days after their arrests.

Besides Edwards, anti-gambling activist Matthew Pyke, 22, was killed in the vicinity of David George's home in Snye, Quebec. Police are still investigating that murder.

The reservation, also known as Akwesasne, had been plagued by violence over gambling casinos on the New York side. The reservation straddles the U.S.-Canadian border along the St. Lawrence River near Massena, N.Y.

Under Canadian law, second-degree murder indicates there was no pre-meditation but the accused should have foreseen the consequences of his actions.

The dispute over casinos has subjected the reservation to nightly arsons, vandalism and shootings since last summer. Since the two killings, both Canadian and New York law enforcement agencies have maintained a presence on the reservation.

Doug George, editor of two anti-gambling newspapers, Akwesasne Notes, and Indian Time, has received a steady stream of telephone threats for his stance and his editorial offices were burned down by pro-gambling Indians last year.

Opponents of gambling say casinos disrupt tribal life and subvert traditional values. Proponents of the casinos say they provide jobs for the economically strapped reservation.

In the first World Cup in 1930, Uruguay met Argentina in the championship game. The chant from the Argentine fans was: ''Victory or death.''

More than a half century later, the stakes have not greatly diminished. Invariably, World Cup results bring reports from police blotters around the globe of heart attacks, suicide, murder and riot.

Following West Germany's 3-2 loss to Austria in the 1978 World Cup, a carpenter in West Berlin jumped from his window shouting, ''I don't want to live anymore.''

The delirium resumes shortly with the 14th World Cup. The 24-team tournament will be held in 12 cities throughout Italy. It opens June 8 in Milan with defending champion Argentina playing Cameroon and ends July 8 in Rome.

The World Cup, which began qualifying rounds two years ago with 110 countries, will be viewed on television over the month by some 15 billion people. On the day of the championship game about 1 of every 10 people on the planet will be watching.

The United States, a qualifier for the first time in 40 years, is a stranger to World Cup passion. The Americans will be well advised that with the passion comes a small measure of lunacy.

-In a 1930 World Cup game in Uruguay, Argentina meets the United States. The American trainer, incensed over a call, smashes his medicine bottles on the field. He is overtaken by fumes and must be assisted by bystanders.

-Powerful Italy is upset 1-0 by North Korea in 1966 in England. The team returns home and is greeted at the airport by an outraged citizenry that pelts the players with rotten fruit.

-El Salvador eliminates Honduras in a 1969 qualifying game and the result triggers rioting and military attacks. Although longstanding and complex problems exist between the countries, the episode is dubbed the Football War.

-Scottish fans try to hire a World War II submarine for the trans-Atlantic trip to Argentina for the 1978 World Cup. The Royal Navy takes a dim view of the project.

With the passion also comes the politics. For like the Olympics, the World Cup offers a staggeringly impressive forum.

-Benito Mussolini uses the 1934 World Cup to parade his fascist ideals. As Hitler is to do two years later at the Berlin Olympics, the Italian dictator cheers his nation from the stands.

-In 1974 the Soviet Union refuses for political reasons to play a qualifying game in Chile, giving the Chileans a berth in the tournament.

-In 1978, the president of Argentina's World Cup organizing comittee is assassinated; an Argentine political group suspends its terrorism against the government so not to disrupt the World Cup.

But for all the political maneuvering, the World Cup mostly has been a stage for soccer's most compelling moments:

-In 1950 in Brazil, a lowly U.S. team stuns England 1-0 on a goal by Larry Gaetjans, a Haitian immigrant from New York. It is the greatest upset in World Cup history and a dark day in English soccer.

-Playing before the queen in Wembley Stadium, England defeats West Germany 4-2 in overtime for the championship. Geoff Hurst scores three goals for England, the only player to do so in the finals.

-The 1970 Mexico World Cup provides the finest save ever made in the tournament. Brazil's Pele heads the ball toward the English goal, but goalkeeper Gordon Banks dashes from the other side of the net and scoops the ball over the bar. Pele says Banks was ''like a salmon leaping up a falls.''

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (MAY 23) UPI - Police intercepted a group of sugar industry workers on the road to Managua, dispersing the crowd with bullets and tear gas in a clash that killed one worker and wounded five, witnesses said Wednesday.

An estimated 1,200 workers from a state-owned sugar plantation and mill at Montelimar, 36 miles southeast of Managua, started toward the capital in trucks Tuesday to demand the dismissal of San Antonio sugar mill boss Jose Leon Roman.

Leon had allegedly threatened to fire any workers who joined the Nicaraguan Workers' Union, a labor organization that supports President Violeta Chamorro's National Opposition Union.

Four miles out of Montelimar, the convoy was intercepted by Sandinista police patrols using nightsticks, firearms and shields, witnesses said. The police forced the workers to get off the trucks and walk along the road, witnesses said.

''We protested to the police, but in response we received bullets and tear-gas bombs,'' said marcher Pablo Alberto Ulloa. He said the police beat several of the workers with sticks as they crawled along the road to get away.

One of the workers was shot dead by police in the confrontation, NWU leader Antonio Jarquin said. Five other marchers were reported wounded.

The Interior Ministry said Wednesday it had no information on the incident. The ministry, which is in charge of the police, is still staffed by supporters of the Sandinista Front, although the UNO is seeking to replace key positions with its own people.

Tuesday's clash was the third violent incident between demonstrators and the Sandinista police force since Chamorro took office April 25.

DETROIT (MAY 24) UPI - Both Chrysler Corp. and Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A. said Wednesday they have initiated recalls of certain 1990-model cars to find a small number of defective air bags.

Chrysler spokesman Tom Jakobowski said the company has been notifying 257 owners of Chrysler LeBaron, Landau Sedan and Fifth Avenue models, as well as Dodge Daytona and Dynasty models, to bring their cars into dealers to have the air-bag module replaced.

Cars affected by the recall have air-bag modules that lack diffuser holes between the igniter and propellent charges that could prevent the balloon-like safety device from deploying in a crash. All affected models have gray interiors.

''We have been notifying owners by telephone through our zone offices ''Jakobowski said, adding that Chrysler was told by its supplier about the problem.

Chrysler will replace the air-bag modules on all 257 cars, even though only two of the units may be defective, he said.

Meanwhile, Toyota confirmed it is notifying owners of 2,543 1990-model Celica cars, built in November 1989, for the same reason.

But Toyota spokesman Kurt von Zumwalt said the carmaker will replace only four air-bag systems known to be defective after it checks the serial numbers on the safety devices.

Although automakers do not diclose the name of its suppliers in such cases sources said the same air-bag supplier is responsible in both recalls.

(MAY 23) UPI - The president's son defends himself... NATO lowers its guard... the Senate resticts nine types of weapons... and Coca Cola issues a warning about contest cans. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

Neil Bush, the president's son, today appeared before the House Banking Committee and denied allegations that he has violated federal thrift regulations.

The younger Bush defended his actions as a director of a failed Denver savings and loan.

Bush appeared relaxed and joked with the panel, saying he tried to make a deal with his mother that she would go before the committee and he would go to Wellesley College, where her coming speech is opposed by some students.

The committee is investigating the collapse of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association of Denver.

Bush joined the thrift's board in 1985. He left four months before government regulators took over the collapsed Silverado in December 1988.

Protecting the thrift's depositors from losses is expected to cost taxpayers more than one-BILLION dollars.

Five former Silverado officers and directors have agreed to sign consent orders that prohibit them from working in the savings and loan industry without prior regulatory approval. NONE of the executives admits any wrongdoing.

Bush has refused to sign a consent order similar to those signed by other Silverado officers and directors.

In January, the Office of Thrift Supervision filed an administrative complaint against Neil Bush, accusing him of violating thrift regulations.

Bush called the O-T-S action ''frivolous'' and said he is ''baffled'' by the agency's pursuit of him.

Bush defended his vote to approve 106-Million dollars in loans to business associates who eventually defaulted on the loans.

BARKHAMSTED, Conn. (MAY 24) UPI - The Hitchcock Chair Co., famous for its hand-made rockers and other furniture, has abruptly closed as company and bank officials try to resolve its default on a $6 million loan, officials said Wednesday.

Hitchcock shut down its historic factory Tuesday on the banks of the Farmington River after defaulting on the loan made by Bank of Boston. The closing put 150 employees out of work.

Bank spokesman Wayne J. Taylor said the decision to shut down the factory was made by Hitchcock executives and that the bank was still trying to work out a solution to the loan default.

''They are in default of a loan agreement, but we continue to try and work with the company and figure out a solution,'' Taylor said. ''We're still talking with the company, nothing has changed since (Tuesday.)''

He said the bank had taken no action to take possession of the factory, which stands in the picturesque village of Riverton.

The closing Tuesday came less than a year after a group of investors in the area bought the company and consolidated operations at the Riverton site, giving up about eight retail stores to concentrate on manufacturing its crafted products.

Buckingham Galleries, which bought the retail stores last April, said it had made an offer to buy the manufacturing business but the offer had been refused by the bank.

Buckingham still was trying to buy the assets but was ''waiting to see what the bank is going to do,'' said Carl Woods, the company's chief financial officer.

The company began to have financial problems in 1988 and shareholders sold out in June to a group of investors headed by Langdon G. Johnson, director of the Pace Group, a Hartford-based management consulting firm, and Alan MacKenzie, who had been president of Hitchcock in 1988.

Johnson served as chief executive officer of the new Hitchcock company.

The Hitchcock Chair Co. gained fame in the early 1800s and from 1826 to 1866, the village of Riverton in northwestern Connecticut was known as Hitchcockville.

The company was revived after World War II by the late John T. Kenney of West Hartford, who was an avid trout angler and often fished in the Farmington River in Riverton.

Legend has it that while fishing one day, Kenney had the idea of reopening the dilapidated old brick factory in which Lambert Hitchcock made his famous chairs a century earlier.

The Hitchcock rockers and other furniture his new company produced became popular as examples of New England craftsmanship, with their colonial styling and solid construction of native wood.

NEW YORK (MAY 23) UPI - The New School for Social Research filed suit in federal court Wednesday challenging an obscenity condition attached to a grant it received from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, said a requirement that grant recipients guarantee their work will not be obscene was unconstitutional.

The university's president compared the requirement to a loyalty oath.

''The New School for Social Research has concluded that it cannot accept a grant that carries with it a limitation upon free expression,'' University President Jonathan Fanton said.

The restrictions were approved by Congress after conservative lawmakers protested several controversial art exhibits, including one by the late photographer Robert Mapplethorpe.

The law prohibits funds from going to art exhibits that depict homoeroticism and other sex acts and, in the eyes of the endowment, have no serious artistic merit.

While the New School, which includes the Parsons School of Design, agrees with existing obscenity laws, it is upset by the new restrictions artists must agree to as well as the endowment's duplication of those restrictions on notices sent to school officials informing them that its grant had been approved.

''This approach has the unfortunate effect of chilling free expression and undermining the confidence of the artistic and educational community in the NEA,'' said Fanton.

The lawsuit specifically challenges the use of the obscenity requirement on the forms that accompanied the notice of grant approval and not the new law restricting what the endowment can spend its money on.

The New School, a progressive university located in New York and Los Angeles, received the $45,000 grant to fund a collaboration between sculptor Martin Puryear and architect Michael Van Valkenburgh to redesign the school's courtyard at 66 W. 12th St. in Greenwich Village.

After receiving the grant, Fanton wrote to John Frohnmayer, chairman of the endowment, and asked that the requirements be dropped because they were unfair and not required by Congress.

''The certification procedure is akin to a loyalty oath which is so vague that we cannot possibly know what it is to which we are swearing,'' Fanton said in a statement.

Frohnmayer responded a week later defending the inclusion of the requirement but repeating his opposition to the restrictions on endowment grant money.

''I share, as I'm sure you can tell from my public statements, your concern about the affect of this law,'' Frohmayer said, ''about increasing constrictions on the ability of artists to speak freely through their art, and about an increasingly intolerant, but vocal part of our society.''

Fanton responded saying he still disagreed with the requirement. He filed the lawsuit nearly two weeks later.

(MAY 23) UPI - NATO defense ministers cited the continued easing of East-West tensions as they closed out a two-day meeting in Brussels, Belgium, today.

As a result, they voted to lower the ''readiness and availability'' status of allied forces in Europe.

The ministers issued a communique saying that eventual approval of an accord reducing NATO and Warsaw Pact conventinonal forces will virtually eliminate the possibility of a surprise attack on allied forces.

Defense Secretary Cheney said that assuming tensions continue to ease, the need to maintain a high state of military readiness would be lowered.

But Secretary General Manfred Woerner said the improved outlook should NOT be seen as meaning that American troops are NO longer needed on the continent.

Woerner also said the improved situation should NOT be seen as a message sending American troops home.

The Senate today approved a bill that would ban making or importing nine types of military-style assault weapons.

Several national police organizations want the ban, but the Bush administration, Senate Republicans and the National Rifle Association want to keep the assault weapons available to the public.

But the Senate voted 52crime package a three-year ban on nine foreign- and U-S-made semi-automatic weapons.

Later, the Senate narrowly refused to reconsider the vote.

Yesterday, the Senate voted overwhelmingly AGAINST a broader ban on 21 types of semi-automatic assault weapons, as well as bullet magazines with more than 15 rounds.

Republican Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah fought both bans, saying they would hurt only ''decent, honest people'' who he said use the weapons for collecting, target practice, or hunting.

Democratic Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said the ease with which drug dealers can get the weapons is fueling an ''arms race'' on the streets of America.

FREDERICK, MD (MAY 23) UPI - Former major league slugger Charlie ''King Kong'' Keller, who played on three New York Yankees world championship teams, died Wednesday at his Frederick County farm. He was 73.

Keller, who earned his nickname for his mammoth home runs while playing with the Yankees and Detroit Tigers, died of cancer at the Yankeeland Farm he owned and operated outside Frederick where he raised horses.

He played the outfield for the Yankees from 1939 to 1949 and for the Tigers in 1950 and 1951. He returned to New York to play the 1952 season with the Yankees. Keller played on Yankees teams that won the World Series in 1939, 1941 and 1943. He also played on the Yankees' AL championship team in 1942.

Keller hit .334 in his rookie year and had a lifetime batting average of .286, with 189 home runs. His best season was in 1941 when the lefthander smashed 33 homers and drove in 122 runs. Keller hit three homers, and batted .438 with six RBI and eight runs in a four-game sweep of Cincinnati in 1939.

After retiring from baseball, Keller was involved in harness racing for over 40 years. Fresh Yankee, the 1970 harness horse of the year who retired in 1972 as the all-time trotter money leader with $1.29 million, was bred on Keller's farm and sold for $900 before she began racing.

In 1989, Yankeeland Farm ranked 10th among harness racing breeders with his horses earning $1.85 million. His current top horse was Choice Yankee, a 3-year-old filly. All the Keller horses carried the Yankee name.

Funeral arrangements were not immediately made public.

The firm says there is a chance that the can may malfuction. The company says it has received 20 to 25 complaints of MagiCan malfunctionings.

Coke today took out full-page newspaper advertisments across the country. The ad said that 60-thousand people who had bought the cans had found prizes inside.

MagiCan looks like conventional cans of Coca-Cola, but instead of containing a soft drink, they have a mechanism that causes a cash prize to appear through the opening after the top is lifted.

The cash prizes range in denominations from one dollar to 500 dollars. The cans that contain one-dollar bills also carry coupons that can be redeemed for other prizes.

The newspaper ads explain how a MagiCan might malfunction. Customers are asked to call a toll-free number to report problems.

Rocky Graziano's friends and fans are mourning the death of the former dead-end kid who fought his way out of the New York slums to become king of the middleweights.

The 71-year-old Graziano died last night at New York Hospital of heart and lung failure after a lengthy illness.

Funeral services are still being planned for the fighter who held the middleweight title in 1947 and 1948.

Graziano is best remembered for three savage middleweight title fights with Tony Zale in 1946, 1947 and 1948.

Graziano was knocked out in the sixth round of his first attempt to take the 160-pound title from Zale at Yankee Stadium. He won the crown from Zale on a sixth-round knockout at Chicago Stadium, and lost it back on a third-round knockout in Newark, New Jersey.

After his fight career, Graziano went on to to a second career as a T-V personality and as a crusader against juvenile deliquency.

Graziano made ''Somebody Up There Likes Me'' the title of his autobiography, which later was made into a hit movie starring Paul Newman.

WASHINGTON (MAY 23) UPI - In a dramatic defeat for the powerful National Rifle Association, the Senate voted a ban Wednesday on nine military-type assault weapons, raising the prospect that anti-crime legislation could face a Republican filibuster or a veto.

The Senate voted 52-48 to retain in the anti-crime legislation a provision that would prohibit for three years the importation of five foreign-made semi-automatic weapons and the manufacture of four U.S.-made semi-automatic weapons - called the ''weapons of choice'' for violent criminals and drug traffickers.

A desperate attempt by Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas to reverse the decision failed when the Senate refused 50-49 to reconsider its decision, a defeat not only for the NRA but the administration and GOP leaders.

''Contrary to Democratic rhetoric, it is still my hope we can work out a bipartisan crime bill,'' Dole said. ''We've known for a long time we were going to have to deal with anti-gun legislation and I don't consider today's vote as the final word.''

The Senate also rejected 50-47 a Republican amendment to limit the times a prisoner on death row can file a petition with federal courts and sets a timetable of about a year after which all chances to save his life run out except in unusual circumstances.

But the Republicans won approval for trying again Thursday with the GOP hoping they can change the vote overnight. If they fail, the Senate is expected to adopt the Democratic version which sets a less rigid timetable and offers more opprtunities for petitions to the federal courts.

The current rules on habeas corpus - which requires those detaining someone to justify their action - have been used by death row prisoners to petition the courts countless times and stay alive for years after conviction, as much as 18 years in one case.

''The American people are sick and tired of these vicious animals dragging their cases through the courts for year after year,'' Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said.

The Senate also has to consider numerous other provisions in the anti-crime bill, including a major expansion of the death penalty, which would cover 30 offenses, and a change in the law governing police searches.

Forty-three Democrats and nine Republicans teamed to approve the assault weapons ban. Thirty-six Republicans and 12 Democrats voted against the prohibition.

''It's a nice victory,'' said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., the author of the ban and himself an NRA member.

DeConcini, at a news conference after the vote, said Republicans told him on the Senate floor that they were ''considering'' a filibuster against the bill.

Asked if he expected a filibuster or a veto by President Bush because the bill includes the semi-automatic weapons ban, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said ''I think there is not only a danger ... I think there is a better than even prospect the Republicans will veto this package.''

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, accused the NRA of a ''campaign of lies'' to scuttle any ban and said the NRA had refused entreaties to negotiate some form of compromise. ''They lost this one and it's a big one,'' he said. ''I hope this sends a message to the NRA.''

The vote in favor of the ban came only a day after the Senate rejected 52-48 a Metzenbaum amendment that would have banned 21 assault weapons and gun magazines that hold more than 15 rounds.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, leading the fight against the ban, said it would hurt only the ''decent, honest people'' who collect these weapons or use them for target practice and sometimes for hunting.

Hatch said ''deranged psychopaths'' and the ''crooks and violent people will be able to get them.''

But Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said: ''Assault weapons put awesome killing power in the hands of drug runners, hate groups and other criminals.

''The ease with which these weapons can be obtained is fueling the arms race on the streets of every community in America,'' Kennedy added. ''This is literally a matter of life and death for law enforcement.''

DeConcini said, ''Assault weapons are rapidly becoming the weapon of choice for drug dealers. Our law enforcement officials are literally fed up.''

Five of the weapons included in the Metzenbaum and DeConcini proposals have already been banned from coming into the United States under an executive order signed by the president.

AUSTIN, TX (MAY 23) UPI - The Texas Senate, bolstered by a breakaway coalition of Hispanic members, voted Wednesday to override Gov. Bill Clements' veto of a $555 million school finance reform bill.

School reform was ordered last October by the Texas Supreme Court, which ruled the state's method of funding schools discriminated against students in poor school districts. Legislators are under court order to reform the financing system themselves or turn the matter over to a special court master June 1.

The vote was 23-8 to override the veto. Twenty-one votes, or two-thirds of the Senate membership, was required to override.

''The veto override phoenix is arising out of the ashes,'' Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, who pulled down his override motion Tuesday when an unusual coalition of Republicans and minority Democrats teamed up to sustain the governor's veto, said earlier Wednesday.

While Parker, the main architect of the education measure, could not scrape together the 21 votes needed to override on Tuesday, a change of heart by four Hispanic senators gave him the majority he needed.

One of those four lawmakers, Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said he changed his mind when Senate sponsors of the bill promised to put a provision in the pending appropriations bill that will ensure greater equity funding for poor districts.

The bill vetoed by Clements would ensure that 90 percent of the school districts in the state have equalized funding, depending on local district tax effort, but that number will be raised to 95 percent in the appropriations bill.

''This persuaded me and other members of the Senate Hispanic Caucus to support the motion to override the governor's veto,'' Truan said.

Clements, who earlier threatened to call a record sixth special session, said he vetoed the bill because it would raise the state sales tax.

The House could take its override vote Thursday but may wait until after the holiday weekend. The House will take up on Thursday a bill that would increase the state sales tax by one-half cent to raise the revenues needed for education reforms.

(MAY 23) UPI - A national review of standardized tests concludes that the exams are NOT always fair and are relied on too much.

The National Commission on Testing and Public Policy released the report in Washington after three years of study.

The commission said testing... usually multiple choice... is always to some extent culturally dependent and doesn't take into account the poorer educational opportunities available to most minorities.

Commission Chairman Bernard Gifford said the chance to attend a college, enroll in a training program, or get a job should NEVER depend entirely upon a single test.

In the most recent drive toward educational reform, standardized test scores are often used as the key measure of success.

Educational Testing Service... developer of standardized tests such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test... welcomed the commission efforts as what it termed a means ''to make sure that tests are properly designed, used and interpreted.''

(MAY 23) UPI - Most Americans apparently believe that a penny saved is better than a penny spurned.

A Gallup survey shows that 62 percent of Americans oppose legislation to discontinue the thin red cent, while 26 percent say good riddance.

And more than three-fourths of those questioned said proposals before Congress to eliminate the penny and round cash prices to the nearest nickel would just be an excuse to raise prices.

The Gallup Poll surveyed 750 people over age 18. Generally speaking, more than half of those questioned believe wiping out the penny would just be confusing.

One reason elimination is being considered is the cost of keeping BILLIONS of the coins flowing. But U-S Mint Director Donna Pope says it costs as much as seven-tenths of a cent to make a penny, and the small profit goes to reduce the deficit.

The Gallup survey was conducted for a group called Americans For Common Cents, spelled C-E-N-T-S.

(MAY 23) UPI - House Democrats today dropped their call for immediately cutting military aid to El Salvador. That clears the way for approval of 720-Million dollars in aid to Panama and Nicaragua. Democrats say Secretary of State Baker agrees to continue talks on cuts in U-S aid to El Salvador because of human rights abuses. Democratic leaders add that a 250-163 vote yesterday to cut in half military aid to El Salvador shows they can attach the proposal to another bill.

Hungary now has its first NON-communist president in more than four decades. Democratic Forum leader Jozsef Antall was inaugurated today in a simple ceremony in Budapest after he and his 16-member Cabinet were approved by the Parliament. Antall says Hungary faces a difficult period of economic transition. He has asked opposition parties to ''give the government 100 days'' of good will to take steps toward a market economy.

Soviet President Gorbachev wants an extensive tour of Minneapolis and St. Paul when he comes to the United States in a few days, and that's exactly what he's going to get. The Soviet advance team arrived in St. Paul today to prepare for Gorbachev's six-hour visit on June 3rd. Governor Rudy Perpich says Gorbachev will speak to a group of business leaders from Minnesota and the Midwest.

In the debate over whether nature or nurture shapes a person, a group of scientists today came down firmly on the side of nature. The researchers report that genes apparently determine whether one is likely to go through life fat or thin. Two studies involving identical twins indicate genetic inheritance plays a greater role than overeating or childhood environment in developing beer bellies and bulging hips.

(MAY 23) UPI - A stunning defeat for the National Rifle Association... an apparent shift in the U-S stance toward Israel... and a possible continuation of most-favored-nation trade status for China. Those and other stories, next, from U-P-I.

The Senate today stood by its guns and voted 52-48 to retain a provision to ban nine military-type assault weapons.

43 Democrats and nine Republicans joined forces to O-K a three-year prohibition against five foreign-made semi-automatic weapons and the domestic manufacture of four semi-automatic rifles.

Supporters of the legislation hailed today's action as an important victory over the powerful National Rifle Association.

Ohio Democrat Howard Metzenbaum said he hopes- ''this sends a message to the N-R-A.''

But other supporters of the bill say their victory may be short-lived.

Delaware Democrat Joseph Biden told reporters after the vote that he anticipates the Republicans will try to veto the measure.

The semi-automatic weapons subject to the ban are often referred to as the ''weapons of choice'' of drug runners and violent criminals.

(MAY 23) UPI - The Bush administration reportedly is leaning toward continuing preferential trade treatment for China, and Secretary of State Baker today listed the reasons why.

Speaking at the White House, Baker said he did NOT want to anticipate the decision. But he noted that the Chinese recently released 211 political detainees, lifted martial law in Tibet, and indicated willingness to take further steps.

Baker also mentioned China's ''disappointing lack of progress'' in human rights. But he said the real issue is that a trade penalty would most hurt those in China who favor democracy and economic reforms.

The American business community is also putting strong pressure on the Bush administration to extend the favored trading status for China.

Officials say the announcement on continuing China's ''most favored nation'' trade status is delayed until tomorrow so key opponents and proponents in Congress can be notified in advance.

(MAY 23) UPI - U-S-Israeli relations appear to have suffered another setback. Speaking at the White House, Secretary of State Baker reversed a long-standing American policy and said Washington is ready to discuss the placement of a U-N observer team in Israel's occupied territories.

The Israeli government opposes the presence of foreign troops on its territory or any areas it occupies.

Baker's statement was backed up by word from other U-S officials that the Bush administration is prepared to support an international force in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank.

The U-N Security Council is expected to consider the issue when it meets Friday in a special session in Geneva. Palestinian leaders have pushed for such a force.

Violence against Arabs in the occupied territories in the past week has revived calls for a U-N force to bring about order and calm.

Health Secretary Sullivan wants cigarette vending machines eliminated, as a means of curbing children's access to tobacco.

Sources say the secretary will present sample legislation tomorrow calling for states to ban the machines. Sullivan will appear before the Senate Finance Committee, which is conducting a hearing on children's access to cigarettes.

Sullivan also will discuss a possible licensing system for cigarette sales.

One source said the ''beauty'' of Sullivan's plan is that states would enact it.

44 states and the District of Columbia already ban the sale of cigarettes to minors. But enforcement of such laws has been lax.

The tobacco industry strongly opposes the proposal to get rid of cigarette machines. A Tobacco Institute spokesman says most machines are in factories, workplaces and cocktail lounges where kids caN'T get to them.

(MAY 23) UPI - The rains have mostly died down, but floodwaters are still rising in parts of Arkansas, Texas and Indiana.

The National Weather Service says the Ouachita River is expected to crest tomorrow at 12 feet above flood stage in Camden, Arkansas. But emergency workers say the crest probably woN'T cause any worse problems.

An official of the Arkansas Department of Parks and Tourism says flood publicity threatens to dampen the state's two-BILLION dollar tourism season.

The official said the flooding is bad in spots, but it has left other areas ''compeletely UNaffected.''

Thunderstorms and showers soaked much of the western half of the nation today.

But in southern New Mexico, a 10-day-old fire that has charred 33-thousand (MAY 23) UPI - Democratic Senator Dennis DeConcini of Arizona... author of the assault weapon ban approved by the Senate today... says his Republican colleagues are ''considering'' a filibuster of the anti-crime bill now before the chamber.

Later, senators rejected a G-O-P amendment to the bill to limit the number of times a prisoner on death row can appeal. But the Republicans won approval to try again tomorrow with the hope they can change the vote overnight.

Also on Capitol Hill today...

Despite warnings of a possible presidential veto, the House today added to the clean air bill a program to provide extended UNemployment aid to workers who lose their jobs because of increased pollution controls.

The House will vote tomorrow on a supplemental spending bill that includes the long-delayed 720-Million dollars in emergency aid to Panama and Nicaragua. Earlier, Democrats agreed NOT to hold up the money in a dispute over cutting military aid to El Salvador.

It looks as if the Bush administration will renew most-favored-nation trade status to China. U-S officials say the announcement, set for late today, was delayed until tomorrow so key members of Congress can be notified in advance.

Israel says it continues to oppose the idea of sending a U-N observer force to the violence-wracked occupied territories. Earlier today, Secretary of State Baker said the United States is ready to discuss sending such a force to the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The territories were calmer today than in the days following Sunday's killing of seven Arab workers by an Israeli man. In neighboring Jordan, officials also reported relative calm except for ''a few small demonstrations'' in some Palestinian refugee camps.

Witnesses in Nicaragua say one worker was killed and five wounded in a clash between Sandinista police and a group of sugar industry workers. The workers were marching to Managua yesterday to demand the dismissal of a sugar mill boss.

SAN JOSE, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Darien & Morra, an advertising and design agency based in San Jose, has added two new clients representing $1.6 million in annual billings: Taylor Made Office Systems Inc., Concord and Westech ExpoCorp., Santa Clara.

These new accounts bring the agency to over $12.3 million in annualized capitalized local billings. Darien & Morra recently merged with Campbell, advertising agency Darien & Dahl, to form an agency that services high profile consumer/retail as well as business-to-business clients.

Taylor Made Office Systems is the exclusive Bay Area distributor of Canon copiers. Darien & Morra has just produced hard-hitting, entertaining TV ads pitting Canon against Brand X (Big Manufacturer), in a Pepsi vs. Coca-Cola showdown.

Darien & Morra is targeting this $500,000 campaign toward the high-end business market through the exclusive use of the Bay Area Cable Interconnect including such upscale cable channels as Arts & Entertainment USA, Lifetime and CNN.

Three 30-second TV spots focus on the special service and product benefits of Taylor Made and Canon copiers: Taylor Made's five-year warranty, unique service guarantees and Canon as the recipient of Datapro and Buyer's Laboratory awards for best quality and best copier of the year.

Westech ExpoCorp., premier leader in career expos, covering the Western United States, develops and produces 25 job/career fairs annually. For the first time, Fortune 1000 executives, not just employment managers, were targeted in a high profile, direct mail campaign.

The multiphase direct mail campaign highlighted the unique benefits of recruiting at a Westech event vs. the more conventional methods of recruitment.

The promotion was unique to the normally conservative recruitment marketplace and achieved an outstanding 20 percent response rate. It is expected to significantly expand Westech's local client base and will be used in different regions throughout the United States.

The campaign was executed through a series of provocative, self-mailing, full-length posters, culminating with a customized package containing an invitation on a ''silver'' platter. There isn't a chief executive officer alive that hasn't waited for an invitation on a silver platter, so Darien & Morra didn't hold back. The invitation was to a special presentation and luncheon.

''We believe in an individualized and clever strategic campaign tailored to each client and their needs. Regardless of the medium, we are able to convey simple yet powerful messages with a fresh, creative approach,'' noted Frank Darien, president and founder of Darien & Morra.

''Our newest clients confirm Darien & Morra's strategic expansion in servicing high profile and fast-growing retail and consumer accounts based in Silicon Valley.''

When the restructuring of Carl's Jr. in Arizona is completed, a total of 37 Carl's Jr. Restaurants will be in operation in the state. Nine company-owned restaurants (seven in Phoenix, two in Tucson) were closed following the company's April 12 earnings announcement for the past fiscal year, which stated the company's intent to restructure its Arizona operations.

Employees of the closed locations were transferred, if they desired, to other Carl's Jr. Restaurants nearby.

More than 540 Carl's Jr. Restaurants -- owned, operated, franchised or licensed by Carl Karcher Enterprises -- are located in California, Arizona Nevada, Oregon and Japan.

WASHINGTON, DC (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Researchers at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory have developed a revolutionary new technique for studying the effects of extraordinarily small amounts -- as little as a single molecule -- of cancer causing chemicals on DNA and other molecules in cells.

The technique may one day help scientists perfect more effective anti-cancer drugs and determine the safety of commonly used chemical compounds.

According to laboratory biologist Ken Turteltaub, the new procedure, which uses an ultra-sensitive instrument called an accelerator mass spectrometer (AMS), allows scientists to monitor extremely small quantities of carcinogens, labeled with radioactive carbon-14, as they interact with DNA and other cellular molecules.

''This is a major improvement in sensitivity over that which is now possible in the laboratory,'' said Turteltaub, who described the findings of his research team to scientists attending the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research.

''With this new technique, it becomes possible to study the effects of cancer-causing chemicals using quantities that more closely approximate real-life situations,'' he added.

The technique is remarkable because it is several orders of magnitude more sensitive than existing laboratory procedures, which require relatively large quantities of a compound to produce a measurable effect.

Turteltaub, a biomedical research scientist, developed the new procedure with an interdisciplinary team of biologists and physicists, including Jay Davis, director of the laboratory's Center for Accelerator Mass Spectrometry.

''Accelerator mass spectrometry separates, identifies and counts small numbers of different varieties, or isotopes, of the same element with great accuracy. AMS has been used by scientists in a wide range of research applications for a number of years,'' said Davis.

Davis notes that AMS was originally developed as a research tool for archaeologists and geoscientists who use it to count long-lived but rare isotopes of commonly occurring elements such as carbon, calcium, chlorine and iodine to determine the age of ancient materials.

DENVER (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Crown Resources Corp. Thursday announced it has signed an option agreement to form a joint venture with Centurion Mines Corp. (Utah) to acquire a 60 percent interest in the mineral rights on approximately 145,000 acres in central and western Utah.

Crown's initial commitment of $340,000, which includes an aggressive drilling campaign, must be spent before Aug. 31, 1990.

The option covers eight exploration areas, seven of which are in the Utah Gold Belt. The Utah Gold Belt is a major 60 mile long north-south mineralized trend. This trend has produced over 23 million ounces of gold and 625 million ounces of silver worth over $12 billion at today's prices.

Principal mines include Kennecott's operating Bingham copper/gold mine and Barney's Canyon gold mine, American Barrick's operating Mercur gold mine and the Tintic District which has produced 3 million ounces of gold and 310 million ounces of silver.

Most of the 225 square miles of properties lie throughout the Utah Gold Belt and cover much of the Tintic District, a large area immediately north of the Mercur Mine, and areas near the Bingham and Barney's Canyon mines.

The agreement calls for Crown to spend $4 million over a four year period to earn a 60 percent interest in four of the eight exploration properties. Crown will release two lower priority properties during each of the first two years to that all expenditures during the last two years of the four year earn-in period will be focused on the four highest potential properties.

Crown will also make a $75,000 private placement into Centurion for 150,000 shares and 750,000 warrants allowing Crown to buy 750,000 additional shares of Centurion at 60 cents per share.

Chris E. Herald, executive vice president of Crown, stated, ''This is the type of property situation that has built Crown into one of the premier exploration companies. With Centurion's properties, we have become the largest land owner in this highly mineralized trend.

Crown is listed on the NASDAQ National Market System under the trading symbol CRRS and on the Vancouver Stock Exchange under the symbol CRO.

PHOENIX (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - At its 1990 annual meeting of stockholders, Phoenix-based America West Airlines (NASDAQ:AWAL; PSE:AWA) announced that it has applied for a certificate of public convenience and necessity to provide service from Honolulu to Taipei, Taiwan, Republic of China and Hong Kong, with direct and connecting service from the carrier's ''superhub'' at Phoenix and Las Vegas.

America West hopes to begin this new service in late 1990. The announcement was made by Edward R. Beauvais, chairman and chief executive officer of the company.

''Today, America West filed for route authority to provide international air transportation to Taipei and Hong Kong from Honolulu,'' he stated. ''We intend to offer three weekly round trips utilizing the Boeing 747 aircraft. We will take delivery of two 747s this year, enabling the company to operate this service as well as the Honolulu-Nagoya service for which we are currently seeking Department of Transportation authority.'' Beauvais noted that America West's proposed Taipei/Hong Kong service will require the use of only one aircraft, thus leaving the other 747 available for future Pacific Rim service. The carrier anticipates the DOT to award the Nagoya route in late 1990.

''We are confident that the employee-owners of America West will make the transition, to provide new Pacific Rim service, with unequalled efficiency '' Beauvais said. ''We have not only survived, but have succeeded in an environment that has seen fierce fare wars, a merger 'epidemic' and the formation of what amounts to monopolies in many markets. America West's employees have exceeded expectations at each hurdle and we all look forward to the challenges of the future.''

America West operates a modern, fuel efficient all-Boeing fleet of 92 aircraft including 747s, 757s, 737s and de Havilland Dash 8s. The average age of the carrier's fleet is approximately six years. America West flies to nearly 60 destinations from coast-to-coast with daily service to Hawaii and western Canada.

SANTA ROSA, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - In ceremonies conducted this morning, Grumman Aerospace presented its Sterling Award to Microsource Inc. as the Small Business Subcontractor of the Year 1990.

The event was marked by a plaque awarding presentation before all of the Microsource employees at its Santa Rosa facility.

In making the award, Bernhard Laib, F-14 procurement manager for Grumman, and Lee MacNamara, subcontracts manager, said Microsource was selected as number one out of 5,700 small business suppliers.

Laib, in a letter to Mr. Richard Hejmanowski, president of Microsource, said: ''the selection process began with your company receiving the F-14 Program Procurement nomination, followed by the Selection Committee review of nominations from the entire Grumman Corporate Procurement Operation. Your record, quite frankly, spoke for itself.

''The turn-around in delivery performance over the past fifteen months has been superb, most significantly in the area of throughput. Grumman has been pleasantly surprised by Microsource's ability to meet and sustain monthly hardware quotas that one year ago were believed to be unattainable.

''Further, Grumman has come to expect a high degree of professionalism in its dealings with Microsource, whether it be in conducting negotiations, or in handling the day to day administrative and business aspects of our relationship, or even supporting Grumman in its congressional efforts last year. That sense of professionalism is quite noted and highly regarded by Grumman personnel.''

The award was accepted in behalf of Microsource and its employees by Ganesh Basawapatna, chairman, and Hejmanowski.

A privately held company, Microsource manufactures microwave signal generation and filtration components and subsystems for both commercial and military applications. Founded in 1981, the company employs 190 people.

RANCHO BERNARDO, CA (MAY 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Edward T. Maggio Ph.D., president and chief executive officer of Synbiotics Corp. (NASDAQ:SBIO) Thursday announced the operating results for Synbiotics fourth quarter and fiscal year ended March 31, 1990.

For the fourth quarter, total revenues increased by 79 percent to $3,152,000. Product revenues of $2,373,000, which increased by 230 percent over last year, represented 75 percent of total revenues. The net loss for the quarter dropped by 65 percent from $1,651,000, for last year's fourth quarter to only $581,000, for this year.

In commenting on the dramatically improved quarter, Maggio stated that, ''the quarter's results reflect the impact of the major strategic redirection and restructuring which the company undertook in the second quarter of fiscal 1990.''

For the current fiscal year, revenues increased 17 percent to a record $8,585,000, compared with revenues for the prior year of $7,305,000. A net loss for the year was incurred of $3,980,000, or 83 cents per share, compared with a loss the prior year of $3,627,000, or 79 cents per share.

Revenues derived from the sale of products increased substantially during the year to $6,106,000, compared with product revenues the prior year of $2,394,000. Maggio noted that the increase was primarily due to ''the strong growth of the company's animal health business. This growth is in line with our previously announced objectives of (1) establishing profitability in the company's core veterinary products business and; (2) creating additional shareholder value through the formation and separate funding of our UniSyn Fibertec and ImmunoPharmaceutics subsidiaries.''

Maggio noted that ''the company is well on in its way towards achieving the goals of corporate profitability while, at the same time, continuing to explore market applications for its novel human drug discovery technology and proprietary mammalian cell culture technology.''

Synbiotics is a leader in the development and manufacture of high-technology veterinary therapeutic and diagnostic products. Through wholly owned subsidiaries, the company also develops and manufactures novel human pharmaceutical compounds.

SCOTTS VALLEY, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Seagate (NASDAQ:SGAT) Thursday announced that it has further expanded into the Eastern European marketplace, already receiving over 3 million dollars' worth of sales orders from East Bloc countries since export license requirements were lifted for the company last week.

Seagate believes that this event makes it the first disc drive manufacturer to receive confirmation that several of its 3.5-inch and 5.25-inch hard disc drives meet the technical criteria for decontrol.

The relaxation of export controls for Seagate is an event for which the company has long prepared. ''We already have OEM agreements in Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Poland, and are in the advanced stages of negotiation with agencies in the Soviet Union,'' said Robert Martell, Seagate's vice president of international sales and marketing.

''In addition, two of our distributors have been selling in the East Bloc countries ever since Seagate received the deregulation notice from the United States Department of Commerce.''

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Adobe Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:ADBE) announced Thursday that operating results for the fiscal 1990 second quarter ending June 1, 1990 are expected to be lower than previously anticipated.

Royalty information received recently by the company indicates that product shipments from several OEM customers are down for the quarter from previous expectations.

Revenue from Apple Computer, the company's largest customer, appears to be down due to reduced product shipments from the prior quarter by approximately 23 percent. In addition, two other significant customers are experiencing reduced shipments due to product transition and delays in shipments of new products.

Based on information currently available, Adobe expects revenue and earnings for the second quarter to be lower than current analysts' estimates, with revenue in the range of $32,000,000 to $35,000,000 and earnings per share in the range of 27 cents to 35 cents per share.

Based upon information that Adobe has received recently from our OEMs and upon our planned product introductions, the company anticipates results in the third and fourth fiscal quarters will improve over those in the second quarter. However, Adobe expects overall fiscal 1990 revenue and earnings to be below current analysts' estimates.

The company expects to maintain its strong position in the industry over the long-term with the upcoming release of PostScript Level 2, the first major update of the PostScript language since its introduction over five years ago, and the recent announcement of several new PostScript controllers that offer an expanded price/performance range for PostScript printers.

In addition, Adobe expects new OEM agreements to be announced in the third quarter with revenue from these agreements anticipated in fiscal 1991.

In the second half of fiscal 1990, the company plans to introduce a PostScript cartridge for Hewlett-Packard's LaserJet II printer along with add-on outline font cartridges for this printer. Adobe also plans to introduce a Windows 3.0 compatible version of the Adobe Type Manager software first introduced for the Macintosh in the Fall of 1989.

Adobe Systems Inc., founded in 1982 by Dr. John Warnock and Dr. Charles Geschke, is headquartered in Mountain View.

Adobe is the developer of PostScript, the industry-standard page description language for electronic printing and publishing and Display PostScript, a device-independent graphics software component for computer displays.

In addition, the company develops and markets a complete line of application software programs, including the award-winning Adobe Illustrator 88 and Adobe Type Manager, Adobe Photoshop, Adobe TypeAlign, Adobe Type Reunion, the Adobe Type Library and the Smart Art graphics-effects library. Revenues for fiscal 1989 were over $121 million.

KANSAS CITY, MO (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Many military personnel located around the world will be able to call loved ones for free this Memorial Day weekend thanks to US Sprint and the Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS).

US Sprint, the nation's third-largest long-distance carrier and the only one to offer a holiday calling program to service personnel around the world, will offer the service starting at 12:01 p.m. (EDT) on Friday. It will conclude Monday evening at 11:59 p.m. (PDT).

The free calling system is the result of a long-standing joint effort of US Sprint and MARS. Military personnel stationed in foreign locales can call loved ones using a combination of radio and US Sprint's all-digital, fiber-optic network.

EVENDALE, OH (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Japan Airlines announced earlier that it will continue to specify GE Aircraft Engines' CF6-80C2 high bypass turbofan engine to power a total of 20 firm, 34 option Boeing 747-400 aircraft in the largest order ever for CF6 engines, with a potential value in excess of $1.8 billion.

The airline announced the purchase of 20 new 747-400 aircraft, in addition to the 20 aircraft previously ordered, and added an additional 34 options, bringing its total CF6-80C2-powered 747-400 fleet, in service and on order to 74 aircraft at a value to GE of $3.18 billion.

This order, which would involve nearly 300 engines plus spares if all options are exercised, follows on the heels of a 1987 order for -80C2 engines to power five 747-400s, which were delivered earlier this year and have been in revenue service since early April.

The airline will take delivery of the first five aircraft of the new order in the third and fourth quarters of this year. Delivery of the remaining aircraft, including the options, will extend through 1999.

JAL intends the new 747-400s to serve as the mainstay of its fleet through the 1990s and into the next century, enabling the airline to meet its forecasted 6 percent annual growth rate to maintain its competitive stance in the rapidly growing Asian market.

Japan Airlines operates the world's largest 747 fleet and is noted for having one of the most technically superior fleets in the industry. The airline selected the -80C2 after conducting extensive engine evaluations.

The -80C2 has been selected to power the majority of all 747-400s in service and on order, with 149 firm and 107 option aircraft purchased by airlines worldwide.

The CF6-80C2, rated at 57,900 pounds takeoff thrust for the 747-400, has a range from 52,500 to 61,500 pounds. It is the highest thrust engine currently available. GE has developed a higher thrust version of the -80C2, the CF6-80E1, rated at 72,000 pounds, which is scheduled to enter service on the new Airbus A330 in 1994.

The CF6-80C2 has established one of the best reliability records in the industry since entering service in late 1985 and has become the hallmark for today's high thrust, high bypass engines. While logging more than 2.5 million flight hours, the CF6-80C2 has achieved an in-flight shutdown rate of .007, which translates to one engine-caused in-flight shutdown every 150,000 flight hours.

The engine's engine-caused shop visit rate is equivalent to one visit every 8,200 flight hours. To date, more than 1,600 CF6-80C2 installed engines have been placed on firm order, with an additional 850 options by 57 airlines worldwide.

In addition to this order, 66 additional CF6-80C2-powered aircraft (188 installed engines) have been ordered to date in 1990, including 23 747-400s ordered by KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, Lufthansa, Varig and Thai International.

Additional orders include A310-300s purchased by Aeroflot, Emirates, Trans European, Lufthansa, Hapag-Lloyd and International Lease Finance Corp.; McDonnell Douglas MD-11 aircraft for Federal Express and American Airlines; and Boeing 767s for ILFC, Qantas, Piedmont, Gulf Air and Canadian Airlines International.

With this order, Japan Airlines will continue to be the world's largest foreign purchaser of American goods and services.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Adobe Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:ADBE) Thursday announced the PostScript Cartridge, the first retail PostScript interpreter offered directly from Adobe, and two complementary Adobe font software cartridges.

Now for the first time HP LaserJet Series II printer owners can have the industry-standard PostScript software from Adobe at an affordable price. In addition to the 35 fonts included in the PostScript Cartridge, the Adobe font software cartridges offer a wide variety of Adobe typefaces at less than half the price of purchasing them individually.

''The new PostScript Cartridge from Adobe is a great solution for LaserJet II users -- they can now upgrade their printer to get all the benefits of PostScript software, including access to the huge Adobe Type Library, at a very aggressive price,'' said Dave Barrow, director of business software, Egghead Discount Software. ''We think the product will be a winner.''

Although there are currently several HP LaserJet Series II upgrade solutions available, purchasing Adobe's cartridge offers many advantages.

1) Adobe offers the only true industry-standard PostScript interpreter and Adobe font software, eliminating compatibility worries.

2) The PostScript Cartridge is significantly faster than other cartridges currently available. Adobe's preliminary tests have shown the new cartridge to be from 1.5 to three times faster than competitors.

3) Adobe provides the most up-to-date PostScript language technology. The new PostScript Cartridge is the only cartridge available to HP LaserJet Series II customers using the popular Adobe Type Manager rasterizing capabilities.

4) Adobe's cartridge is the only one to also provide screen fonts. This is especially important to Microsoft Windows and Ventura Publisher users, who prefer to see the same fonts on their screen as in their printed output.

5) The new easy-to-use font software cartridges offer direct PostScript language compatibility with a wide selection of display and popular typefaces from Adobe.

''The PostScript Cartridge not only reinforces our commitment to the PC marketplace, it is also a big step towards reaching our goal of making PostScript software available -- and affordable -- to a wider group of users,'' said John Warnock, chairman and chief executive officer, Adobe Systems.

''Combined with the PostScript cartridges sold by HP, virtually every LaserJet user will have access to the benefits of PostScript software.''

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - BankAmerica is back, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer A. W. Clausen said in remarks prepared for the corporation's annual meeting here Thursday.

''BankAmerica has the capital resources, market position, management talent, employee strength, operational muscle and global reach to employ in the service of our shareholders, customers and communities,'' Clausen said.

''Our future is based on the progress and direction established during the past three-and-one half years,'' he said. During that period, ''we have refined our strategic course, rebuilt our earnings, cleaned up our credit portfolios, and restored our capital base,'' he said. ''Most importantly, we have reestablished our credibility and reputation in the financial market place.''

Clausen said that 1989 earnings of $1.1 billion were the highest in BankAmerica's history. This number, he said, was especially significant since ''it represented a swing of more than $2 billion from the net loss of $955 million reported in 1987.''

Clausen detailed improvement in earnings over the past three years: increased net interest income, reduced non-interest expense, improvements in the credit portfolio, reductions in non-accrual assets, and strengthened capital ratios.

''The numbers are there. As Casey Stengel once said, 'You could look it up!' We've come a long way in a very short time,'' Clausen said. ''BankAmerica is rapidly becoming an excellent bank.''

However, he said, banks with superior performance meet the criteria for excellence ''with reasonable consistency, over time. Going forward, that is our objective.''

Clausen said that the corporation's ''much-strengthened capital base gives us a future full of options -- it provides us the flexibility to take advantage of profitable new market opportunities as they occur, and it gives us the ability to grow and expand in line with our corporate strategy.''

Looking forward, Clausen said, ''The nineties will be perhaps the most competitively demanding and economically rigorous decade any of us have seen,'' but that he is ''absolutely confident that BankAmerica is equal to the challenges ahead.''

Clausen, who retires at the conclusion of the annual meeting, noted that he had spent virtually all his adult life -- more than 35 years -- working for the bank and that he has never been ''more confident in BankAmerica's future than I am at this very moment. That makes the leaving much less difficult.''

ANAHEIM, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - A compact, efficient and potentially practical source of blue laser light with output power and optical properties attractive to a wide range of applications has been developed by IBM scientists at its Almaden Research Center in San Jose, Calif.

Such a light source has been long sought because it could lead to optical data storage devices operating at about four times present storage densities or play an integral part in other applications such as color displays and chemical analysis.

The new laser device is made entirely with solid state materials, which usually result in more compact and reliable lasers than those requiring gases or liquid dyes. Its key features are its 10 percent efficiency in converting electricity into blue light -- at least five times more efficient than previous devices -- and its ability to produce stable, low-noise output that can be focused to diffraction-limited spots.

William J. Kozlovsky, research staff member, and Wilfried Lenth, manager of advanced lasers, described their achievement Thursday afternoon at the Conference on Lasers and Electro-Optics meeting in Anaheim this week at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Optical disks store information as a coded pattern of marks. Current devices use highly efficient and reliable infrared diode lasers to write marks as small as 0.8 microns in diameter. (A micron is a millionth of a meter). Because it has a shorter wavelength, blue light can be focused to a much smaller spot -- 0.4 microns in diameter -- and thus could permit optical disks to hold about four times more data than is possible today.

No one has found a way to make a compact and efficient blue laser directly so the IBM scientists used a technique called frequency doubling to convert infrared light into blue light.

The scientists pass infrared laser light from a diode laser through a tiny 1/4-inch-long potassium niobate crystal specially prepared to double the frequency -- which is the same as halving the wavelength -- of a narrow color range of light passing through it.

In their new device, Kozlovsky and Lenth converted infrared light from a high-power diode laser developed at IBM's Zurich Research Laboratory from a wavelength of 856 nanometers (infrared) to 428 nanometers, which is blue. (A nanometer is a billionth of a meter).

Lenth said this laser device operates more efficiently than any before it, because the researchers designed and used a new electrical feedback system. This electronic circuit analyzes a small fraction of the infrared light from the diode laser and adjusts the electrical current feeding the diode accordingly for precise control of its infrared output frequency.

Mirrors deposited on the ends of the rectangular crystals greatly increase the efficiency of the color conversion by directing the infrared light into a ricocheting triangular ''ring'' path within the crystal. As a result, some 50 percent of the infrared light entering the crystal is eventually converted into blue light. After taking into account the 40 percent efficiency of the diode laser and other light lost in the optics, the system's overall electrical efficiency is about 10 percent -- very high for any laser system, much less one emitting a blue beam.

The scientists believe further development will result in even greater efficiencies. ''We may even be able to achieve an overall 20 percent electrical efficiency by optimizing the optics design,'' Lenth said.

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 25) BUSINESS WIRE - First Republic Bancorp Inc. (ASE/PSE:FRC), a San Francisco-based financial institution, Thursday announced it has established a new lending subsidiary in Las Vegas.

First Republic Mortgage Inc., a newly created Nevada corporation, will specialize in the financing of apartment buildings, small commercial projects and single-family tract home developments.

In making the announcement, James H. Herbert II, president and chief executive officer of First Republic Bancorp Inc., commented that the creation of a Las Vegas operation reflects First Republic's view of the continuing strength of the Las Vegas economy.

''We will be filling a void in the Las Vegas area created as the enactment of new banking legislation forced many traditional banks and savings and loans to curtail their real estate lending activities,'' he said.

First Republic Bancorp is a publicly traded company with assets of $550 million and a legal lending limit of over $8 million. Its two other subsidiaries operate in San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, it posted a profit of $1.1 million.

Herbert indicated First Republic has been extremely successful focusing its real estate lending efforts in only selected geographical locations. ''Our success comes from the fact that we keep our business simple,'' he said. ''We operate where we have detailed knowledge of the local marketplace and a team of experienced professional lending specialists.''

Herbert also announced that James J. Baumberger, a 24-year veteran of the Las Vegas savings and loan industry, will spearhead First Republic Bancorp's new Las Vegas subsidiary. Baumberger was formerly the president of Atlantic Financial Savings.

He is also a past president of the Nevada Mortgage Bankers Association and the Las Vegas Jaycees and is currently a member of the Southern Nevada Home Builders Association and the Las Vegas Board of Realtors.

WALNUT CREEK, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Central Banking System (CBSI) reported Thursday on several items of interest to the company's stockholders.

As previously announced by Bank of the West, CBSI successfully closed the sale of its former subsidiaries, Central Bank and CB Insurance Agency, to Bank of the West on May 18, following the approval of the sale by CBSI shareholders on May 17.

The company's board of directors met today to discuss the process of liquidation. The board also received the resignation of Donald E. Weyant, who has accepted employment with Bank of the West, and Grace H. Foster, who has decided to retire.

The board directed management to initiate all operational, legal and regulatory steps necessary to liquidate and dissolve the corporation as expeditiously as possible.

Management was directed by the board to continue the process of marshalling all assets and assessing contingent and actual assets and liabilities.

Bruce E. Moyer, chief financial officer, reported that the sale of Central Bank and CB Insurance Agency resulted in the net proceeds of $40,779,809 of which $27,471,166 has been or is expected to be used to retire the company's outstanding debt and other contractual obligations.

At this time, approximately, $13,411,645 (including $108,002 of cash previously on hand), has been invested in short term money market instruments to earn money for shareholders pending ultimate distribution.

CBSI also announced, however, that since last week's shareholders meeting, the company has become aware that a class action lawsuit has been filed alleging certain securities violations and corporate mismanagement.

Although the company has not been served as yet, this suit plus the threat of additional litigation, combined with the indemnification responsibilities which may require the company to bear the costs of such litigation, have led the board to conclude, upon advice of counsel, that the extent of liabilities cannot be accurately assessed at this time.

As a consequence, the board has determined that it will be necessary to delay any distribution to shareholders pending further clarification.

In this connection, the board authorized outside legal counsel to assess these contingent liabilities and to determine how they can best be addressed promptly to the benefit of all shareholders rather than any specific class or group of shareholders.

Finally, the board authorized its Executive Committee to explore the possibilities of obtaining new outside directors to assist the board with the liquidation process in a prompt and efficient manner.

FREMONT, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - VeloBind Inc. (NASDAQ:VBND) Thursday introduced the first in a line of patented new products that the company says will broaden its applications in the binding marketplace.

The new machine, DocuBind, features a heavy-duty three-hole punch on one side, and on the other, a 19-hole punch and plastic-comb binding mechanism.

Priced at $149 retail, DocuBind offers three functions in one machine at less than half the cost of a standard comb binding system. ''This new product expands VeloBind's current applications and is a logical step toward our goal of being the world's leading supplier of binding solutions said Carl J. Swenson, VeloBind's president and chief executive officer.

''The plastic-comb punch and bind produces a document that lies perfectly flat, for applications such as training manuals. DocuBind's three-hole punch feature also serves the customer who uses three-ring binders for jobs that require constant and convenient updating.''

DocuBind punches up to 30 sheets at once with its three-hole punch, 15 sheets at a time with the 19-hole punch, and comb-binds up to 112 sheets using standard standard plastic combs up to 5/8-inch. The company will package its distinctive line of cover colors and materials for use with DocuBind and will offer combs to match.

DocuBnd will be sold through all of the company's distribution channels, with particular end user emphasis on the desktop publishing and traditional office supplies markets. ''Naturally we are very excited about the opportunities this new product will present,'' said Swenson.

VeloBind has manufactured and marketed professional-quality office binding systems for more than 20 years, and currently offers strip, comb and wire bound systems. The company's products are widely used by law offices, accounting firms, government agencies, schools and other organizations that require attractive, securely-bound documents.

ACTON, MA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Cheltonian International, the British developer of PANORAMA, has achieved significant breakthroughs, both in the Scandinavian marketplace and the contruction sector, with its first sale in Norway.

The order, from Selmer-Sande Entreprenoer (SEE), Norway's largest contracting company, includes 500 PANORAMA project management systems for use throughout SSE's 10 contracting companies.

FREMONT, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Logitech International, market leader in input technology, has posted a net income of $8.8 million (14.2M Swiss francs), based on consolidated worldwide revenues of $111.3 million (179.8M Sfr) for fiscal year 1990, which ended on March 31, according to Logitech president, Pierluigi Zappacosta.

Expressed in Swiss francs, the company's official reporting currency, this represents a 45 percent increase in revenue and a 26 percent increase in net income over fiscal year 1989.

Logitech attributes this strong performance to its expanded line of retail products, a continuing dominant position in the OEM (Original Equipment Manufacturer) mouse market and an increasing share of the hand-held scanner market. This latter market is expected to show a 24 percent

Compound Annual Growth Rate through 1994, according to BIS CAP International.

Earlier this year, Logitech spun off the Software Tools Group, creators of the award-winning MultiScope Debugger for developing OS/2 applications under IBM's Presentation Manager. The new company, MultiScope Inc., will focus on software development tools, while Logitech concentrates on its expanding line of ''desktop tools'' -- hardware and software products designed to enhance individual productivity at the desktop level.

Featuring dealer and end-user incentives, educational programs and support materials, and special pricing bundles, the campaign is expected to heighten awareness of the desktop tools concept. ''To maintain our leadership position in this product area and underscore our commitment to technological excellence, we have increased our R&D expenses to 7.6 percent,'' adds Zappacosta.

Founded in 1981, Logitech is an international company whose stock is traded on the Swiss Exchange. The company maintains manufacturing facilities in Fremont, Calif.; Hsinchu, Taiwan; and Cork, Ireland; and sales offices in major cities in the United States, Europe and the Far East.

NEW ORLEANS (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - At the International Communications Association exposition being held in New Orleans May 22-24, AT&T introduced the Cost Allocator multi-site call accounting system developed by MOSCOM Corporation.

Under the terms of a contract announced by MOSCOM on September 29, 1989, AT&T, then identified as a ''major telecommunications firm,'' agreed to license the Cost Allocator software and guaranteed to MOSCOM a minimum of $7.5 million in revenue by the end of 1992.

The AT&T Cost Allocator is a UNIX-based call accounting system that can collect information on incoming and outgoing calls from up to 255 dispersed sites. The Cost Allocator system processes and stores data on all call records transmitted from the remote sites and offers a wide variety of fixed format call accounting reports available on demand or by user defined schedules. An optional enhanced reporting module enables user designed reports.

The Cost Allocator is compatible with all major AT&T and non-AT&T PBXs and can accept standard or ISDN call records. The central processor for the system will be one of AT&T's 6386 WGS computers running UNIX System V software. AT&T offers three models of call collectors for the Cost Allocator system. These call collectors, including the Call Detail Recording Unit/small (CDRU/s) which is manufactured for AT&T by MOSCOM, store the call records generated by the remote site PBXs.

MOSCOM president, Albert J. Montevecchio, commented that, ''The introduction of the AT&T Cost Allocator is an important milestone for MOSCOM. It shows that AT&T considers call accounting to be an important part of their long term product plans. It also restates the confidence AT&T has in MOSCOM as a supplier. The reaction of ICA attendees to the product fully supports my expectation that the Cost Allocator will be a great success for both AT&T and MOSCOM.''

Ted Snydal, Systems Management Product Manager for AT&T's Business Communications Group, said, ''With costs increasing and budgets decreasing managing telecommunications expense is a high priority for our customers. Cost Allocator is a powerful tool in helping to bring those expenses under control.''

The Cost Allocator is available through AT&T in six model sizes ranging from 500 to over 10,000 telephone extensions. Retail prices for the basic Cost Allocator software range from $8,900 to $88,500, depending upon model size.

MOSCOM Corporation (NASDAQ NMS:MSCM) is the world's leading producer of telephone cost management products for single and multiple site telecommunications systems.

Cost Allocator is a trademark and UNIX is a registered trademark of AT&T.

SANTA CLARA, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Valisys Corp. Thursday announced that Martin Marietta Missile Systems has selected the IBM version of its CIM software products.

Martin Marietta will use the Valisys software to verify the geometric dimensioning and tolerancing on engineering drawings, create worst-case software models to ensure that separate mating parts will assemble correctly and create generic inspection paths for the eventual download to coordinate measuring machines (CMMs).

Martin Marietta is the first IBM customer to complete the Valisys Early Start Program (ESP). The Valisys software will run on IBM systems, integrated with the CATIA CAD/CAM (computer-aided design/computer-aided manufacturing) software. In October 1989, IBM and Valisys Corp. jointly announced that the Valisys software is part of IBM's CIM Advantage family of products.

According to Valisys Corp., Martin Marietta took part in the Early Start Program co-managed by IBM and Valisys. Under this program, Martin Marietta was provided with the Valisys sofrware before it became generally available for all IBM customers.

The Valisys software was initially installed at Martin Marietta Missile System, Orlando, Fla., in December 1989. After using the software for four months as part of the ESP, Martin Marietta elected to implement the software.

Martin Marietta will run the Valisys: Design Verification, Valisys: Tolerance Analysis and Valisys: Quality Engineering modules on an IBM mainframe system, and will eventually run the Valisys: Inspection and Valisys: Process Control modules on an IBM PS/2 system on the plant floor.

Valisys Corp. develops Valisys software and provides customer support and consulting services. Valisys is a set of interconnectable software modules spanning design engineering, manufacturing engineering, quality assurance, production and inspection.

Valisys modules can be combined to solve a series of manufacturing problems not previously addressed by CAD/CAM technology, that can be traced to an inability to quickly and accurately specify, communicate and adhere to tolerance specifications. The significant increase in revenues and net profits during the year ended Jan. 31, 1990 was in large part attributable to the sale by the company of its non-prescription smoking cessation program ''Smo-quits'' to Amway Corp. Sales of the company's medical food products remained strong throughout the year and with the introduction of the new weight management program, Nutrition Plus in January 1990 at a seminar and the recent seminar in May 1990 the company believes its medically oriented moderate weight management program with its emphasis on disease prevention and health promotion is well positioned to take advantage of the trend away from non-medical and fasting weight loss programs. CHESTNUT HILL, MA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Designs Inc. (NASDAQ:DESI), operator of specialty retail stores that sell exclusively Levi Strauss & Co. clothing and accessories, announced Thursday its financial results for the first quarter ended April 28, 1990.

Sales for the quarter rose to $19.6 million, compared with $12.2 million a year ago, a 61 percent increase. Comparable store sales, those 59 stores open a full fiscal year, increased 8 percent.

Gross margin rate (including the costs of occupancy) increased to 25 percent compared with 23 percent a year ago. This increase was made possible by the favorable impact the stronger sales have on our fixed occupancy costs as a percent to sales. These factors resulted in an operating loss for the quarter of $1.0 million compared with a loss of

Net loss for the quarter was $1.0 million, or 20 cents per share compared with a net loss of $1.1 million, or 22 cents per share for the first quarter last year.

In reporting the results, Geoffrey M. Holczer, treasurer and chief financial officer, noted: ''The reduced net loss in the first quarter reflects the impact of the merchandising strategy we implemented last fall the continuing success of the outlet stores and the improved performance of certain of our traditional stores.''

Designs Inc.'s 68 traditional stores and 26 outlet stores sell exclusively Levi Strauss & Co. clothing and accessories under the ''Designs exclusively Levi Strauss & Co.'' and ''Specials exclusively Levi Strauss & Co.'' names. BOISE, ID (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Albertson's Inc. announced record sales of $2.01 billion for the 13 weeks ended May 3, 1990, an increase of 10.8 percent over the $1.81 billion for the same period last year.

During the period, identical store sales increased 4.9 percent. Earnings for the first quarter increased 15.4 percent to $51.2 million, or 77 cents per share, compared to $44.4 million, or 66 cents per share, last year.

Warren E. McCain, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, stated: ''We're very pleased with the first quarter as the results were in line with our plan for the year. This was our first $2 billion sales quarter and our new distribution centers in Portland, Ore.; Sacramento, Calif.; and Fort Worth, Texas, are operating according to our plan.''

Gross margin increased to 23.00 percent from 22.72 percent for the same period a year ago. This increase was due primarily to the efficiencies realized from new distribution centers. Operating and administrative expenses, as a percent to sales, increased to 18.76 percent from 18.68 percent last year. This increase was due primarily to an increase in employee benefit expenses.

McCain further stated: ''Albertson's has continued its expansion plans with the opening of two combination units and two superstores for a total of four stores during the quarter. Major remodels were completed on eight stores and four older stores were closed during the quarter.''

On May 3, 1990, the company operated 523 retail food-drug stores in 17 western and southern states.

PONCE, PUERTO RICO (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Ponce Federal Bank F.S.B. (NASDAQ:PFBS) Thursday reported results for the 1990 first quarter that were in line with management's estimates, announced in a press release issued April 19.

At that time, the bank said that it anticipated net income of $275,000 to $300,000, or 5 cents to 6 cents per share.

For the quarter ended March 31, Ponce Federal Bank reported net income of $295,582, or 6 cents per share, compared to a year ago net loss of $3,128,343, or 61 cents per share.

The net loss reported a year ago was principally the result of a provision for loan losses of $5,543,758 as well as a $1 million reserve for assessed fines and penalties stemming from violations by the bank, in 1983 and 1984 of the currency and Foreign Transaction Reporting Act.

The $1 million penalty has since been overturned by the U.S. District Court and the reversal of the previously established reserve will be recognized as other income in the second quarter of 1990.

The net income reported in the 1990 first quarter reflects the impact of a $1,363,813 provision for possible loan losses.

In addition, as the bank stated in its press release on April 19, federal examiners from the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) requested (in April 1990) that the bank increase its allowance for loan losses as of March 31, 1990, by $5.4 million. The bank's management believes that such an increase in reserves is unnecessary and is considering whether to establish such reserves or to challenge the need for additional reserves.

No assurance can be given that, should the bank challenge the OTS request, that such challenge would be successful or that additional reserves would not be required.

Any increase in the allowance for loan losses would substantially affect the bank's results and cause the bank to restate the first quarter results reported herein.

The bank emphasized again however that, if the entire additional provision of $5.4 million requested were made by the bank, as of March 31, it would continue to exceed OTS regulatory capital requirements with tangible and core capital of 4.15 percent and 4.15 percent, respectively, of adjusted total assets and risk-based capital of 7.40 percent of risk-weighted assets.

Ponce Federal Bank F.S.B., the third largest thrift institution in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, is a federally chartered, full-service financial institution headquartered in the Southern Coastal City of Ponce.

The bank maintains an Island-wide network of 26 branches and executive offices in Ponce as well as Hato Rey, the financial center of metropolitan San Juan. Ponce Federal now serves 20 of Puerto Rico's 76 townships.

To carry out this transaction, PSI and an affiliate of EnCap Financial Services Inc., based in Dallas, have formed a partnership to acquire all out standing equity in Clajon.

PSI will provide $49 million of the $100 million required to fund the partnership and have a 49 percent interest in the transaction. The proceeds will be used to purchase the equity of Clajon Holdings LP and to provide further financial structuring of the transaction.

NEW CASTLE, IN (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Speaking to shareholders at the company's 1990 annual meeting, Paul W. Prior, chairman of the board of Ameriana Bancorp (NASDAQ/NMS:ASBI), Thursday announced that Ameriana's board of directors has voted to increase the quarterly dividend rate to 12 cents per share from the previous rate of 10 cents per share.

The new rate will become effective with the next payment on July 6, 1990, to shareholders of record on June 18, 1990.

Prior also announced that the Board has named Harry J. Bailey president of the company and its wholly owned subsidiary, Ameriana Savings Bank. Bailey previously served as executive vice president of the company and the bank, and he will continue as chief operating officer of both. Prior, who had held the title of president formerly, will continue as chairman and chief executive officer.

Bailey joined Ameriana Savings Bank in 1984 as executive vice president and chief operating officer. In 1987 he was appointed to the bank's board of directors and in 1989, in connection with the bank's reorganization as a holding company, was named to Ameriana Bancorp's board of directors. Bailey, an attorney, has been a consultant to financial institutions in the past and, for a number of years, served in the legal department and as an operations officer for savings institutions in the Chicago area.

In making the announcement concerning increased dividends, Prior noted that the prospects for 1990 were strengthened by recently reported first quarter results, which included a 22 percent increase in net income to $634,000, or 33 cents per share. ''We are very pleased with the performance of our core business thus far this year and anticipate that it will continue to grow steadily through the remainder of 1990,'' he said.

''This confidence in Ameriana's outlook and its strong capital position, which is equivalent to 13.3 percent of total assets, were key considerations in the board's decision to raise the dividend to 12 cents per share.''

Prior pointed out that this was the third increase in the company's dividend rate since dividends were first declared in November 1987.

In the formal business conducted at the meeting, shareholders re-elected three directors and ratified the appointment of Ernst & Young as the company's independent auditors for 1990. Re-elected to new three-year terms, expiring with the 1993 annual meeting of shareholders, were: G. William Bailey, Harry J. Bailey and Charles M. Drackett Jr. G. William Bailey was Advertising Manager for The Courier Times in New Castle prior to his retirement in 1984 and has served as a Director of Ameriana since 1970.

MORRISTOWN, NJ (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T announced a new system Thursday that will help telephone companies and other businesses protect their distributed computer networks during a disruption.

Designed by AT&T Bell Laboratories, the new system is called the CommVault(TM) Automatic Backup, Archive, and Recovery System (ABARS). ABARS is a fast and reliable automatic system for the backup and restoration of UNIX(R) System files onto and from optical disks. ABARS also provides users with a high capacity secure archive system.

ABARS backs up networked minicomputers including the AT&T 3B2 and 3B20, AT&T 6386 Workgroups, SUN(R) Microsystems, HP9000, and VAX(R) family of machines, running the UNIX(R) System, and connected via STARLAN 10, Datakit(R) II, or Ethernet TCP/IP local area networks.

ABARS consists of software stored on the fileserver and a unique storage device called an Optical Jukebox. The Optical Jukebox uses a robotic elevator to place optical disks into drives for storage or restoration. It also manages the back up activity for all fileservers on the network through a system controller.

Computer systems' managers can store and recover data using several unique features of ABARS. There are three types of back up features: Full Backup. Unlike the conventional magnetic tape systems that requires a time consuming full backup every week, with the ABARS algorithms, full backups are only needed every three to six months. Incremental Backup. A customer-defined backup feature, ABARS will automatically backup changed files only.

On-demand Backup. When faced with special circumstances, users can request immediate backup of files or file systems. A computer systems manager can invoke security features which will allow data sharing across the network, while preventing unauthorized access to files.

The Optical Jukebox will allow users access to data stored for several years and provides an on-line archive feature. ABARS also offers user-friendly commands for restoring the system's files.

The storage capacity of Optical Jukebox will vary depending on the company's computer configuration. ABARS is supported by training, documentation, and a 24-hour a day telephone hotline.

NORTH STONINGTON, CT (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Analysis & Technology Inc., a major supplier of submarine and antisubmarine warfare services (ASW) to the U.S. Navy plus training services to non-military markets, completed its 17th consecutive record fiscal year on March 31, 1990, with earnings up 9 percent on an 18 percent gain in revenues, A.T. Mollegen Jr., president and chief executive officer announced Thursday.

Record earnings of $3,545,000 for fiscal 1990 equaled $1.62 per share compared with earnings of $3,259,000, or $1.50 per share, in the previous year. Revenues for 1990 surged to $95,539,000 compared with $81,111,000 in fiscal 1989. Contributing $10,677,000 to 1990 revenues was the company's subsidiary, Applied Science Associates Inc. (ASA), acquired on June 1, 1989.

As anticipated, because its earnings were offset by the loss of interest income on funds used for the acquisition and by the amortization of goodwill related to the acquisition, ASA has not as yet contributed to net corporate earnings.

The company's primary business of providing engineering and technical services for the U.S. Navy's existing and planned nuclear submarines and ASW forces continued to expand in 1990, despite a general environment of defense budget cuts.

''Submarines and ASW are expected to provide growth opportunities to us throughout the 1990s,'' Mollegan commented. ''One driving reason for this '' he added, ''is the fact that over 40 countries, including many in the Third World, now have military submarines. This number is expected to increase throughout the next decade.

Submarines on both sides are capable of playing major roles in conflicts involving or between Third World nations, maintaining the importance of submarines and ASW for our Navy even though superpower tensions are being reduced.''

Mollegen added, ''Our training business subsidiary is doing superbly in both revenues and operating earnings. In addition, ASA is increasingly entering into joint bids with A&T for both DoD and non-DoD business. We continue to look very selectively for acquisitions outside the defense business.''

Shares of Analysis & Technology Inc. are traded in the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol ''AATI''.

BUFFALO, NY (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - National Fuel Gas Supply Corp., the pipeline subsidiary of National Fuel Gas Co., Thursday announced that a settlement offer was filed on May 23 with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) which encompasses three rate proceedings and its plan to become an open access pipeline.

This formalizes an agreement in principle reached earlier this month with the FERC staff. The settlement is subject to approval by the FERC and if approved, substantially as filed, would restore a significant portion of an $8.3 million charge made to National Fuel Gas Co.'s second quarter earnings because of the reevaluation of a refund liability pertaining to one of these rate cases.

Earnings for the company's second quarter had been reduced by $8.3 million or 29 cents per share, to increase the provision for refund associated with a rate increase which was effective, subject to refund, for the period from Jan. 1, 1987, to June 30, 1989.

A rate case had been filed in June 1986 and pursuant to FERC regulations, became effective Jan. 1, 1987, without FERC approval, but subject to refund pending a final decision. Since Jan. 1, 1987, the company has been estimating the potential refund liability related to this case and accruing a provision for refund plus interest on a current basis.

On April 25, 1990, the FERC issued a draft order with respect to these rates which differed substantially from the best information which previously had been available and the adequacy of the provision for refund was reevaluated.

A formal order was issued by the FERC on May 3, 1990, which was consistent with the draft order. Supply Corp. will file for rehearing of this order on June 1, 1990. If the FERC approves the settlement it would negate the need for the Commission to act on the rehearing request.

Subsequent to the receipt of the draft order and the announcement of second quarter earnings, a preliminary settlement was reached with the FERC staff which was formally filed today. Parties to the proceedings will have 30 days during which to comment on the terms of the settlement before the FERC can issue a final order. The company is hopeful of a final resolution of this matter this fiscal year.

IRVINE, CA (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - The Hong Kong government, in its largest single order of personal computers, has selected AST Research Inc. to install more than 1,500 386-based systems.

The purchase, valued at $6 million, marks the third consecutive time since 1987 that the government has selected AST for its office automation needs. The two-year contract will be handled through Swire Systems, AST's Hong Kong dealer.

Under the terms of the agreement, the government will purchase AST Premium 386SX/16 and Premium 386/25 computers. The systems are slated for the Royal Hong Kong Police Force, Immigration Department, Trade Department and Information Technology Services Department.

The personal computers will be used as stand-alone systems running a variety of standard applications including word processing, spreadsheets and database management.

The contract brings AST's installed base in government departments from more than 2,000 to nearly 4,000 personal computer systems. The relationship between AST and the Hong Kong government began in 1987 with the purchase of Premium/286 personal computers by the government's data processing agency.

The decision to select AST's systems was based in part on AST's patent-pending Cupid-32 architecture, which eliminates obsolescence in its Premium line of personal computers. Cupid-32 computer systems may be upgraded to higher-performing microprocessors with the simple exchange of an innovative plug-in processor card.

''The Hong Kong government selected AST because we were the only company offering systems that can be upgraded to the most powerful processors on the market,'' said Philip Wong, managing director of AST Asia. ''The success of AST computers in the government sector can be attributed to the company's commitment to the Pacific Rim region through its innovative products and dedicated customer support.''

AST is a leading worldwide manufacturer of high-performance computing solutions. The AST systems product line ranges from entry-level Bravo systems to the 386-based and i486 high-performance Premium line of personal computers, including the new EISA (Extended Industry Standard Architecture) bus architecture.

In a recent announcement, AST unveiled the first dual-compatible personal computer for the Japanese marketplace. The AST Dual SX/16 can run software designed for the Japanese NEC 9801 standard as well as the thousands of MS-DOS programs available for the Industry Standard Architecture-compatible computers. Thus, the breakthrough technology offers Japanese computer users the capability to conduct business using both standards with a single desktop computer.

LITTLE ROCK, AR (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - Worthern Banking Corp. (ASE:WOR) announced Thursday that the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis has approved its application to combine the resources of its individual bank trust departments throughout Arkansas into a new affiliate, Worthen Trust Co. Inc.

Worthen Banking Corp. affiliates included in the establishment of Worthen Trust Co. Inc. are First National Bank of Batesville, First National Bank of Camden, First State Bank and Trust Co. of Conway, The First National Bank in Harrison, First National Bank of Hot Springs, Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A. of Little Rock, National Bank of Commerce of Pine Bluff, Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Russeville and First State Bank of Springdale. Worthen Banking Corp.'s affiliate banks currently administer $1.7 billion in trust assets.

With the establishment of Worthen Trust Co. Inc., bank customers will continue to be served by their existing trust officers at their local bank. According to Curt Bradbury, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Worthen Banking Corp., the new company enables Worthen to continue its personal service while offering enhanced trust products and services to Worthen customers throughout the state.

''This is a unique opportunity for an Arkansas-based company to better compete with out-of-state financial competitors in the marketplace, broaden its customer franchise and expand its commitment to superior service,'' Bradbury said.

The formation of Worthen Trust Co. Inc. permits Worthen to consolidate the operational side of the trust departments in its affiliate banks and to expand its product development and service capability by combining the resources and expertise of its individual trust departments, Bradbury stated.

''This allows us to run a more efficient internal operation with better cost control while offering our customers a wider range of trust and investment opportunities from the convenience of their community bank,'' Bradbury said.

Mike Dowling, who served previously as senior vice president and trust division manager of the Worthen-affiliated First National Bank of Hot Springs, has been named president and chief executive officer of Worthen Trust Co. Inc. In addition to his bank responsibilities, James F. Stobaugh, president and chief executive officer of the National Bank of Commerce of Pine Bluff, will serve as chairman of the board of Worthen Trust Co. Inc.

''The new trust company represents an excellent opportunity for the banks in the Worthen system to increase their market penetration and offer better trust services to their local customers,'' Dowling said.

This enhanced service includes more timely account information and faster payments of income to trust beneficiaries, as well as trust investment products which were previously unavailable in many markets, Dowling said.

One such trust investment product is a sophisticated asset allocation model, which creates a custom-designed investment program based on a written assessment of the client's goals, Dowling said.

The company reported a net loss of $3.7 million or (eight cents) per share, compared to a first quarter 1989 loss of $1.1 million or (two cents) per share.

COLUMBUS, OH (MAY 24) BUSINESS WIRE - The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio (PUCO) Thursday trimmed $1.4 million from the rate increase it had previously granted Columbia Gas.

In ruling on a motion for rehearing, or reconsideration of the Commission's April 5 decision in the case, the PUCO was able to substitute lower actual price information for the higher price estimates which had been used in calculations. The reduction affects the company's working capital allowance for gas stored underground.

The average Columbia Gas customer, using 10 MCF per month, will see their bill drop from $51.21 to $50.63. The Commission ordered Columbia to file new tariffs, or rate and service schedules, reflecting today's decision by May 31, 1990.

Motions for rehearing in the Columbia Gas rate case were filed by the company, the City of Columbus, Industrial Energy Consumers and the Office of the Consumers' Counsel. In addition to the $1.4 million reduction, the Commission also questioned a $19,000 advertising expense. The PUCO will meet with the parties in case to determine whether the expense was included.

The Commission's April 5 decision had granted Columbia an increase of approximately $11.4 million. The company requested $43.9 million.

PUCO Chair Jolynn Barry Butler said, ''The rehearing in this case presented us with the opportunity to revise the pricing used in the original decision, saving Columbia customers a total $1.4 million. Customers should see that savings reflected in their July bills.''

In making rulings in rate cases, the Commission is required by Ohio law to aurhorize rates which are fair and reasonable to customers, while at the same time allowing the company the opportunity to meet expenses, pay interest on debts, and provide a reasonable return to stockholders.

PUCO decisions can be appealed to the Ohio Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON (MAY 24) COMTEX - A congressional resolution mandating the Federal Reserve Board to adopt and pursue a monetary policy aimed at achieving and maintaining near-zero inflation received an endorsement today from the nation's largest business group and a major banking association.

The resolution, introduced by Rep. Stephen L. Neal (D-N.C.), calls for the Fed to establish price stability as the primary objective of U.S. monetary policy, steadily eliminate inflation over a five-year period and continue policies that maintain price stability.

Critics of Neal's proposal warn the cost of wringing inflation out of the economy may result in a recession, higher unemployment and lower productivity. While top Fed officials have publicly supported the resolution, the Fed is under growing political pressure to avoid moves that might derail economic expansion, especially in an election year.

Kathleen Cooper, chief economist of Security Pacific National Bank and chairman of the economic advisory committee of the American Bankers Association, told a House Banking subcommittee on domestic monetary policy the long-term benefits of such legislation outweigh any short-term disadvantages.

"It is my opinion, and that of a majority of the members of the economic advisory committee, that the permanent benefits of focusing monetary policy on achieving near-zero inflation will be far greater than the temporary costs of winding down our current rate of inflation over the prescribed five-year period," Cooper said.

Richard W. Rahn, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, praised the legislation for establishing price stability as the Fed's top priority but warned it will not work unless it is strengthened. Rahn said the resolution should be amended as follows:

- Establish a monetary rule to limit Fed discretion and to govern the setting of monetary policy.

- Require the Fed to undertake all of its policy actions in public rather tha behind closed doors.

- Prohibit Fed intervention in foreign currency markets except in declared national emergencies.

- Commit Congress to restrain the rate of federal spending to no more than the rate of inflation over the next five years.

Cooper noted there would be numerous benefits from a non-inflationary monetary policy.

"Maintaining price stability will reduce uncertainty which also tends to lower interest rates," said Cooper. "Near-zero inflation will additionally tend to encourage savings and reduce current consumption. By reducing inflationary expectations and uncertainty, lower inflation will make longer-term investment more attractive."

However, she cautioned the price of achieving this goal would impose real costs on the economy.

"In the interim, economic growth would be slower, unemployment would be higher, and corporate profits would be strained," Cooper said.

Cooper added the industries which would be hit hardest are the one's which are highly leveraged.

"Since monetary policy works through restricting credit or raising its price, those industries most dependent on large volumes of credit would be hurt the most in transition," Cooper said. "The housing industry, commercial real estate -- sectors of our economy which are already under pressure -- and, perhaps agriculture would probably be most seriously affected."

Subcommittee chairman Neal took issue with Cooper's assessment.

"This legislation was recently endorsed by the American Farm Bureau Federation, the largest farm organization in the country, because the benefits for the agriculture community are enormous," Neal said. "As far as real estate, over the long-term I don't see any other industry which would would benefit more. Lower mortgage rates would make housing so much more available."

Both panelists emphasized any transitional costs would be eased if Congress and the administration were to simultaneously undertake other actions to ease inflationary pressures.

"Clearly, getting control of our large budget deficit will make the Federal Reserve's job easier," said Cooper.

"The cause of the budget deficit and a primary source of inflationary monetary policy is far too much government spending," said Rahn. "Spending as a portion of GNP is above 22 percent. Taxes as a share of GNP, at roughly 19.5 percent, are near their post-war high. A goal of 18 percent of GNP for both taxes and spending is more in line with a continuation of noninflationary peacetime expansion."

"Congress can legislate inflation," Neal said. "We have the tools to do it. All we lack is the will."

The first grenade killed one of two guards outside the municipal offices in Mamelodi black township near here, police spokesman Major Reg Crewe said, correcting an earlier report that none had been hurt in a grenade attack on the township's police station.

The second blast an hour later damaged Pretoria's Melrose House, where the Peace of Vereeniging (Union) to end the second Anglo-Boer war was signed in 1902.

HONG KONG (MAY 24) - Hong Kong's inflation remained close to the double digit level in April with prices 9.4 percent higher than in the same month last year, the government said Thursday.

Similar readings - 9.8 percent, 8.4 percent and 10 percent - were chalked up for the first three months of this year, according to official figures.

The April hike, mainly due to higher costs for tobacco, alcoholic drinks, transport and food, was in the government's Consumer Price Index "A" covering 50 per cent of urban households.

The inflationary trend, largely generated domestically, has been described as Hong Kong's top worry by some senior officials in the British colony.

Inflation ran at 10.1 percent in 1989, its highest in seven years.

The private-sector Hang Seng Consumer Price Index put the April rate of inflation at 10.6 percent. This index applies to 10 percent of urban housholds made up of higher-income families.

SEOUL (MAY 24) - South Korea's economy recovered briskly during the first quarter of the year, growing at an annual rate of 10.3 percent, compared to 6.2 percent in the same period last year, the central bank said Thursday.

The official report from the Bank of Korea said that the unexpectedly high economic growth during the January-March period was attributable to a booming construction sector coupled with a recovery in the manufacturing sector thanks to lessening labor unrest.

It said that construction grew at a massive 39.1 percent against 10.2 per cent a year before, and manufacturing growth nearly doubled to 7.1 percent.

The report said that the real gross national product (GNP) during the first quarter amounted to 28.448 trillion won (40.6 billion dollars), up 10.3 per cent from a year before.

The government has forecast that the growth rate this year would be about 6.5 to 7.0 percent, about the same as last year following three consecutive years of double-digit growth from 1986 to 1988.

Deputy Premier and Economic Planning Minister Lee Seung-Yun said that the latest upsurge in economic growth was mainly led by construction and domestic consumption, and he hoped for a sound and balanced growth centered on the manufacturing and particularly export-related industries.

According to the Trade and Industry Ministry, commodity exports rose by 3.8 percent last month to 4.966 billion dollars, bringing the aggregate total for January-April to 18.869 billion dollars, a mere 0.1 percent rise from the same period last year.

RIO DE JANEIRO (MAY 24) - Brazil will begin talks with its private bank creditors next month before making a formal proposal for renegotiating its foreign debt, the government said.

Jorio Dauster, Brazil's special ambassador for the foreign debt, said in comments published by Rio newspapers Thursday that the creditors would be invited to travel to Brasilia in June to begin the talks.

Mr. Dauster said the government wanted to hear the creditors' point of view "to elaborate our proposal on the basis of individual consultations."

He also said that technical mission from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) would arrive in Brazil during the second half of June to gather information for a report.

The formal proposal for renegotiating the foreign debt has to be approved ahead of time by the senate to comply with the constitution, said Mr. Dauster, who said he expected no problem in winning the approval of the senate.

Brazil, he said, would not pay interests due on its debt before concluding a global renegotiation of its foreign debt, the largest in the Third World at 114.7 billion dollars.

KUALA LUMPUR (MAY 24) - Malaysia's central bank, Bank Negara, said Thursday it would ask the High Court to place under receivership Eu Finance Bhd, one of four ailing finance companies under its supervision, Bernama news agency reported.

A central bank spokesman said the move, the first ever of its kind for a financial institution, was part of a restructuring scheme with the transfer of Eu Finance's assets and liabilities to Southern Finance Co Bhd.

"The Finance Minister has signed an order ... giving Bank Negara the authority to apply to the High Court to appoint a receiver to manage the whole of the business, affairs and property of Eu Finance," he said, adding that the bank's legal counsel was expected to file its application next week.

Eu Finance began operations here in 1959. The company, which has a paid-up capital of 8.42 million Malaysian dollars (3.12 million U.S.), came under central bank supervision in February 1987.

Eu Finance, badly hurt by non-performing loans, had an accumulated loss of about 88 million dollars (32.6 million U.S.) and a shortfall in shareholders' funds of another 75 million dollars (27.8 million U.S.) at the end of 1988.

The spokesman said Southern Finance would not incur any loss as the central bank would extend a soft loan of 75 million dollars (27.8 million U.S.) to it to top the shortfall in shareholders funds.

In the event of any possible losses, Bank Negara would be there to reimburse them, he said, adding that Eu Finance's licence would be revoked and it would become a shell company after the exercise.

Southern Finance, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Southern Bank Bhd, was established in 1965 with a paid-up capital of 18.25 million dollars (6.76 million U.S.) and authorised capital of 50 million dollars (18.52 million U.S.)

COLOMBO (MAY 24) - Thousands of Sri Lankan Tamils are being recruited to the army to give the minority community a greater representation in the security force, a senior minister said Thursday.

Minister of State for Defence Ranjan Wijeratne told journalists that the armed forces and the police have been told to take 12.5 per cent of Tamils from the north and east when recruiting new members.

"Already 7,000 Tamils have been processed by the army for recruitment," Mr.Wijeratne said.

Mr. Wijeratne rejected a claim by the powerful Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) that Colombo was in fact training members of rival Tamil parties in army camps.

"It is all nonsense," Mr. Wijeratne said, responding to allegations by LTTE theoretician Anton Balasingham who was quoted in Tamil newspapers as saying the government was providing military training to the rival Eelam Peoples Revolutionary Liberation Front (EPRLF).

Mr.Wijeratne said the Tamils were Sri Lankan citizens and recruitment to the armed forces and police have to reflect an ethnic ratio.

"Irrespective of what militants are doing, we have to have a representative army of all ethnic groups," Mr. Wijeratne said.

The EPRLF which heads a regional administration in the Tamil majority northeast, is violently opposed to the LTTE, which now virtually dominates the region after the pullout of Indian troops from the area two months ago.

BRISBANE, AUSTRALIA (MAY 24) - French mining and nuclear energy group Cogema has bought a majority stake in Arimco N.L., the Australian gold company said Thursday.

Richard Windsor, Arimco's company secretary, said in a letter to the stock exchange that the French government-owned company would merge its Australian and French gold interests with Arimco.

Arimco would acquire Cogema's Le Bourneix gold mine in France and Cogema's gold exploration activities in Australia in return for issuing Cogema with 132 million fully-paid Arimco shares, he said.

Arimco's share price rose by three cents to 45 Australian cents (34 cents U.S.) here on news of the deal.

"The acquisition of this stake in Arimco will crystalise Cogema's strategy of developing an international gold company based in Australia," Mr. Windsor said.

Among its activities, Arimco manages the Gidgee mine in Western Australia and holds investments in three other mines.

LUSAKA (MAY 24) - Zambia's labour union has complained to the United Nations of alleged harassment by the country's leadership of advocates of a multi-party system, the semi-official daily Times of Zambia reported on Thursday.

According to the newspaper, the Zambia Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU) chairman, Fredrick Chiluba reported the alleged harrassment to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights saying all advocates of the multi-party system were labelled as "malcontents".

"We are alarmed by the recent anti-multi party utterances. It is as if the constitution does not allow freedom of speech. We are being told that multi-party advocates are malcontents and misfits," Mr. Chiluba was quoted as saying.

"Both the United Nations Commission for Human Rights and the Commonwealth secretariat have been informed and we have sent them newspaper cuttings reporting the harassments," he added.

Mr. Chiluba's complaint comes in the wake of a nationwide anti-multiparty campaign by the secretary general of the ruling United National Independence Party (UNIP), Grey Zulu who has described multi-party advocates as power-hungry misfit.

Mr. Zulu is number two in the Zambian leadership heirarchy.

Two weeks ago Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, despite being faced by growing opposition to his 17-year old one-party system, declared that he would campaign against multi-partyism in a proposed referendum. The national council,

MONROVIA (MAY 24) - Authorities at some high schools in Monrovia have asked students to take kits containing personal belongings to school for "emergency purposes".

The decision is linked to the current situation in Liberia where rebels are mounting a sustained attempt to overthrow the government.

In memorandums to students, the authorities said pupils should take toiletries, drinking cups and dried food to school. Other schools are said to have made similar verbal requests to students.

The schools taking the action refused to be identified but said the decision was taken to help students remain at school in case of "an eventuality".

Parents have recently asked schools what precautions were being taken in case of an emergency in the city, increasingly threatened by a rebel

MOSCOW (MAY 24) - Shopping has never exactly been easy in the Soviet Union, but things have been going from bad to worse in recent years as the list of shortages, and the amount of queuing time, grow ever longer.

Three or four years ago it was possible to find caviar at 40 rubles (60 dollars at the official rate) a kilo (2.2 pounds).

But now caviar has totally disappeared and it is extremely difficult to find basic foodstuffs such as red meat, rabbit or vegetables in most of the Gastronom and Produkty state food stores.

The shortages have become so bad that at the end of last year, enterprises introduced an order system, which in theory means that people can receive delivery for high days and holidays of such items as sausage, sheets or toys which are no longer available in the shops.

The average Muscovite spends an average of three hours a day on shopping, his or her life governed by rumours that a certain scarce item has arrived in stock somewhere and interminable queueing, not to mention awaiting the arrival of goods ordered direct from enterprises.

And this is in a city which is reputed to be far better supplied than other towns, where many products are rationed and even then are not necessarily available.

Dairy products are still to be found in Moscow state stores, with butter at 3.6 rubles (5.4 dollars) a kilo, and milk at 36 kopeks (54 U.S. cents) a litre.

But the only vegetables on offer are often frostbitten potatoes and giant carrots, with apples virtually unheard of and other fruit little more than a memory.

Bread, at 20 kopeks (30 U.S. cents) a kilo, was until recently the most well supplied item in the country but some people are saying that even that is becoming scarce.

Those citizens with a reasonably high salary -- the average is 270 rubles (405 dollars) a month -- can afford to shop in Koop stores, where prices are slightly higher than in the state shops but with a ceiling fixed by the state.

Beetroot can be found here for one ruble per kilo, against a theoretical 20 kopeks in the state shops where they can never be found, cabbage at two or three rubles against one ruble in the state shops, and a chicken for 4.5 rubles, against 3.4 in a state shop.

There is also somewhat fatty frozen meat at two rubles a kilo.

But all this means that the Soviet shopping bill is higher than might be expected in a country where prices in state shops are heavily subsidised because so much is unavailable in these stores.

The free markets are the place to find shelves piled with appetising fresh produce, often from the Caucasus, but few Soviets can afford to shop there as the prices are prohibitive.

It can cost up to 100 rubles (160 dollars) to stock up a shopping basket with food and meat here, and virtually the only people who can afford it are workers from cooperatives, who are paid around 800 rubles (1,200 dollars) a month, and often much more.

This three-tier supply system has effectively left pensioners and the low paid worse off over the past five years, and emphasised the unpopular gap in living standards between state workers and those employed in the cooperatives.

LONDON (MAY 24) - Britain was "disappointed" by the United States' rejection of a proposal to set up a holding camp on the U.S. Pacific island Guam for Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong, the Foreign Office said Thursday.

"It was a positive suggestion," a Foreign Office spokesman said. "Obviously now we will be considering other things," he added, giving no further details.

The spokesman said U.S. officials at a regional meeting on the boat people problem in Manila last week had agreed to discuss the possibility of setting up an alternative holding camp at future talks.

A U.S. embassy spokesman in London said Washington's focus remained on voluntary repatriation of the boat people.

Britain made the proposal in response to firm U.S. opposition to a British plan for forcible repatriation of "non-refugee" boat people in Hong Kong judged by British authorities to have left Vietnman solely for economic reasons.

Islamabad (MAY 24) - Pakistani Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto said Thursday war with India over Kashmir was ''a real possibility'' but not inevitable.

Another conflict would solve nothing and embitter relations more, with wider effects on cooperation in southern Asia, she told a news conference in Islamabad after a tour of eight Islamic countries.

Bhutto said she decided to undertake the support-gathering tour after Indian Premier V.P. Singh asked his nation to ''be prepared psychologically for war''.

War lobbies exist in both countries, she said. But instead of taking refuge in them, the leadership should think whether a conflict would bring desired results. For Pakistan, it would not.

India ''has run out of options'' in Kashmir and will have to concede the right of self determination to the Kashmiris it already pledged to them in 1949 under United Nations resolutions, she said.

Bhutto called the current Moslem militancy in Indian Kashmir ''a mass uprising, a popular upsurge'' which ''no amount of force'' would be able to suppress.

She rejected independence for Kashmir, saying it would ''trigger Balkanisation'' on the sub-continent.

She said the ''extremely dangerous'' proposition was ''a fall-back position for India'' which needed ''a kind of cushion state'' as the situation in Kashmir ''spirals out of Indian hands''.

Several Kashmiri militant groups active in India Kashmir are demanding independence rather than the choice offered to the 12 million Kashmiris in the unimplented U.N. resolutions of 1949 to choose India or Pakistan in a plebiscite.

PHNOM PENH (MAY 24) - The Thai rock group "Caravan" flew in here Thursday aboard a military transport plane for an unprecedented tour of Cambodia which will include a concert at the famous Angkor Wat temple complex.

Officials said the Royal Thai Air Force C-130 Hercules, carrying an entourage of about 40 people and piles of equipment, was the first Thai aircraft of any sort to make an official landing in this country since April 1975 when the communist Khmer Rouge seized power, ushering in a reign of terror that left hundreds of thousands of Cambodians dead.

Ministry of Culture officials and girls with flowers were on hand at Pochentong airport to greet the ageing left-wing rockers, the first such group to visit this country in 15 years.

Thailand has no diplomatic relations with the Phnom Penh government installed in January 1979 by Vietnamese forces which ousted the Khmer Rouge.

Bangkok is one of the main backers of the tripartite resistance fighting Phnom Penh which groups the Khmer Rouge with two non-communist factions and provides the movement sanctuary along the border with Cambodia.

Thai Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan, however, has said he wants to see trade be the order of the day with Cambodia rather than war and has hosted visits to Thailand by Phnom Penh Prime Minister Hun Sen.

Tour coordinator Kamron Gunatilaka said the Thai premier's son and advisor, Kraisak Choonhavan, had played an important role in facilitating the trip at government level and in arranging the flight here.

The plane later returned to Bangkok and is scheduled to fly to Siam Reap in northwest Cambodia on Monday to pick up the Thai musicians after their concert Sunday before the ruins of Angkor Wat, officials said.

Caravan's four core members, now aged between 36 and 43, gained fame during the 1973-76 period of democratic rule in Thailand with their songs on social and political issues.

With the military coup in 1976 and a blacklash against left-wing student activists they fled to the jungle to join the banned Thai Communist Party.

The emerged from hiding after falling out with the communists and played at a United Nations-sponsored concert in 1981 at Bangkok's Thammasat University,
Mr. Kamron said.

The group has already played in Laos on a peace tour that took place after Bangkok and its Vietnamese-backed neighbour came to blows over disputed border territory. The issue was settled in 1988 after two months of clashes.

They have re-formed for the Cambodia tour to, in Mr. Kamron's words, play "music for peace."

The group, backed by four more musicians and a female dancer, were scheduled to play two concerts in the Cambodian capital including one at the big Olympic stadium before flying to Siam Reap Saturday.

Officials said they expected large turnouts for the concerts here.

Spectators will be treated to songs with politically charged titles such as "Hiroshima," "Indochina," and "Tiananmen" -- a song about the Chinese army's brutal crackdown in June on the pro-democracy movement in Beijing.

The Thais were also slated to visit the major sites of Phnom Penh, including a visit to former Tual Sleng prison where some 20,000 political prisoners were believed to have been tortured by the Khmer Rouge before execution.

LONDON (MAY 24) - Britain's opposition Labour Party pledged Thursday that if elected to government it would fully integrate the pound in the European Monetary System and would scrap the current government's controversial poll tax.

Its new 20,000-word policy statement, seen as the party's manifesto for the next general elections, said Labour would replace the poll tax, or community charge, with a new property tax linked to ability to pay.

Violent riots have erupted in various parts of the country in recent months over the poll tax, a uniform tax for funding local government services levied on all residents over 18 regardless of income.

The governing Conservative Party, elected for a five-year term in 1987, has recently seen its popularity sink to the lowest level in opinion polls for many years.

The Labour Party also promised to negotiate Britain's entry into the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS "at the earliest opportunity" and said it would set income tax at levels ranging from below 20 per cent to a maximum of 50 per cent.

Britain's water industry, privatized under Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, would be returned to the public sector, the document, entitled "Looking to the Future," said.

Labour leader Neil Kinnock said his party looked forward with "realism, honesty and imagination" to forming a new government and added that Labour would end 11 years of Tory "arrogance, complacency and deviousness."

TOKYO (MAY 24) - Amnesty International Secretary General Ian Martin said here Thursday that Japan should do more to protect human rights around the world.

During a lunch with reporters, Mr. Martin also said Japan should abolish its death penalty, under which several criminals are secretly executed each year.

"We ask Japan to make human rights an active part of its international politics," Mr. Martin said, adding that his London-based organization believed Tokyo should not avoid human rights issues "for economic reasons."

He called on Japan to quickly ratify an international convention on torture signed in 1984.

Mr. Martin said his group's "major concern" in Japan was over the death penalty, but it was also concerned about the treatment of suspects held for police interrogation.

Amnesty had noted an "extremely long period of time" between sentencing and carrying out the death penalty, he said, as well as "miscarriages of justice" over the past 30 years that had sent innocent people to their deaths.

Mr. Martin, who arrived here Wednesday for a 12-day visit, plans to meet officials in the ministries of foreign affairs and justice.

He said he would raise the case of Zhang Zhenhai, who was repatriated at the end of April after hijacking a jumbo jet from China to Japan.

Mr. Martin said he would ask Japanese officials to insist that China give Mr. Zhang a public trial.

During a news conference Wednesday, Mr. Martin announced that Amnesty was launching a worldwide campaign to press for freedom for political prisoners in China.

The organization would publish a list of those detained to mark the first anniverary of the bloody June 4 crackdown on pro-democracy protests in Tiananmen Square, he said.

MOSCOW (MAY 24) - A majority of the Soviet people favor a move to a market economy, although they think it will bring a lower standard of living, according to a survey published in the Izvestia newspaper on Thursday.

The report came a day after government officials said the Kremlin was prepared to hold a referendum on planned economic reforms.

The survey of 1,440 people in 11 regions of the country carried out between May 8 and 20 found that 56 percent were in favor of a market economy, more than twice as many as preferred a planned economy.

Of those in favor, a third wanted changes to be carried out as quickly as possible, but two thirds favored gradual reforms.

But 69 percent thought that the transition to a market economy would initially mean a lower standard of living.

Only 23 percent of those questioned felt that the government would do all it could to avoid a fall in their standard of living and increased unemployment with the introduction of a market economy.

Some 37 percent thought a market economy would bring in "renewed socialism" uniting the good points of both socialism and capitalism, while nine percent thought it would mean a capitalist Soviet Union and 15 percent thought it would mean a mixture of the bad points of both systems.

Two sociologists, commenting on the results, said that they showed that the people's support for a market economy "is not so much based on understanding ... of the advantages of a market system, as on a belief that the old economic methods alone cannot resolve the country's economic problems."

TAIPEI (MAY 24) - Taiwan food giant the President Group is to acquire Georgia-based firm Wyndham Foods Inc. in the largest overseas acquisition by a private company here, a President executive said Thursday.

Under a letter of intent signed in early May, President is to pay 335 million U.S. dollars for 100 percent of Wyndham, the third largest confectionery firm in the United States, and take over its entire 200 million dollars in long-term debt, President said.

Wyndham, based in Augusta and capitalized at some 30 million dollars, produces goods under several brands and is expected to post pre-tax profit of 44 million dollars in 1990, the executive said.

The buyout is part of President's strategy to internationalize its operations and penetrate the U.S. market, the official said, adding that a formal contract will be signed in late June pending the approval of the U.S. authorities and Wyndham shareholders.

The acquisition will be handled by Paine Webber Inc., representing Wyndham, and Kidder Peabody Co., Inc., representing President, he said.

President will issue 110 million dollars worth of corporate bonds in London and Amsterdam this year to raise some of the funds for the buyout.

The rest will come from the various enterprises in the group, which includes firms involved in processed foods, securities, supermarkets and computers.

President bought 30 percent of the local subsidiary of U.S.-based Wang Laboratories Inc. for four billion Taiwan dollars (153.8 million U.S.) in December.

VIENNA (MAY 24) - English clubs, with the exception of Liverpool, could be playing in Europe next season if their fans behave themselves at the World Cup, UEFA said here on Thursday.

President Lennart Johansson told a UEFA Executive Committee meeting that an English return was a "possibility, but before deciding anything, we want to see how English supporters behave in Italy.

"Afterwards, we will see whether the British send us the report we have asked them for, and whether this report is satisfactory.

"We will take a definitive decision after the World Cup, and we will take it quickly as the draw for the European cups will be held on July 11".

The report contains the British government's view as to whether English clubs should return to European competition.

But UEFA is not budging on the English champions, banned with the other clubs after the 1985 Heysel Stadium tragedy, when 40 fans were killed after Liverpool fans charged Juventus supporters before the European Cup final.

"Only the next UEFA congress in 1992 in Gothenburg will be able to authorise a possible amnesty, and not before", Mr. Johansson said, stressing that the British government had a key role in the decision.

"It's absolutely vital that the British give us guarantees of security and give us concrete proof of their willingness to help UEFA, because on our own we cannot unfortunately prevent the violence".

"One Heysel is enough", Johanssson said.

Liverpool cannot now play in the European Cup until the 1992-93 season at the earliest.

HONG KONG (MAY 24) - Two Tibetans were sentenced to death on May 9 for trying to escape from prison and are likely to have already been executed, a London-based Tibetan human rights group said in a statement Thursday.

The Tibetan Information Network, whose members made up largely of Britons but also including Tibetans, said in a statement that the death penalties were announced on Lhasa television on May 10.

The statement quoted the TV report as saying four Tibetans were sentenced a day earlier for trying to escape from a Lhasa prison.

Two of them, whose names were provisionally translated in the statement as Migmar Tashi and Dama, were given the death penalty, which was "to take effect immediately."

A third Tibetan was also sentenced to death but with a two-year suspension, while the fourth defendant received a nine year jail sentence, the statement, released here through the Hongk Kong-based Asia Pacific Forum for Tibet, said.

The four were all reportedly convicted on "organising a prison escape in a planned way" starting in Feburary.

According to the Tibetan Information Network's statement, the Lhasa TV report called the four "criminals" but did not say on what offences they were jailed in the first place.

Beijing lifted martial law in Lhasa on May 1.

GENEVA (MAY 24) - At least 50 speakers will address a special U.N. Security Council debate here Friday on violence in the Israeli-occupied territories, but there will not be any resolution, a U.N. spokesman said.

Spokesman Francois Giuliani said Thursday that the list of speakers was still growing and the debate could possibly run through to Saturday morning.

The council is meeting in Geneva instead of New York to avoid the problem of obtaining a U.S. visa for Palestine Liberation Organisation leader Yasser Arafat, who asked to address the debate.

The U.N. says it has asked for a visa for Mr. Arafat, but Washington has denied receiving the request.

Mr. Arafat is due to meet U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar before being invited by the Security Council to open the debate. He will be followed by speakers from some Arab countries and from Israel.

In the Hague on Wednesday, PLO representative Afif Safieh said Mr. Arafat would be calling on the Security Council to send peace-keeping troops to the occupied territories, including East Jerusalem, to remain there until the creation of a Palestinian state. He would be asking for the immediate withdrawal of Israeli military forces from populated areas.

Mr. Arafat is expected to give a press conference before leaving Geneva on Friday evening.

The Security Council has cut the cost if its move to Geneva by bringing with it less than a quarter of the usual support staff. It will be returning to new York next Tuesday to conclude the debate there. Security in Geneva will be relatively low-key, Mr. Giuliani said.

The move follows Sunday's shooting of eight Palestinian workers by an Israeli gunman near Tel Aviv, which sparked some of the bloodiest rioting in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip since the uprising began there in December 1987.

Crowds took to the streets in Hinganghat, some 80 kilometers (50 miles) from Nagpur city, and went on the rampage Wednesday, stabbing people, looting shops and burning buses when news spread of the damage to the statue of Dr. Bhim Rao Ambedkar.

Dr. Ambedkar campaigned successfully to give the vote to untouchables, outcasts beneath the lowest rung of the Hindu caste system, and campaigned tirelessly against the system itself.

BANGKOK (MAY 24) - Member countries of the U.N. World Food Council (WFC) on Thursday unanimously agreed to work together to combat hunger, which was ravaging large parts of Africa and other developing regions.

The agreement came after ministers expressed concern about the current sharp deterioration of the food situation in those areas, and about ensuring that opportunities in this decade would not be lost.

The statement was issued at the close of the four-day ministerial session of the WFC held here.

The world was now feeding 1.2 billion people more than in 1974, the year the WFC was formed in Rome, the statement said.

WFC President Youssef Amin Wally, Egypt's deputy prime minister and minister of agriculture, told Monday's opening session that hunger and poverty increased substantially during the 1980's in Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean.

He said nearly 40 million more people went hungry in developing countries during the first half of the 1980's, bringing the total to 512 million people.

"Presently, their total number probably exceeds 550 million," he said.

Thursday's statement said the delegates were not satisfied by long-term trends of declining deaths from famine, when the number of people threatened every year by starvation through man-made and natural calamities stayed unacceptably high.

Other issues discussed included raising food production; increased access to food supplies for vulnerable groups, notably women; a more open and fair world trading system for agricultural products to boost the foreign-exchange earning capacity of developing countries; and increased and better-coordinated aid flows.

The statement said economic problems persisted in many developing countries because of both domestic policy shortcomings and external factors, such as debts, falling commodity prices and protectionism.

It also noted the challenges of increasing population and environmental degradation, which it said cast a "disturbing shadow on the prospects for reducing world hunger in the 1990's."

The council said the primary responsibility for eliminating hunger rested with each country but "achievements would be greatest when countries work together."

Thai deputy agriculture minister, Charoen Kanthawong, who is also WFC vice president, told reporters the outcome of the meeting would also strengthen cooperation among developing countries.

Mr. Charoen said many African delegates had indicated that they wanted to send officials here to study agricultural technology.

Delegates from the 36 member countries and 21 non-member countries attended the WFC ministerial session. Observers from international and non-governmental organizations were also present.

The WFC aims to coordinate and implement U.N. policies concerning food.

BUCHAREST (MAY 24) - Some 8,000 demonstrators chanting "Down with communism" and slogans against newly-elected president Ion Iliescu staged a rally in central Bucharest's University Square on Thursday.

Romanian opposition leaders charged meanwhile that Sunday's legislative and presidential elections won by Mr. Iliescu's National Salvation Front (NSF) had been rigged.

Ion Ratiu, a presidential candidate for the National Peasants Party (NPP) who gained a parliament seat, announced that he will "challenge the election results with the electoral committee in accordance with the law."

Mr. Ratiu said he would "speak up for democracy" in parliament.

The demonstrators in University Square, where anti-government protestors have been staging a sit-in for the past 33 days, shouted "Down with Iliescu" and accused the Front, which has been in power since Nicolae Ceausescu was toppled in December, of electoral fraud.

Mr. Iliescu, a reformed communist, was elected president with more than 80 percent of the votes on Sunday in the first multi-party election in Romania in 44 years.

Thursday's protest was called by the People's Alliance, one of the movements representing demonstrators in University Square, which protestors have dubbed a "Communist-free zone."

About 40 anti-government demonstrators have been on hunger strike in the square for more than two weeks.

A banner erected by demonstrators Thursday said that "The Revolution Continues," a reference to the December uprising that ousted Ceausescu.

Police forces remained out of sight during the protest and no incidents were reported. Romanian radio and television said the authorities had criticized the meeting as illegal.

National Peasants Party (NPP) leader Corneliu Coposu meanwhile turned down calls for an agreement with the National Salvation Front, saying opposition parties were opposed to any new form of totalitarianism and were for democracy.

The NPP won less than three percent of the vote in the parliamentary elections.

Mr. Ratiu took just 4.16 percent of the vote in the presidential poll.

WARSAW (MAY 24) - An international investors' forum here attended by more than 400 Polish and foreign companies was a huge success, a U.N. official said here Thursday.

"I met many ministers and trades union officials and I am convinced that they have decided to introduce (political and economic) changes in Poland as quickly as possible," Domingo Siazon, director general of the United Nations Industrial Development Organisation (UNIDO) told a press conference.

The Warsaw forum was the second such meeting under UNIDO auspices.

Foreign investment here is curbed by current legislation on repatriation of profit and investment protection, but some 875 joint ventures have been established in Poland, 367 of them with West Germany.

Mr. Siazon said the forum had been fruitful as a "point of contact," which was its main role.

As for concrete results "that takes time and patience," he said, adding that it usually took between one and two years to get a project off the ground.

Some 250 plans for joint ventures had been put forward by almost 200 Polish companies, with a total investment cost of some 3.9 million dollars, 1.9 million of it to come from abroad, a Polish UNIDO official said.

The forum, which was the scene of some 500 meetings between Polish and foreign businessmen, was attended by 176 foreign firms, including 38 from Britain, 20 from the United States and 17 from France.

LONDON (MAY 24) - British financial group B and C, fighting for survival after its computer subsidiary went into receivership, said Thursday it was putting its most profitable division, money broker Exco International, up for sale.

Exco, the world's leading money broker, is said by analysts to be worth 325 million pounds (545 million dollars). Its sale is subject to approval by the Bank of England.

British and Commonwealth Holdings has been fighting for survival since Atlantic Computers went into receivership last month.

It has written off its entire 550 million pound (932 million dollars) investment in the computer concern and is seeking to shed assets totalling 750 million pounds (1.27 billion dollars) to reduce its more than one billion pounds (1.69 billion dollars) in debt.

The group has already reaped some 300 million pounds from the sale of fund manager Gartmore and a stake in Irish leasing company Woodchester Investments.

Its other assets include merchant bank British and Commonwealth, U.S. fund manager Oppenheimer and estate agency chain Hamptons.

B and C shares have been suspended since April 17.

PRAGUE (MAY 24) - The Czechoslovak government said Thursday it would be raising food prices by an average 25 percent from July 9.

The move, which has been postponed several times because of disagreements on the issue within the government, comes a month after the country's first post-war free elections.

"It is a new step on the road to real pricing and the transition to a market economy," a government source stressed on Thursday.

The price rises will be compensated to some extent by a special monthly allowance of 140 koruna (8.75 dollars) per person from July 1, but state subsidies on food products are to be axed.

The price of alcoholic drinks will go up by more than 25 percent, the CTK news agency said.

The government said Wednesday that cigarettes were to go up 25 percent, and tobacco 35 percent, after doubling railway and intercity public transport fares two weeks ago.

Prices of electronics goods such as colour televisions were reduced by an average 23 percent as of Thursday.

MONROVIA (MAY 24) - Legislators from Liberia's Nimba county, where rebels launched an insurgency campaign last December, Thursday condemned a wave of killings in Monrovia and appealed to the government for protection for their tribesmen.

A statement by the legislators called the killings ''genocidal''. Police Monday and Tuesday reported that the beheaded bodies of ten men had been found in suburbs of monrovia.

Women claiming to be wives of the victims since identified the bodies, saying they were of members of the Gio and Mano ethnic groups predominant in Nimba county.

President Samuel Doe Wednesday condemned the killings, saying there ''was no tribal war'' going on in the country.

In their statement, the legislators said the rebel incursion in Liberia was ''not of Nimba making - neither is it a war between the national government or a particular tribe and Nimba county.''

Since Wednesday, large numbers of distressed people have been pouring into the offices of the independent Daily Observer newspaper reporting cases of missing persons, relatives or husbands.

They have also been reporting cases of harrassment and armed burglaries into homes during the night.

LONDON (MAY 24) - Amnesty International sent an urgent message Thursday to Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad and other senior government officials calling for clemency for eight Hong Kong residents sentenced to be hanged next Wednesday for drug trafficking.

Amnesty expressed "grave concern" over the announcement Thursday that the eight were to be hanged and urged the Malaysian government "to grant clemency on humanitarian grounds."

Earlier, lawyers representing the eight said British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher had also appealed to Malaysian authorities to commute the death sentences.

"Amnesty International is seriously concerned by the increasing use of the death penalty for drugs offences in Malaysia," the London-based human rights organization said in a statement.

It also expressed "serious concern" that the hangings were to take place just six days after Malaysia's Pardons Board -- a state body which automatically reviews death sentences -- announced its rejection of appeals against the death sentences.

Under Malaysian law, defendents do not have access to the Pardons Board and are not informed of when it will review their appeal, Amnesty said.

The eight were named as Ip Tak-ming, 36, Yuen Kwok-kwan, 28, Au King-chor, 32, Li Chi-peng, 28, hau Tsui-ling, 32, Ng Yiu-kwok, 37 and Chow Sing, 42.

The scheduled executions at Kajang prison near Kuala Lumpur and Taiping prison located north of the Malaysian capital would be the first mass hanging in Malaysia of convicted drug traffickers, the lawyers said.

They would also be carried out during a meeting of heads of government of 15 developing countries in Malaysia when hordes of foreign journalists will be in the country.

Nairobi, May 24 dpa - Kenya Thursday withdrew its consent to host the 23th biennial meeting of the International Bar Association.

In the light of leadership quarrels within the Law Society of Kenya (Lsk), the society was not able to function as the host to the international conference which was to take place in September, a press statement by Attorney-General Matthew G. Muli said.

It would have been the first time the lawyers had met on African soil, and 5,000 participants had been expected.

Controversy raged since Lsk chairman Fred Ojiambo was re-elected in March in what his opponents claim were rigged elections. President Daniel arap Moi tried to settle the dispute in strongly backing Ojiambo.

A strong minority within the society believes that Ojiambo is too pro-government. They have given him 28 days to resign in the interest of the legal profession or face impeachment.

LIBREVILLE (MAY 24) - Thick columns of smoke rose over the Gabonese capital Thursday as demonstrators called on President Omar Bongo to go and some accused him of involvement in the murder of an opposition leader found dead overnight Wednesday.

Anti-government protestors meanwhile held 10 oil company executives hostage in Gabon's isolated second town, Port Gentil, where the authorities despatched troops late Wednesday after the French consulate and other buildings were set ablaze.

The town, largely working class and traditionally critical of government, was said to be in the hands of the demonstrators.

Europeans in Libreville expressed relief at the news that the French Defence Ministry had sent some 200 Foreign Legion soldiers and paratroops to reinforce a 600-strong French garrison stationed in Gabon.

Isolated incidents were reported in which demonstrators insulted Europeans and smashed their car windscreens, but not on the scale seen during unrest here earlier this year. A call by anti-government protestors for a general strike Thursday appeared not fully to have been heeded.

The latest protests in the West African state were sparked Wednesday by the announcement that opposition politician Joseph Rendjambe, a businessman in his 50's, from Port Gentil, was found dead in a hotel room here after a mysterious meeting with a woman from Ivory Coast.

Witnesses in Libreville said that troops called out as a curfew was imposed Wednesday were prominently stationed around the presidential palace but had not been able to prevent the burning of several buildings.

Some demonstrators told Agence France-Presse that they were attacking property belonging to Mr. Bongo and those close to him. They charged that the president, in power since December 1967, had a hand in Mr. Rendjambe's sudden death.

Sources reached by telephone in Port Gentil, a town of 30,000, said that seven French employees of the Elf oil company had been captured by protestors and placed under guard with a Gabonese, a Briton and a Frenchman, all top staff from Shell who were kidnapped earlier Thursday.

BOGOTA (MAY 24) - The violence unleashed by Colombia's drug traffickers has forced politicians here to take extraordinary security measures and the heavily Roman Catholic population to intensify their prayers for protection against the cocaine lords' indiscriminate car bombs.

Bullet-proof vests, armored cars, and around-the-clock personal security squads have become everyday facets of life for senators, deputies, and presidential candidates who are running in Sunday's national elections.

The four major candidates -- considered the prime assassination targets of the powerful drug lords who have been blamed for murdering three other candidates since August -- each rely on almost 100 bodyguards who provide 24-hour protection.

An ambulance equipped with sophisticated equipment and staffed by a medical specialist follows each of the major candidates to all of their appointments ... just in case.

If such precautions had been taken by the candidates last year, Liberal Party frontrunner Luis Carlos Galan might have survived an August 18 machine-gun attack during an open-air campaign rally in Soacha, 25 kilometers (15 miles) south of Bogota.

Mr. Galan, a staunch anti-drug politician, died soon after the shooting by gunmen believed to be in the pay of the Medellin-based cocaine cartel.

Savvy politicians seeking to thwart potential attackers make great efforts never to use the same route for traveling and never to leave or arrive at their offices at the same time.

The general population has turned to the Roman Catholic Church for protection from the drug lords' increased bombings and ambushes on city streets, according to one Catholic priest from Bogota's Chapinero neighborhood.

"The faithful have become more diligent" since the proliferation of bombs in the capital, he said.

"More than ever, the Colombians need the protection of our Savior," he said, adding that most Bogotenos apparently had not changed their lifestyles and continued to go shopping at night at large shopping malls, which recently have become targets of the car bombs.

NAIROBI (MAY 24) - Some developing countries with lagging economies, such as Sri Lanka and Costa Rica, provide a better standard of living than some more prosperous countries, according to a new index unveiled by the U.N. Development Program Thursday.

The Undp's Human Development Index takes into accounts such previously overlooked variables as life expectancy, access to education and individual purchasing power. Until now, economic growth as determined by the per capita gross national product was used as the measure of development.

Using the new index, Undp officials said in their Human Development Report 1990, countries such as Brazil, Nigeria and Pakistan, which have posted economic gains in recent years, actually fare worse than Sri Lanka and Costa Rica, whose people have a lower per capita income.

In particular, the index highlights countries where revenues have been diverted to military buildups at the expense of civilian interests.

The report urgently appealed for reductions in military expenditures, which it said have grown three times as fast in developing countries as military expenditures in industrialised countries in the last three decades.

''Education and health expenditures were cut, but military expenditures actually rose,'' the report said. ''The poverty of their economies was no barrier to the affluence of their armies.''

KARACHI (MAY 24) - Police arrested top leaders of rival ethnic groups on Thursday in a crackdown against lawlessness in southern Sindh province that has already netted some 600 people, informed sources here said.

Amin Rajput, a senior member of the Mohajir Qaumi Movement (MQM), which represents Urdu-speaking settlers from India, and Muzaffar Siddiq Bhatti, the leader of the Sindh National Front (SNF), were among those jailed in Hyderabad, 175 kilometers (110 miles) north of here, they said.

The arrest of Mr. Rajput, a local councillor, triggered a protest in the city and sources said some 400 women tried to storm the police station.

Paramilitary troops intervened and the women dispersed.

Trouble also continued in curfew-bound areas of Hyderabad, and witnesses said a child was killed when security forces opened fire on curfew violators.

Authorities did not allow a curfew break Thursday in the tense city, where the death toll has reached more than 60 in 10 days of violence between native Sindhis and Urdu-speaking Mohajir settlers from India.

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto accused India meanwhile of fomenting ethnic trouble in Pakistan by infiltrating "agents provocateurs." It was the first time Ms. Bhutto had explicitly made such a charge against New Delhi.

She also charged that Indian agents were responsible for sabotage activities in Pakistan, currently gripped by a wave of bomb blasts and explosions that has left dozens of people dead.

Indian infiltration began in Sindh, Ms. Bhutto said, adding that it had now spread to Punjab province, which borders India.

"The people of Pakistan vehemently condemned the Indian designs and tactics," she told a news conference here.

Ms. Bhutto's statement coincided with press reports that three Indian secret service Research and Analysis Wing (RAW) agents had been arrested in Karachi, the provincial capital.

MONROVIA (MAY 24) - The U.S. Embassy here Thursday strongly condemned "violations of basic human rights" by Liberian government and rebel forces and called for an end to the "heinous crimes."

"As a close friend of Liberia, we call upon all Liberians to end the ethnically-related violence that has placed Monrovia and its environs in the grip of fear," the embassy said in a statement.

The embassy called on law enforcement officials to "vigorously pursue the perpetrators of the heinous crimes and bring them to justice under the law."

The statement came in the wake of the discovery here of 10 beheaded bodies believed to be members of the Gio and Mano ethnic groups from northeast Nimba County, where the rebellion against President Samuel Doe began in December.

The insurgency, led by Charles Taylor, a former Liberian official, has since spread to neighbouring Bong and Grand Bassa Counties.

Nimba County legisators on Thursday condemned the murders here, describing them as "genocidal," and appealed to the Liberian government for protection for their tribesmen.

The legislators said that citizens of Nimba County have become "victims of circumstances" since the insurgency began. They appealed to the government to do something "positive within the shortest possible time to secure the safety of our citizens, including those in uniform."

Responding to the brutal killings, Mr. Doe ordered the defense and justice ministers to immediately set up a joint security team to search for those responsible for the murders, which he condemned as "senseless and wicked."

ISLAMABAD (MAY 24) - Pakistan's combined opposition parties (Cop) Thursday accused Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of running ''corporate corruption'', not a government.

''It is a lot which recognises no boundaries and knows no limits,'' a convention of Cop public representatives held in opposition stronghold Rawalpindi was told.

Confidential official documents were presented to the convention to prove favours allegedly doled out by Bhutto administration to the prime minister's family, partymen and supporters.

Among the charges of concessional credits and industrial permits to favourites, land grabbing and selling government equity at throw away prices was mentioned Bhutto's husband Asif Zardari who allegedly got 287 acres of prime land in Islamabad for building a hotel and recreational facilities.

Cop spokesmen appeared to preempt counter charges from the ruling party when they hinted at ''fallout effects of the corrupt practices of the Federal government in the federating units'', the biggest of which, Punjab is ruled by the opposition.

''Some corruption has always been present in Pakistan,'' declared retired army general Majid Malik, a former chairman of the Federal AntiCorruption Committe. ''But the Pakistan People's Party's regime is the most corrupt regime in the history of Pakistan.''

Bhutto repudiated the charges as a campaign by opposition to discredit her ''democratic government and to restore dictatorship in the country''.

She said: ''The opposition is unhappy with the loss of privileges that its members had enjoyed under the dictatorship of late General Mohammad Zia ul-Haq.''

However, Bhutto appointed the existing Anti-Corruption Committee to probe into the Cop allegations and submit its report within 60 days.

ISLAMABAD (MAY 24) - An Iranian refugee set himself on fire in front of the office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) here Thursday, eyewitnesses said.

The middle-aged and bearded Iranian, identified as Ali Sufian, was protesting against what his compatriots described as UNHCR "indifference" to his long-standing request for resettlement in a third country.

He sprinkled kerosene over his clothes, struck a match and set himself afire, the witnesses said.

Policemen put out the flames but the man was burned on his torso, arms and feet and was taken to hospital, they said. Doctors said his injuries were not serious.

On Saturday, Sufian and another Iranian refugee had staged a demonstration with their lips sewn together with needle and thread outside the UNHCR office.

In a written statement then they said they had entered Pakistan four years ago with about 1,000 Iranian refugees. They complained that the "UNHCR had done nothing" for their resettlement.

NEW DELHI (MAY 24) - A senior leader of former premier Rajiv Gandhi's Congress (I) party was among 18 people killed in violence related to the Sikh separatist campaign in Punjab, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said Thursday.

The news agency said two Sikh militants attacked the home of the Hindu politician, Shanti Swaroop, in Patiala district's Banur town Thursday and killed him. Mr. Swaroop was the president of Banur's Congress (I) chapter.

A bank guard in adjacent Haryana state's Ambala district shot dead one of three suspected Sikh militants Thursday when they tried to steal money from a state-owned bank, PTI said.

It said four more Sikh militants were killed in separate gunbattles with security forces in Punjab.

Indian border guards also shot and killed two border-crossers late Wednesday when they entered Punjab's Fazilka sector from Pakistan, PTI said, but it did not specify if they were Sikh separatists.

In separate attacks in the northern state's Batala district, Sikh gunmen shot dead two Punjab police constables, dumping their bodies in a ditch, and murdered two civilians elsewhere in the area, PTI said.

Three killings of civilians by Sikh militants were reported Thursday from the troubled frontier district of Amritsar, PTI said, adding that three Sikh separatists also died Thursday in inter-gang clashes in the district.

The latest killings took to at least 828 the number of people killed this year in the bloody Sikh militant campaign for a separate state in Punjab.

KUALA LUMPUR (MAY 24) - Malaysia's sole privatized telecommunications company announced Thursday a 365.5 million Malaysian dollar (135.4 million U.S.) pre-tax profit for last year, doubling its 1988 profit of 180.4 million dollars (66.8 million U.S.).

"It will not be a surprise if we can reach half a billion pre-tax profit for the current financial year," said Rashdan Baba, the executive chairman of Syarikat Telekom Malaysia Berhad (STM).

STM's huge profit came on the back of a record revenue of 2.14 billion dollars (793 million U.S.) compared with 1988's 1.88 billion dollars (696 million U.S.).

Rashdan said the group's total assets in 1989 amounted to 7.61 billion dollars (2.82 billion U.S.) with total shareholders' fund totalling 2.70 billion dollars (one billion U.S.).

He said that total loans outstanding fell 5.3 per cent to 4.12 billion dollars (1.52 billion U.S.) from 4.36 billion dollars (1.61 billion U.S.), representing an improved debt to equity ratio.

STM would spend 1.4 billion dollars (518 million U.S.) over the next five years to upgrade and install rural telephones throughout the country, Rashdan said.

BANGKOK (MAY 24) - Burmese military authorities Thursday lifted martial law in 16 central townships, Rangoon's official radio announced in a broadcast monitored here.

The order -- issued by the ruling State Law and Order Restoration Council (SLORC), the official name of the ruling military government -- was implemented by two army division commands in central Burma, the radio said.

The order brought to 139 the total number of the townships considered to be "politically stable" and where martial law has been lifted, since it was imposed nationwide last November.

Under martial law, local authorities imposed a nighttime curfew and banned public gatherings of more than five people.

The SLORC, headed by General Saw Maung who seized power in a military coup in September 1988 after crushing a student-led, pro-democracy movement, has scheduled multiparty general elections for May 27.

LIBREVILLE (MAY 24) - Nine foreigners and a Gabonese oil executive seized by anti-government demonstrators in Port Gentil were released Thursday afternoon, one of the hostages said.

The news came shortly after a contingent of French soldiers of the 6th Marine Infantry Battalion arrived in Port Gentil, reliable sources said here and in the port which had virtually been taken over by rioters.

Roland Toulouse, a public relations manager of one of the oil company executives kidnapped earlier Thursday, said by telephone that they had all been freed.

The demonstrators had demanded the withdrawal of security forces from Port Gentil, the economic capital.

Among those held in the Shell company offices were a Gabonese, Anatole Bouroubou, the company secretary, the British personnel manager Peter Robertson and Frenchman Mr. Toulouse.

The seven others were French employees of the French firm Elf.

All had reached their homes and were unharmed, Mr. Toulouse said.

French consul general Jean Duffau was kidnapped Wednesday after a day of anti-government riots but released unharmed Thursday.

The riots erupted after the unexplained death of an opposition leader in Libreville.

TOKYO (MAY 24) - Japan, the world's largest provider of economic aid, needs to promote more transfer of technical and management know-how to developing countries, a government report said Thursday.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) said in the annual report that Tokyo extended 21.42 billion dollars worth of economic aid to developing countries to top world aid donors for four consecutive years.

The report emphasized that Japan should concentrate more on transferring technological know-how and industrial policy planning skills rather than contributing to the construction of infrastructure.

It noted that developing countries have been turning to projects to build up institutions that would help enchance technological developments.

The report also warned Japan against giving excessive grant loans because it could deprive recipient countries of helping themselves.

WASHINGTON (MAY 24) - President George Bush Thursday told visiting Haitian President Ertha Pascal-Trouillot that he hoped her government could organize its planned general elections very quickly.

The White House said the U.S. president also used the occasion to express concern about the human rights situation in the impoverished Caribbean nation of six million people.

In a communique, the White House said, "The president (Mr. Bush) expressed the hope that an election date be set soon and that the Haitian Government and armed forces take all necessary steps to enhance respect for human rights and ensure a secure environment for the election campaign and the balloting."

Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot is making her first overseas visit since taking over as caretaker president last March 13.

She pointed out that she had no role in setting the election date, explaining that that decision was up to the independent Provisional Election Council, known by its French initials ad CEP.

In an interview earlier this month, Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot said she hoped elections could be held by September, but observers in Haiti have pointed out that the CEP is having difficulty in drawing up the modalities.

After a 30-minute meeting with the Haitian leader, Mr. Bush expressed his "admiration and respect" for her and Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot said she was confident that her country's electoral process could be carried out.

Mr. Bush, noting that Port-au-Prince had invited both the United Nations and the Organization of American States (OAS) to provide technical assistance for the elections, promised also to offer U.S. help.

The Bush administration has asked Congress to allocate some 13 million dollars -- including three million dollars earmarked for the electoral process -- in supplementary aid which had previously been authorized for Haiti. But the authorization to unblock this money is included in the bill authorizing financial aid to Nicaragua and Panama which has so far been blocked in Congress.

WARSAW (MAY 24) - Talks here between trade unions and the Polish government to end a spreading strike by railway workers were deadlocked Thursday, a union official said.

Alfred Miodowicz, chairman of the OPZZ union, said the government had firmly rejected demands for pay rises and direct talks with strikers at the northern town of Slupsk.

The railworkers' strike, which has spread throughout the northwestern region of Poland, isolating it from the rest of the country, was only the beginning of a larger strike movement, Mr. Miodowicz warned at a press conference.

That unrest could "only be stopped through successful talks with government officials in Slupsk," he added.

Officials of the formerly communist OPZZ quit the bargaining table late Thursday. The Solidarity trade union, Deputy Finance Minister Ryszard Pazura, Transport Minister Adam Wieladek and Labour Minister Jacek Kuron are also involved in the talks.

Since the strike began in Slupsk in the northwestern Pomerania region Sunday, strikers have demanded a 30 percent pay hike.

PAP news agency said Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki had warned that the country must not be destabilized. "We will stick to the road to democracy in Poland," he was quoted as saying.

It appeared that the strikers had not heeded an appeal by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa on Wednesday urging them to end their action.

Vice Prime Minister Leszek Balcerowicz told parliament Thursday that the government could not meet pay demands from the railway workers without "destroying the chances of success of its economic policy."

But he announced "corrections" to the railway pay scales and an "acceleration of reforms" in the railway industry.

BRUSSELS (MAY 24) - Several people were killed during May 11 clashes at a university campus in Lubumbashi in southeast Zaire, Belgian Foreign Minister Mark Eyskens said Thursday.

Meanwhile, in London, the human rights organization Amnesty Internatinal condemned the use of force by the security forces on the Lubumbashi campus.

In a statement, Amnesty said that members of the security forces used bayonets and machetes against students, killing and wounding dozens.

It said it had received reports that between 50 and 150 students died.

The Zaire government has said that one student died and three were wounded in clashes between rival student groups which forced the security forces to intervene.

But Mr. Eyskens told a Belgian radio station that according to Belgian diplomats in Zaire, a former Belgian colony, several people died.

He said there was a "large difference between the figures cited" and added that the Belgian cabinet would discuss the incidents at its weekly meeting on Friday.

A Belgian newspaper, Le Soir, reported Tuesday that "more than 50 students" were killed by members of President Mobutu Sese Seko's special security force.

In the Congolese capital, Brazzaville, an unrecognized Zairean opposition party, the Kongolese Workers Party, claimed Wednesday that 150 students were massacred by special intervention units formed by President Mobutu.

The governor of Shaba province Wednesday hit out at "inaccurate reports of events in Lubumbashi" and said that 14 students had been wounded in clashes between rival groups.

Lubumbashi, 1,500 kilometres (930 miles) southeast of Kinshasa, is the capital of Shaba, which tried to secede as would-be independent Katanga after independence was granted to the former Belgian Congo in 1960. Kinshasa is just across the Zaire river from Brazzaville.

The Zairean authorities have expressed "surprise and indignation" at reports of the killings.

ANKARA (MAY 24) - Turkey has agreed in principle to open its hospitals to Palestinians wounded in confrontations with Israeli troops in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, Foreign Ministry spokesman Murat Sungar said Thursday.

He said the agreement "for humanitarian reasons" was in reply to a request submitted to the Turkish authorities by the Palestinian representation here in April, before the latest wave of violence in the territories.

But he said the questions as to how the Palestinians would be brought to Turkey and what hospitals would admit them for treatment had not been discussed.

Mr. Sungar's remarks came after the Palestinian representative here Ibrahim Tamim publicly asked Ankara to accept the wounded from the territories saying it was "impossible" for them to be treated in Israeli hospitals.

Mr. Tamim said the Palestinians had likewise asked "other brother countries and friends" to help assist their wounded.

NEW DELHI (MAY 24) - Indian security forces have launched a major hunt in Kashmir for the three assassins who killed the northern state's influential Moslem high priest, Mirwaiz Maulvi Farooq, reports said Thursday.

National Doordarshan television said the troopers were searching homes in Srinagar, the summer capital of the troubled state, for the three assassins who posing as journalists entered the home of the Mirwaiz and murdered him Monday.

It said so far 10 Moslems in Srinagar had been taken in for questioning in connection with the assassination.

"Vital clues have been found in the assassination of the Mirwaiz and the investigative agencies were following them," the Press Trust of India (PTI) quoted a Kashmir government spokesman as saying.

The religious leader, who also headed a political organisation called the Awamy Action Committee, was shot 13 times in the head and body and his gardener says he would recognise the killers if he met them.

PTI said paramilitary troopers were searching almost the entire city of Srinagar, the hub of an angry Moslem campaign for Kashmir's secession, for the gunmen who have been described as young.

A hunt for the killers, on a larger scale, has also been ordered in the Kashmir Valley's 27 other towns and cities where troopers are presently involved in house-to-house searches, PTI said.

Suspected Moslem militants meanwhile hurled a grenade at a security outpost in Srinagar and engaged patrolling troopers in two separate gunbattles Thursday, PTI said, adding that details of the incidents were not known.

Jammu and Kashmir Governor Jagmohan (eds: one name) arrived in New Delhi late Thursday for consultations with Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh, federal sources here said.

Mr. Jagmohan, who has been accused of "unleashing repression" in the state, will also meet Home Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed, a Kashmiri Moslem, to review the region's law and order situation, they added.

At least 600 people have died so far this year in violence linked to the Moslem campaign to protest New Delhi's control of Kashmir, which is disputed between India and Pakistan.

AMMAN (MAY 24) - Three days of anti-Israeli protest that rocked Amman and Palestinian refugee camps nearby in the aftermath of Sunday's killings of Palestinians in Israel were an "emotional reaction" to what goes on in the occupied territories, King Hussein said here Thursday.

Pro-Palestinian demonstrators have clashed since Monday with Jordanian security forces, particularly after public buildings were attacked.

Three people were killed and 29 others wounded in the confrontations, according to an official toll.

Speaking to a group of journalists here King Hussein said the protests should be seen as a "a cry to the world and its conscience of the need to react" to Israel's handling of a two-year-old uprising in the territories.

The incidents that rocked Jordan, he said, were the "emotional reaction of all Jordanians" to Israel's action in the territories.

The protests were triggered by the killings Sunday near Tel Aviv of eight Palestinian workers by a lone Israeli gunman.

King Hussein also blamed unnamed parties of taking advantage of the protests in Jordan to "create incidents" and said that such action clashed with the ambitions of the Palestinian people.

He also praised the Jordanian security forces for showing "maturity and restraint" in dealing with protests and restoring order in the country.

Sources close to the government have charged that certain groups had exploited the protests to destabilise national security and blamed dissident Palestinian factions based in Jordan for fanning the unrest.

LONDON (MAY 24) - The Soviet Union is replacing outdated surface warships in terms of tonnage, at a speed unprecedented in 20 years, Jane's annual report in world navies reported here Sunday.

The replacement rate of submarines also was the highest in 10 years, according to Captain Richard Sharpe of "Jane's Fighting Ships".

"In the context of arms cutbacks and troop withdrawals there has been plenty of encouraging news from the USSR and Eastern Europe", Capt. Sharpe said in an editorial.

"On the maritime side it has been possible for the first time to draw up a deletions table covering major Soviet warships and submarines which have recently been scrapped or are awaiting the breakers yard."

"However, balanced presentation of the state of the Soviet Fleet must include the unpalatable fact that at the same time as these obsolete ships are being paid off the new construction replacement rate is, in terms of tonnage, the highest it has been in over 20 years for surface warships, and the highest in the last decade for submarines".

Moscow is to disarm or scrap 97 submarines of which 17 are nuclear and 80 diesel-powered, as well as three cruisers and 25 frigates, all outdated, within the next two years.

PARIS (MAY 24) - Rioting was reported in the Western African country of Gabon Thursday amid what at times appeared to be a ''civil war atmosphere'', according to reports reaching Paris.

Mobs roamed the streets and set public buildings afire in the capital of Libreville and in Port Gentil.

The French government dispatched troop reinforcements to Gabon to protect its citizens in the West African country after several French were taken hostage by opponents of Gabon President Omar Bongo. Eight French oil workers and a British citizen were abducted Wednesday but released Thursday after negotiations with French army officials.

The kidnapping in Port Gentil came during violent anti-government demonstrations in the town that saw shops and some European houses plundered and fire set to the local presidential residence, French radio reported.

The unrest continued throughout Thursday despite a curfew imposed by Gabonese authorities after the kidnapping. Violence had subsided by evening, although the atmosphere remained tense.

After months of social unrest, the ruling Gabon Democrats announced multi-party elections slated for September in the previously one-party state. Widespread strikes backing demands for political reform have been reported from Gabon since the start of the year.

WASHINGTON (MAY 24) - The United States Thursday asked Romanian President Ion Iliescu to reconsider his opposition to forming an independant commission to probe alleged irregularities in last Sunday's elections, and to the creation of an independant media.

"We urge President Iliescu to reconsider his rejection of these steps which, if taken, would help promote conditions for democracy and reassure the Romanian people and the international community," said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

She said such actions would be "an important test of the Romanian Government's democratic intentions in response to an electoral campaign marked by distortions and irregularities."

Several delegations of foreign observers at the elections advised Mr. Iliescu to allow the creation of an independant electoral commission and a free press.

Wednesday, the Romanian president rejected those suggestions.

Miss Tutwiler also said the United States had not yet determined whether the elections were free and fair and was still studying investigators' reports.

PANAMA CITY (MAY 24) - Panama's U.S.-installed government is a total failure and the country remains under U.S. occupation five months after the invasion that ousted Manuel Antonio Noriega, an opposition leader was quoted as saying Thursday.

Former vice president Gerardo Gonzalez told the newspaper La Estrella de Panama that the elimination of the Panama Defense Forces, which had been commanded by Mr. Noriega, and their replacement with a police force "will perpetuate the U.S. military presence" in Panama indefinitely.

The conservative daily quoted him as saying the government of President Guillermo Endara, which the United States installed shortly after invading Panama December 20, was a "complete disaster."

Under the 1977 Panama Canal treaties, control of the strategic waterway is to go to Panama and U.S. forces are to withdraw from this Central American isthmus in the year 2000.

Mr. Gonzalez said leaving Panama without an army opened the possibility of the United States' trying to renegotiate the treaty so U.S. forces can stay in Panama after 2000 to protect the canal.

GEORGETOWN (MAY 24) - There is rejoicing in the Caribbean over the West Indies Cricket Board of Control (WICBC) decision to lift the ban against six more of the region's cricketers who toured apartheid South Africa.

MOSCOW (MAY 24) - Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov Thursday delivered a report to parliament on the state of the economy, painting a dark picture of the current situation and calling for transition to a market economy.

The country was experiencing a hard currency crisis "which has been worsening over the past few months because of large imports of food products," Mr. Ryzhkov told the joint session of the Supreme Soviet.

Shortages in the shops were getting worse with increasing disruption of the distribution system, he said.

Outlining the conditions necessary for transition to a market economy, the prime minister said that businesses had to be given real independence, prices had to be reformed, competition introduced and the govenment budget balanced.

But the reforms also needed the support of the people, he added.

The government is to ask parliament to call a referendum on the transition to a market economy.

MONTEVIDEO (MAY 24) EFE - Uruguayan workers Thursday began a 24-hour general strike to protest the economic policies of the 3-month-old administration of President Alberto Lacalle.

Public transport workers and taxi drivers in the capital stopped work, the international Carrasco airport was deserted and newspaper presses were silent early Thursday in the first signs of adherence to the stoppage.

The general strike is the first since Lacalle took office March 1, and was called by Uruguay's largest labor union, the Communist-controlled PIT-CNT.

Observers say the walkout will be decisive for the union movement following a humiliatingly poor turnout during two partial stoppages called by the PIT-CNT in March and May.

Workers are calling for a 30 per cent wage hike to keep pace with inflation over the last four months. The government has offered a raise of 15 per cent.

Union leaders said the strike was called to demand "dignified salaries and pensions and more employment, and in defense of state firms threatened with privatization."

The PIT-CNT is also demanding improvements in education, housing and health services, spokesmen said.

Lacalle, of the center-right Nacional or Blanco party, has raised sales and income taxes substantially in a bid to curb Uruguay's burgeoning fiscal deficit.

The new president appealed to the workers for a "truce" while his economic policies were consolidated, but unions claim that their class is the worst-hit by the measures.

Lima (MAY 24) EFE - Peru's two presidential candidates, Mario Vargas

Llosa and Alberto Fujimori, have fallen into dispute over plans to hold a television debate before the June 10 run-off election.

Representatives from Fujimori's independent +Change 90+ movement failed to turn up at a meeting Wednesday to draw a list of topics for the June 3 debate agreed between the two leaders the day before.

A Change 90 spokesman said Tuesday's accord was "only preliminary" and that Fujimori would not participate unless the debate was one of four public confrontations on separate election issues.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Vargas Llosa's center-right FREDEMO coalition said the agreement, signed after several days of negotiation, was undestood to be final.

Next month's run-off poll was called after April 8 elections because no candidate gained the constitutionaly-required 50 per cent plus majority.

BOGOTA (MAY 24) EFE - Three of the main candidates in Colombia's presidential elections have slammed the anti-drug policies of outgoing President Virgilio Barco which have sparked a war with narcotics gangs and led to the deaths of hundreds of people.

With four days to go to the ballot, right-wing candidates Alvaro Gomez Hurtado and Rodrigo Lloredo Caicedo and former leftist rebel group leader Antonio Navarro Wolff criticized the extradition of suspected traffickers to the United States and the government's refusal to hold talks with the drug gangs.

Hurtado, a national conservative, told press Wednesday that if elected he would take up the drug barons' offer to surrender made in January and immediately initiate peace negotiations.

Lloredo Caicedo of the Social Conservative Party criticized Colombia's collusion with the United States in the anti-drug war, charging Washington with +demanding much but giving little+ in return.

Meanwhile, Navarro Wolff, a leader of the leftist M-19 rebel group which disbanded to take part in the poll, said Barco's policies lacked coherency and claimed the outgoing government had, in fact, made things easy for the powerful cocaine traffickers during the first two years of its term.

Only ruling Liberal Party candidate and poll favorite Cesar Gaviria has expressed his willingness to continue Barco's hardline policies, although he too has said he would restrict extraditions.

With some 2,000 people, including three presidential hopefuls, killed over the past 12 months, the need to end Colombia's endemic political and drug-related violence has become the central theme in the election campaign.

The killing of Liberal Party hopeful and anti-drug crusader Luis Galan last August led Barco to launch a crackdown on the Medellin and Cali cocaine cartels and introduce emergency extradition measures.

Since then some 300 people have died in the cartels' retaliatory war while more than 1,000 have been killed by suspected rightist death squads or as a result of the Army's war with leftist guerrilla groups.

Hurtado said Barco's policies had led to an anarchic situation and that the only solution was to take up the Medellin Cartel bosses' surrender offer made January 17, which was rejected by the outgoing administration.

Lloredo Caicedo, a former foreign minister and ambassador to the United States, slammed Washington's emphasis on a military solution within Colombia while virtually ignoring that much of the problem stemmed from the massive demand for cocaine in the United States.

Meanwhile, Navarro said that between 1986 and 1988, Barco's government increased entries of foreign currency into the country via Colombia's central bank, +which amounted to a clear facilitation of money laundering+ for the cartels.

Navarro, who took up the M-19 movement's candidacy for president after his predecessor Carlos Pizarro was killed by gunmen last month, said he opposed extradition and complained that Colombia was bearing the brunt of the drug war.

While the killing of Galan appeared to be the work of Medellin Cartel gunmen, responsibility for the deaths of Pizarro and leftist Patriotic Union candidate Bernardo Jaramillo in February remains less clear and has led to speculation that certain sectors are opposed to a peaceful settlement.

Both Pizarro and Jaramillo had declared themselves open to concessions with the cartels and an end to extraditions of wanted traffickers to the United States.

MADRID (MAY 24) EFE - South African President Frederik de Klerk Thursday urged Europe to review its sanctioned-based policies, given ongoing reforms of the country's apartheid system, as he arrived in Madrid on his nine-nation tour.

+Things are changing in South Africa... there is a new reality and that requires a re-evaluation of the sanctions by European countries,+ de Klerk told reporters.

At the airport he was welcomed by Spanish Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordonez who said he thought it was unlikely that the European Community sanctions would be lifted, but said he was optimistic about future relations with South Africa.

De Klerk arrived in Spain from Switzerland accompanied by his wife.

Later Thursday, he was scheduled to fly on to Rome where he will wind up his 18-day tour aimed at improving South Africa's image in Europe.

During his stay in Madrid de Klerk was to meet with King Juan Carlos and later hold talks with Socialist Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez.

On Wednesday, Gonzalez told reporters that while being firmly opposed to apartheid, +the mere fact that I am receiving him (de Klerk) means I support his efforts+ to end racial segregation.

Although de Klerk has previously visited Spain on a private basis, Thursday's trip was the first by a representative of the South African government in an official capacity.

On Tuesday, some 500 people took part in a demonstration in Madrid to protest the visit.

Speaking in the capital's airport, de Klerk said he had been received with friendliness throughout the tour, adding that he felt that South Africa was being viewed in a new light.

The South African president has visited France, Greece, Portugal, Belgium, Britian, West Germany and Switzerland.

In recent months de Klerk has done away with several anti-apartheid laws and has pledged to bring in more reforms, but many critics have slammed the moves as inadequate.

Chief among his opponents is black South African leader Nelson Mandela, whose release from jail after 27 years imprisonment was ordered by de Klerk in February.

Mandela is scheduled to begin a similar tour shortly during which he is expected to urge Euroepan leaders to keep up the pressure on South Africa.

WASHINGTON (MAY 24) EFE - The anticipated opening of Eastern European markets to foreign investment has had a negative effect on cash-strapped Latin American nations, according to International Monetary Fund Managing Director Michel Camdessus.

In an interview with EFE Wednesday in Washington, Camdessus said recent democratic reforms in Eastern Europe have spelled problems for heavily-indebted countries in Latin America which are seeking foreign investment to overcome their economic crises.

Camdessus said a lack of additional funds available for investment, due to many developed countries' failure to save money over the last few years, would mean that Latin America could stand to lose the foreign investment to Eastern Europe.

However, the IMF head said these changes could serve to push developing nations into doing away with complicated legislation and bureaucracy which puts off many investors and make their countries more attractive to foreign funds.

"This is like a beauty contest between all the world's countries: investment goes to the most attractive," said Camdessus, who is a former president of the Bank of France and the Paris Club, which groups lending governments.

He said the IMF had urged developed countries, including the United States to seek a balance between saving and foreign investments, in both Latin America and Eastern Europe.

During the interview, the IMF director praised the so-called Brady Plan, a debt-reduction project for developing nations drawn up by U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, which has been adopted by Mexico.

Mexico is Latin America's second largest debtor owing some dlrs 100 billion to foreign creditors. Under an agreement signed with creditor banks, creditors may choose to reduce interest or principal on outstanding Mexican debt or offer fresh credits.

"It's impressive to hear, for example, Mexico's Finance Minister say that the debt issue can be put to one side for the next five or six years," he explained.

"It takes time for government to finally convince themselves that there is no better path than this one. If sometimes we (the IMF) seem impatient, it's because we see as each day goes by how the problems become more difficult and opportunities are lost," said Camdessus.

The IMF leader also praised Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez and Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez for adopting "difficult and adverse measures, which they would prefer not to use, when these measures are necessary for the population."

Camdessus praised Mexico for seeking to +increase the possibilities of the country's economic growth through integration in the world's markets+.

"Any kind of agreement with the North, which is its immediate natural market, increases export and trade possibilities," said the IMF head, referring to the possibility of Mexico joining a preferential trade accord signed between the United States and Canada.

"What's good for Mexico could be good for its southern neighbors," he added.

MADRID (MAY 24) EFE - Spain's top tourist official said Thursday that he was studying a plan to convert under-booked holiday hotels into old people's homes, although he denied that the move was prompted by a crisis in the tourist sector.

Ignacio Fuejo, secretary-general of the Spanish Tourist Board, said there had been a 4.7 per cent increase in the number of tourists during the first four months of 1990 compared to the same period last year, and a 2.9 per cent rise in income from tourism.

Fuejo said the plan to convert under-subscribed tourist hotels into old or disabled people's homes was being discussed with the Ministry of Social Affairs, and would require very little investment.

Another idea under discussion by his organization was the creation of health resorts to attract more affluent foreign tourists, whose numbers are declining, admitted Fuejo.

Tourism accounts for some 10 per cent of Spain's GDP and is the country's main foreign exchange earner.

MANAGUA (MAY 24) EFE - Nicaraguan Contra rebels Thursday began a meeting with government officials aimed at rejuvenating a demobilization accord which guerrilla leaders suspended last week.

The talks were to center on rebel demands for improved security guarantees for disbanding rebels, and for land and money to aid their reintegration into society after nine years of war against the former leftist Sandinista government.

Contra military chief Oscar Sovalbarro led the rebel delegation into the meeting with a government team headed by Roberto Ferrey, a close adviser to new President Violeta Chamorro.

Before walking in, Sovalbarro said the suspension of the demobilization process, announced last Friday, would last as long as the Contras considered security guarantees inadequate.

Thursday's meeting was suspended twice this week because rebel leaders were unable to travel to the capital.

Under an agreement reached three weeks ago with the new Chamorro government, the some 14,000 remaining Contra insurgents were to give up their arms by June 10.

Rebel leaders were expected to Friday push for large tracts of land and some dlrs 47 million of a still-undelivered dlrs 300 million U.S. aid package to help resettle their fighters.

Some 30,000 people have been killed since the U.S.-financed and trained Contras took up arms against the Sandinistas in 1981.

Chamorro defeated the Saninistas in February elections and took office April 25.

In Washington, the secretary general of the Organization of American States, Joao Clemente Baena Soares, Friday urged the Contras and the government to step up demobilization efforts.

MADRID (MAY 24) EFE - The Spanish attorney general Thursday acknowledged contradictions in the sentences meted out recently to sex offenders, and said he will take steps to iron out the inconsistencies.

Attorney General Leopoldo Torres said he plans to send a memorandum to all public prosecutors which will clarify recent changes in the Penal Code relating to "sexual freedom."

The disparity in sentences recently handed down by courts is a sign that 15 years after the death of dictator Francisco Franco, Spain still struggles to overcome the ethical values of a departed era.

Until June 21 last year, when penal code reforms finally recognized a woman's right to sexual freedom, the concept still existed in Spanish law of the chaste woman - a woman who would presumably dress in modest attire, stand by the husband who battered her, and fight to the death rather than surrender her honor.

In acknowledgment of her purity, violation of her person would be punished by the full weight of the law.

But to judge from recent sex offense cases, the courts need the attorney general's reminder to banish an image of Spanish womanhood reminiscent of the plays of Federico Garcia Lorca.

Torres' comments on "the right of a woman to do as she wishes with her body" referred to two of several recent controversial sex offense cases which have caused widespread anger and confusion.

In one case, a man was sentenced to over a hundred years in jail for rape

- although he will serve only the maximum term of 30 years - while another had his one-year sentence quashed.

In the same week that the "Railway Station Rapist," Francisco Javier Amado Laviada, of Oviedo in the northern province of Asturias, was sent to jail for 142 years, a court in the Catalonian city of Lerida in northeastern Spain overturned 20-year-old Ernesto Cabrera's one-year jail sentence for rape.

He was absolved on the grounds that his 16-year-old victim had not fought him off physically but had offered only verbal resistence.

On Monday women's groups in Asturias applauded a sentence of 14 years meted out to a man for raping his estranged wife.

The man, Jos Yanes, 25, also from Oviedo, abducted, battered and raped his young wife from whom he had recently separated. The Madrid daily Diario 16 described the sentence in an editorial as "disproportionately harsh."

Meanwhile, a Lerida appeal court Wednesday upheld a fine of 40,000 pesetas imposed on local businessman Jaime Fontanet for the assault on one of his employees, a 17-year-old girl who claimed he had fondled her breasts and buttocks.

The original trial in February 1989 created a media furor which focused less on the actions of the defendent than on the comments of the presiding judge, Rodrigo Pita.

While finding Fontanet guilty, Pita had commented on the victim's miniskirt, saying that "by dressing in this manner, the young girl, albeit innocently, provoked her boss's reaction."

The judge further suggested that as the defendent had eaten and drunk too much at lunchtime, the ensuing incident was simply a "biological reaction."

LIMA (MAY 24) EFE - Some 6,000 prisoners at a jail where 19 inmates are said to have died of starvation rioted Thursday, demanding "food, water, light and medicine" and the speeding up of trials.

The inmates occupied the roofs and set fire to mattresses at Lurigancho Prison in Lima, which was built for 2,500 prisoners. Authorities have not yet intervened.

Tension has been building up at the prison for two weeks as the authorities have failed to responde to the prisoners' demands.

Their main claim is for the judicial system to be speeded up as 70 percent of Peru's prison population - some 25,000 inmates - are still waiting to be sentenced.

In Lima alone there are 19,400 prisoners held in conditions described as "critical", yet only 2 percent have been sentenced and the rest could wait years for their trials.

At Lurigancho, where seven percent of inmates are said to have tubercolosis, a recent report from the National Union of Prison Workers said that 19 inmates had died from hunger.

SAO PAULO (MAY 24) EFE - Thousands of workers at Autolatina, Latin America's biggest car assembly plant, blocked one of the main highways into the Brazilian city of Sao Paulo Thursday after management announced that up to 13,000 workers are shortly to be laid off.

The lay-offs were a result of an unprecedented slump in sales blamed on measures taken by President Fernando Collor de Mello to rein in hyperinflation by clamping a tight lid on the money supply.

A regional president of the left-leaning CUT union federation said 20,000 workers cut road links between Sao Paulo and the industrial suburb of Sao Bernardo do Campo, where the main Autolatina works are located.

The protest was just a sample of what was to come if the lay- offs take place because the workers would seize control of the plants and stay there until their jobs are guaranteed, he added.

A spokesman for the company, which is jointly owned by West Germany's Volkswagen and the U.S. Ford Motor Company, denied that lay-offs were planned but said other drastic cost-cutting measures were needed if the automaker was to ride out the crisis.

PANAMA CITY (MAY 23) XINHUA - RECENT POLL RESULTS BY PANAMA'S CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES HAVE SHOWN POSITIVE SIGNS OF ECONOMIC RECOVERY IN PANAMA FOLLOWING A LONG UNPRECEDENTED CRISIS IN THE HISTORY OF THE COUNTRY.

ACCORDING TO THE POLL RESULTS, IN THE FIRST THREE MONTHS OF THE YEAR THERE WAS A RECOVERY OF 3 PERCENT IN THE SECTORS OF CLOTHING, FOOD, TRANSPORT, MEDICINE, BANK AND INSURANCE, WHILE ONLY 39.5 PERCENT OF THE SECTORS DECLARED A DECREASE, MAINLY IN TOURISM, FINANCES, COMMUNICATION MEDIA, AGRICULTURE AND ANIMAL HUSBANDRY, AND REAL ESTATE.

THE POLL QUESTIONED ABOUT 190 COMPANIES, REPRESENTING 19 PERCENT OF THE AFFILIATED ESTABLISHMENTS, OF WHICH SIGNIFICANT INCREASES ARE FORESEEN IN SERVICES, MEDICINES AND CHEMICAL PRODUCTS.

AS TO INCOME AND EXPENSES, 70.5 PERCENT OF BUSINESSMEN QUESTIONED REGISTERED PROFITS AND ONLY 29.3 PERCENT HAD LOSSES.

ON ITS PART, AN ANALYSIS BY THE MINISTRY OF PLANNING AND ECONOMIC POLICY ESTIMATES THAT, DURING THE FIRST QUARTER OF THE YEAR, CURRENT INCOME TO THE TREASURY OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT ROSE TO 448.6 MILLION DOLLARS, REPRESENTING AN ABSOLUTE INCREASE OF 296.2 MILLION DOLLARS COMPARING WITH THE SAME PERIOD IN 1989.

THE ANALYSIS ATTRIBUTES THIS PROCESS TO THE LIFTING OF ECONOMIC SANCTIONS BY THE UNITED STATES AGAINST PANAMA, TO AN ORDERLY FISCAL SITUATION AND TO A GREATER CONFIDENCE IN THE OPERATION OF THE BANKING SYSTEM.

THE STUDY ALSO POINTS OUT THAT THE REASON OF THIS SLOW RECOVERY OF THE ECONOMY LIES IN THE INCREASE OF EXPORTS OF GOODS AND SERVICES WHICH SHOWED AN INCREASE OF 3 PERCENT WITH REGARD TO THE FIRST QUARTER OF LAST YEAR.

THIS IS MAINLY DUE TO A 2 PERCENT INCREASE OF INCOME FROM PANAMA CANAL TOLLS AND THE TRADING ACTIVITIES IN THE COLON DUTY FREE ZONE, WHERE EXPORTS INCREASED BY ALMOST 20.6 PERCENT.

MEANWHILE, THE CURRENT EXPENSES OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT ARE 163.9 MILLION DOLLARS, WITH A DECREASE OF 18.9 PERCENT COMPARED TO THE SAME PERIOD LAST YEAR, ACCORDING TO OFFICIAL DATA.

UNITED NATIONS (MAY 24) XINHUA - AN ARAB LEAGUE OFFICIAL SAID TODAY THAT THE ARAB STATES DO NOT WANT A PERMANENT U.N. OBSERVER TEAM IN THE ISRAELI-OCCUPIED ARAB TERRITORIES BECAUSE SUCH A PERMANENT TEAM WOULD MEAN ISRAEL'S PERMANENT OCCUPATION THERE.

"WE HOPE THAT THEY WILL BE THERE FOR A VERY SHORT TIME IF WE CAN FORCE THE OCCUPYING POWER (ISRAEL) TO COMPLY WITH THE GENEVA CONVENTION," WHICH CALLS FOR THE PROTECTION OF CIVILIANS IN TIME OF WAR, CLOVIS MAKSOUD, THE LEAGUE'S PERMANENT OBSERVER TO THE UNITED NATIONS, TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE HERE THIS AFTERNOON.

"WE DON'T WANT PERMANENT OBSERVERS BECAUSE PERMANENT OBSERVERS MEAN PERMANENT OCCUPATION," SAID MAKSOUD, WHO CALLED THE PRESS CONFERENCE TO "CLARIFY A COUPLE OF OUR POSITIONS ON THE ISSUE."

HE WAS RESPONDING TO A U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT SPOKESWOMAN'S REMARKS TODAY THAT THE UNITED STATES WILL NEVER AGREE ON A PERMANENT U.N. OBSERVER MISSION IN THE ISRAELI-OCCUPIED WEST BANK AND GAZA STRIP.

SECURITY COUNCIL MEETING FRIDAY ON RECENT ISRAELI KILLING OF PALESTINIANS.

THE ARAB STATES WILL ASK THE SECURITY COUNCIL MEETING TO APPROVE A U.N. OBSERVER TEAM IN THE OCCUPIED TERRITORIES FOLLOWING THE MASSIVE KILLING OF DEMONSTRATING PALESTINIANS BY THE ISRAELI ARMED FORCES IN THE WEST BANK AND GAZA STRIP SINCE SUNDAY.

Preventing Teen Pregnancy / Tourette's Syndrome: Will paying teenagers not to get pregnant reduce teen pregnancies? Dr. John Grant reports positive results in Denver, Colorado, where the number of second pregnancies of 15-year-olds was cut by half through implementing a plan where the girls were paid a dollar a day for not becoming pregnant, having monthly meetings and available counseling. He proposes to put a similar plan into effect in Caroline County, Maryland, using county funds. In this case, however, the plan will be open to all teenage girls 15 to 19, and they will be required to attend school. Douglas Besharov feels such a plan sends the wrong moral message to teenagers, that it is telling them government support is the only reason not to get pregnant, and that it is necessary to reach children earlier with information regarding sexual responsibility, morality, and sexually transmitted diseases. Mr. King's second pair of guests this evening are Bruce Ochsman and Jodi Meringoff. They explain how they are affected by Tourette's syndrome, an unusual genetic neurological disorder producing a variety of uncontrollable symptoms generally described as physical and vocal ticks. The physical ticks take the form of violent twitches, uncontrollable utterings and jerky movements. The vocal ticks include coughing, screeching, throat-clearing and nasal sounds, along with verbal ticks-- inappropriate exclamations including swear words and obscene language. Tourette's syndrome is now said to affect 100,000 Americans. (Transcript #49)

TOKYO (MAY 24) KYODO - THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY (MITI) THURSDAY ISSUED A SET OF OFFICIAL NOTICES TO LOCAL GOVERNMENTS AND PRIVATE COMMERCIAL ORGANIZATIONS, PRONOUNCING A SUBSTANTIAL RELAXATION OF THE LAW THAT RESTRICTS THE OPENING OF LARGE-SIZED RETAIL STORES, MITI OFFICIALS SAID.

THE NEW ADMINISTRATIVE GUIDELINES STATE THAT THE COORDINATION PROCESSING PERIOD FOR OPENING LARGE STORES BE SHORTENED TO WITHIN 18 MONTHS.

THE NOTICES ARE THE FIRST MAJOR EMBODIMENT OF THE VARIOUS PROMISES JAPAN MADE IN AN INTERIM REPORT PUBLISHED IN APRIL AT THE END OF THE SO-CALLED STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII) TALKS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

THEY ARE AIMED AT CUTTING DOWN THE ADMINISTRATIVE LOGJAM IN IMPLEMENTATION OF THE LARGE-SCALE RETAIL STORE LAW THAT HAS SOMETIMES CAUSED A 10-YEAR DELAY IN THE OPENING OF SUCH RETAIL STORES.

THEY ALSO MAKE COORDINATION WITH LOCAL SMALL-STORE OWNERS UNNECESSARY FOR AN INCREASE OF UP TO 100 SQUARE METERS IN FLOOR SPACE IF THE INCREASED PART IS USED EXCLUSIVELY FOR SALES OF IMPORTED GOODS.

COORDINATION PROCEDURES ARE ALSO EXEMPTED FOR A FLOOR SPACE INCREASE OF UP TO 10 PERCENT OF THE EXISTING FLOOR SPACE OR 50 SQUARE METERS, WHICHEVER IS SMALLER.

ANOTHER MAJOR IMPROVEMENT IN THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW IS A VIRTUAL SCRAPPING OF THE RESTRICTIONS NOW IMPOSED ON OPENING LARGE STORES IN SMALL TOWNS OR VILLAGES, OR AREAS WHERE THERE ALREADY IS A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER OF LARGE STORES IN OPERATION.

THE NOTICES WILL BE EFFECTIVE AS OF MAY 30, MITI OFFICIALS SAID.

HONG KONG (MAY 24) KYODO - THE VALUE OF HONG KONG'S DOMESTIC EXPORTS FOR APRIL DECLINED 6.1 PERCENT FROM THE SAME MONTH LAST YEAR, THE GOVERNMENT'S CENSUS AND STATISTICS DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCED THURSDAY.

THE TOTAL VALUE OF EXPORTS FOR APRIL WAS 16,407 MILLION HONG KONG DOLLARS (2,103.5 MILLION U.S. DOLLARS), SOME 1,073 MILLION HONG KONG DOLLARS LESS THAN IN APRIL 1989. DOMESTIC EXPORTS EQUAL TOTAL EXPORTS MINUS REEXPORTS.

HOWEVER, REEXPORTS FOR APRIL SHOWED SIGNIFICANT GROWTH, INCREASING BY 2,785 MILLION DOLLARS, OR 9.9 PERCENT, OVER THE SAME MONTH LAST YEAR TO REACH 30,860 MILLION DOLLARS, THE DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCED.

THE VALUE OF IMPORTS ROSE 5.7 PERCENT, OR 2,721 MILLION DOLLARS, OVER APRIL 1989 TO 50,640 MILLION DOLLARS.

HONG KONG'S VISIBLE TRADE DEFICIT FOR APRIL WAS 3,373 MILLION DOLLARS, UP BY 1,009 MILLION DOLLARS ON THE SAME MONTH LAST YEAR.

THE GROWTH IN REEXPORTS, MAINLY OF CHINESE ORIGIN, WAS PART OF A CONTINUING PROPORTIONATE SHIFT FROM DOMESTIC EXPORTS TO REEXPORTS IN HONG KONG TRADE, SAID A GOVERNMENT SECRETARIAT SPOKESMAN THURSDAY.

RELATIVELY HIGH INFLATION AND A TIGHT LABOR MARKET ARE HAMPERING HONG KONG'S DOMESTIC EXPORT PERFORMANCE, LEADING TO GREATER DEPENDENCE ON CHINESE REEXPORTS, ANALYSTS SAY.

HONG KONG'S CONSUMER PRICE INDEX, PUBLISHED THURSDAY, SHOWED THAT THE ANNUAL INFLATION RATE HAD EASED SLIGHTLY BUT STILL REMAINED HIGH.

WAGE HIKES AND INCREASED TAXES ON CONSUMER ITEMS CONTRIBUTED TO THE CONTINUED HIGH RATE OF INFLATION, WHICH IS UNLIKELY TO FALL WITHOUT STRICTER CONTROLS ON IMPORTED LABOR, ANALYSTS SAID.

THE COMPANY SAID PARENT COMPANY-ONLY SALES TOTALED 303.76 BILLION YEN, A 1.5 PERCENT RISE FROM THE PREVIOUS YEAR.

THE COMPANY SAID THE SETBACK MAINLY RESULTED FROM A 13.5 PERCENT DECLINE IN SALES OF SEMICONDUCTOR PARTS AMID DIMINISHING U.S. DEMAND.

AS FOR THE CURRENT BUSINESS YEAR TO MARCH 31, 1991, THE COMPANY PREDICTED THAT PRETAX PROFIT WILL GROW 15.9 PERCENT TO 62.3 BILLION YEN ON SALES OF 342 BILLION YEN, UP 12.6 PERCENT. NET PROFIT IS ESTIMATED AT 30.80 BILLION YEN.

TOKYO (MAY 24) KYODO - MITSUI AND CO. HAS AGREED WITH WEST GERMANY'S MERCEDES-BENZ TO PROVIDE FULL SALES PROMOTION SUPPORT TO ITS JAPANESE SUBSIDIARY, THE JAPANESE TRADING FIRM SAID THURSDAY.

UNDER THE AGREEMENT, MITSUI WILL HELP MERCEDES-BENZ JAPAN CO. BUY LAND IN HITACHI, IBARAKI PREFECTURE, AND IN TOYOHASHI, AICHI PREFECTURE, FOR CONSTRUCTION OF MAINTENANCE PLANTS, BUILD AND OPERATE THEM AND OFFER CUSTOMS-BROKER AND DELIVERY SERVICES FOR CARS, THE SOURCES SAID.

ANALYSTS INTERPRETED THE MITSUI MOVE AS AIMED AT OFFSETTING THE EFECTS OF A RECENT WIDE-RANGING AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE MITSUBISHI AND DAIMLER-BENZ GROUPS.

THE ANALYSTS ALSO SAID THE MITSUI-MERCEDES-BENZ JAPAN AGREEMENT IS AN INDICATION OF DAIMLER-BENZ'S POLICY OF DEVELOPING ITS JAPAN STRATEGY WITHOUT REGARD TO ITS COOPERATION AGREEMENT WITH THE MITSUBISHI GROUP.

COMMENTING ON ITS AGREEMENT WITH MERCEDES-BENZ JAPAN, MITSUI SAID TALKS ON THE PRESENT ACCORD HAVE BEEN UNDER WAY SINCE BEFORE THE MITSUBISHI-DAIMLER-BENZ AGREEMENT.

MITSUBISHI CORP. SAID IT HEARD THAT THE ACCORD CALLS FOR NO COOPERATION IN SALES OR FUNDS. THE AGREEMENT WOULD NOT THEREFORE DISRUPT THE ACCORD BETWEEN THE MITSUBISHI AND DAIMLER-BENZ GROUPS.

YANASE AND CO. WAS FORMERLY THE EXCLUSIVE IMPORTER AND DISTRIBUTOR OF MERCEDES-BENZ CARS. HOWEVER, OVER THE PAST TWO YEARS, MERCEDES-BENZ JAPAN INCREASED SALES OUTLETS, SUCCEEDING IN INCREASING CAR SALES TO 31,000 VEHICLES IN 1989.

THE COMPANY AIMS TO INCREASE SALES TO 50,000 VEHICLES FOR THE PRESENT. TO ACHIEVE THE TARGET, IT IS BEEFING UP CUSTOMER SERVICES, CENTERED ON MAINTENANCE, ANALYSTS SAID.

SINGAPORE (MAY 24) KYODO - JAPAN'S APOLOGY TO SOUTH KOREA IS NOT ENOUGH, TWO LEADING JAPAN WATCHERS IN SINGAPORE SAID THURSDAY.

THE HEAD OF THE JAPANESE STUDIES DEPARTMENT AT THE NATIONAL UNIVERSITY OF SINGAPORE, ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR SEAH CHEE MEOW, SAID THE APOLOGIES REPRESENT ''AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF SOME FORM OF MISDEED.''

BUT SEAH SAID THERE IS ''NO DOUBT THAT APOLOGIES ALONE WOULD NOT REMOVE THE MISTRUST, FEAR OR THE PAIN WHICH THE KOREANS DID SUFFER.''

ON THURSDAY, JAPAN'S EMPEROR AKIHITO AND PRIME MINISTER TOSHIKI KAIFU FORMALLY APOLOGIZED FOR JAPAN'S COLONIZATION OF KOREA IN THE YEARS BETWEEN 1910 AND 1945 ON THE FIRST DAY OF SOUTH KOREAN PRESIDENT ROH TAE WOO'S VISIT TO JAPAN.

COMMENTING ON AKIHITO'S APOLOGY, WONG PING FAH, AN EDITORIAL WRITER FOR SINGAPORE'S LEADING CHINESE-LANGUAGE NEWSPAPER, LIAN HE ZAO BAO, SAID IT WAS DISAPPOINTING THAT THE EMPEROR DID NOT OPENLY ADMIT JAPAN'S RESPONSIBILITY FOR ITS PAST AGGRESSION TOWARD KOREA.

''I DON'T THINK THIS WILL SATISFY ANYBODY,'' WONG SAID. ''THIS MAKES IT WORSE. MAYBE JAPAN IS TRYING TO AVOID ADMITTING ITS RESPONSIBILITY.''

WONG ALSO SAID THE APOLOGIES WILL NOT CHANGE SUSPICIONS FELT BY ASIANS TOWARD JAPAN.

ROH'S THREE-DAY VISIT TO JAPAN WAS THE TOP NEWS ITEM REPORTED ON BOTH RADIO AND TELEVISION BY THE STATE-OWNED SINGAPORE BROADCASTING CORP.

IT REPORTED ROH IS IN JAPAN TO ESTABLISH A NEW RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES AND THAT THE EMPEROR WAS EXPECTED TO MAKE A FORMAL APOLOGY FOR JAPAN'S COLONIAL RULE OF KOREA AT A BANQUET ON THURSDAY NIGHT.

IN HIS SPEECH, PREMIER KAIFU APOLOGIZED FOR JAPAN'S COLONIZATION OF KOREA ONLY AND DID NOT MENTION JAPAN'S OCCUPATION OF SOUTHEAST ASIA DURING WORLD WAR II AS PREVIOUSLY EXPECTED.

SEAH SAID JAPAN'S OCCUPATION OF SOUTHEAST ASIA WAS EXCLUDED IN THE APOLOGY MAINLY BECAUSE ROH'S VISIT WAS A BILATERAL MATTER BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES.

IN ADDITION, SEAH SAID IT IS DIFFICULT TO PHRASE APOLOGIES THAT COULD FULLY SATISFY ANOTHER COUNTRY.

TOKYO (MAY 24) KYODO - OFFICIAL REACTION FROM FOUR JAPANESE OPPOSITION PARTIES TO EMPEROR AKIHITO'S SPEECH ON JAPAN'S PAST COLONIZATION OF KOREA INDICATES THE PARTIES EXPECT SOUTH KOREA TO UNDERSTAND JAPAN'S REGRET FOR THE COLONIZATION.

EMPEROR AKIHITO EXPRESSED ''DEEPEST REGRET'' FOR THE ''UNFORTUNATE PERIOD'' IN A SPEECH AT A BANQUET FOR SOUTH KOREAN PRESIDENT ROH TAE WOO AT THE IMPERIAL PALACE ON THURSDAY.

''I THINK OF THE SUFFERING YOUR PEOPLE UNDERWENT DURING THIS UNFORTUNATE PERIOD, WHICH WAS BROUGHT ABOUT BY MY COUNTRY, AND CANNOT BUT FEEL THE DEEPEST REGRET,'' THE EMPEROR SAID.

THE JAPAN SOCIALIST PARTY SAID IT CONSIDERED THAT EMPEROR AKIHITO, SPEAKING AS A SYMBOL OF THE JAPANESE PEOPLE IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE CONSTITUTION, HAD GIVEN ''A FRANK EXPRESSION'' OF APOLOGY TO THE KOREANS

IN HIS SPEECH.

THE KOMEITO SAID EMPEROR AKIHITO'S REMARK WAS APPROPRIATE, GIVEN HIS STATUS AS STIPULATED IN THE CONSTITUTION.

THE DEMOCRATIC SOCIALIST PARTY AND THE UNITED SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY ALSO SAID THEY EXPECTED THE SOUTH KOREAN PEOPLE TO UNDERSTAND THE DEEP REGRET OF JAPAN AND THE JAPANESE PEOPLE OVER THE COLONIZATION OF KOREA BETWEEN 1910 AND 1945 FOLLOWING THE EMPEROR'S REMARKS.

THE JAPAN COMMUNIST PARTY (JCP), HOWEVER, ACCUSED THE JAPANESE GOVERNMENT OF PERMITTING THE EMPEROR TO MAKE A POLITICAL REMARK IN CONNECTION WITH HIS APOLOGY TO THE SOUTH KOREAN PEOPLE OVER THE COLONIZATION.

THE JSP, IN ITS ASSESSMENT OF PRIME MINISTER TOSHIKI KAIFU'S REMARKS TO ROH, SAID KAIFU'S REFERENCE TO JAPAN'S COLONIZATION OF KOREA HAD BEEN ''GOOD.''

THE JSP SAID KAIFU MADE A ''FRANK'' APOLOGY TO ASIAN AND SOUTH KOREAN PEOPLE FOR JAPAN'S AGGRESSION TOWARD ASIA DURING WORLD WAR II AND ITS COLONIZATION OF KOREA.

KAIFU EXPRESSED HIS APOLOGY OVER THE JAPANESE COLONIZATION OF KOREA DURING THE FIRST ROUND OF TALKS WITH SOUTH KOREAN PRESIDENT ROH TAE WOO.

FROM THE BULLS:

"I think they've thrown everything at it, including the kitchen sink," says KIDDER PEABODY's DENNIS JARRETT regarding the market's resilience to the past several days of trading. "We know it's overbought; we know it's due for some good profit-taking, but it's been notable by how resilient it has been in holding together. Certainly there have been a lot of programs the past couple of days, but when they recede the sellers still are not to be found and I think that speaks well of the next month or two for the market." Mr. Jarrett says the Dow could go as high a 3400. (FNN's "Marketwrap", 1 5/23)

SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON's CHARLES LEWIS says the slew of poor economic figures will "trigger a rate break" and "a momentous rally in the stock market" will follow. "I'm not talking of the 30 industrials. We're talking about the 1,900 issues of trade on the NYSE and the AMEX and NASDAQ, and we're going to get that three-hundred-million- share day sooner or later." He continues, "We're in the throes of a summer rally, and it's going to go on and on and on." Mr. Lewis also notes the improvement in the advance/decline line by comparing it to Unbridled's bid at the Kentucky Derby. "It was dead last and came in first." (CNBC's "Business View", 5/23)
